Marin Schools Behind Capital's, Says Congressman

Rep. Clement W. Miller (D-Corte Madera) touched off a spirited debate on federal aid to education at a House hearing in Washington yesterday and said his children were six to eight months behind in their studies after switching from Marin to District of Columbia schools.

The freshman congressman cited his youngsters as examples of the problems faced by local communities in trying to keep pace in a fast growing area of California.

Miller said that although Marin County has good schools, his school-age children found themselves far behind their classmates when they transferred to schools in the nation's capital.

"I am rather surprised to hear this, without in the least disputing Mr. Miller's statement," Supt. Carl Tivel of Larkspur School District said today.

The Miller children attended Corte Madera's Neil Cummins School in the Larkspur district.

Tivel said pupils of the Larkspur district have done well in achievement tests, placing beyond the national norms for such tests. He claimed they are "among those at the top in achievement in Marin County and California."

"Our expenditure per pupil, however, is one of the lowest in Marin County," Tivel noted. "In view of this, I think our teachers have done a wonderful job."

He said the situation faced by the Miller children is "something that could happen between any two districts anywhere" and takes into account a number of factors, including the influx of pupils and the amount of money a district has to spend.

BACKS SUBSIDY

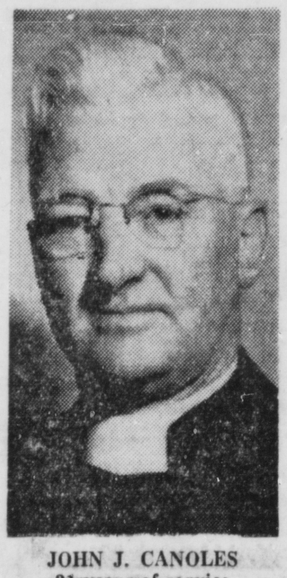

At his appearance yesterday before the House General Education Subcommittee, Miller testified in support of a Democratic-sponsored four-year, $11,500,000,000 school assistance program. The Democratic program calls for bolstering teachers' salaries in addition to contributing to school construction.

Miller termed "useless" a 25-year two-billion-dollar Administration proposal providing for helping school districts pay off new bonds for classroom construction, but including no salary aid provision.

The Marin congressman was sharply criticized by Republican Rep. Carroll D. Kearns of Pennsylvania, who snapped, "You're a youngster around here and you've got a lot to learn. What you are advocating would simply help the socialists to get a foot in the door"

Miller said he realized "I have a lot to learn, and I hope to do so."

Tivel said today he is "thoroughly in accord" with Miller on his advocacy of the Murray-Metcalf bill, the Democratic-sponsored federal aid measure.

JOHN J. CANOLES
31 years of service

Dr. Canoles To Retire From Pulpit

Dr. John Jefferson Canoles, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael for 31 years, last night revealed to his congregation that he plans to retire on June 30.

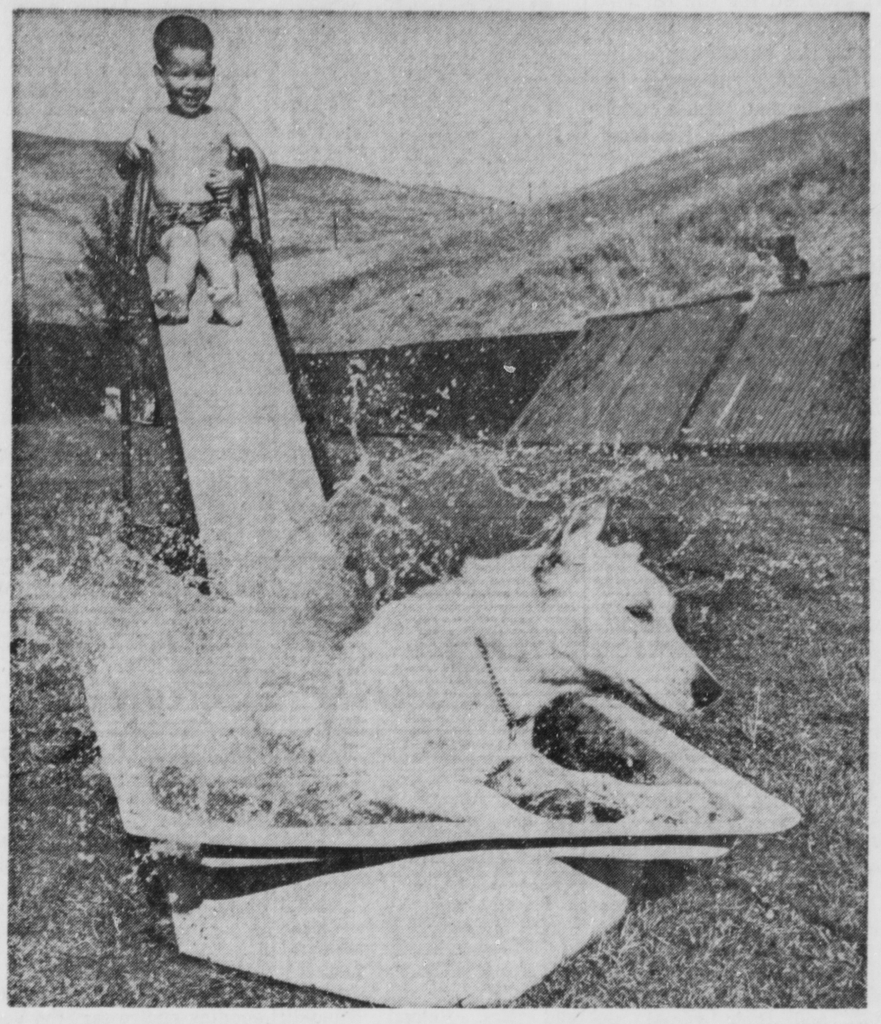

Dr. Canoles was unable to attend last night's annual meeting of the congregation because of illness but his message was conveyed by Dr. Gurdon Oxtoby, dean of the faculty of San Francisco Theological Seminary and a member of the Presbytery of the Redwoods which will be called upon to select a successor to Dr. Canoles.

The 65-year-old pastor said his decision to resign was made on the advice of his physician. He has been absent from the pulpit of the San Rafael church since before Christmas with the exception of one Sunday last month.

Dr. Canoles sent word to the congregation, which has increased from 200 to 900 members during his pastorate, that he "deeply appreciates San Rafael and the wonderful people who live in this community." He sent the hope that the "members of the church will stay together, work together and go forward together in a spirit of unity and common concern."

Dr. Canoles was born in Baltimore, Md., attended the Uni-

Khrushchev May Meet With Satellite Leaders

LEIPZIG, East Germany (UPI) —Premier Nikita Khrushchev has summoned satellite leaders to a council of war to discuss means of forcing the western allies out of Berlin, it was reported today.

The Soviet chief headed today for Berlin, where he is expected to confer Sunday or Monday with Communist leaders Wladyslaw Gomulka of Poland, Antonin Novotny of Czechoslovakia, and Walter Ulbricht of East Germany.

Although reports of the meeting have not been confirmed officially, East German Premier Otto Grotewohl said last night it is "very likely."

In addition to the Berlin crisis, the four men are expected to discuss the prospects for an East-West foreign ministers' conference and a possible separate peace between Russia and East Germany.

Russia has asked that Poland, Czechoslovakia and East Germany be represented at any future East-West meeting.

13 Hurt In Auto Accidents On Highways In Marin Last Night

Seven-year-old Lonnie Darrell Gillmore of San Rafael was in "fair" condition at Marin General Hospital today with head injuries and fractures of the right leg and jaw suffered last evening when a pickup truck hit the bicycle he was riding.

The youngster, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ray Gillmore of 35 Clorinda avenue, was one of 13 persons injured in auto accidents throughout the county last night.

Police said the pickup, driven by Benjamin L. Peterson, 53, of Lagunitas, was westbound on San Rafael avenue when it hit the bike at Lodge lane. Peterson, who was not cited, told officers he failed to see the boy enter the intersection from the south. The mishap occurred about 5:30 p.m.

The youngster was thrown to the pavement as the front wheel of the bicycle was dragged under the truck and crushed.

Given emergency treatment at San Rafael General Hospital, the child was transferred to Marin General Hospital, where he underwent surgery.

Mrs. Frances Mary Leoni, 44-year-old Bolinas housewife, suffered a fractured pelvis in a 3:50 p.m. traffic collision yesterday on Shoreline highway, near Ross drive in Tamalpais Valley.

Her nine-year-old son, Daniel, suffered a cut of his upper lip. Both were taken to Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Francisco.

At 6 p.m. yesterday Kentfield contractor Norman Valentino Petersen, 33, of 53 Laurel Grove avenue, suffered cuts and bruises of his legs and his four-year-old son Norman Jr. suffered minor cuts and bruises of his face when their pickup truck collided with a car.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Madrzejewski of 31 Roosevelt avenue, San Rafael, were given emergency treatment at Marin General Hospital at 9:56 p.m. yesterday after being involved in a rear-end auto collision. Madrzejewski suffered bruises of his back and his wife complained of pain in her neck and shoulder.

In an accident at 11:20 p.m. yesterday, a pickup truck driven by Stanley Lee Mix, 20-year-old Navy seaman, of 11 Grove avenue, Corte Madera, turned left into the Eat and Run Drive-in on College avenue in Kentfield in the path of a car driven by George Haeker Peterson, 32, a Fresno telephone supervisor.

Injured in the resulting collision were Peterson's wife, Hope, 31, his daughter, Pamela, 10, and son, Geoffrey, 15 months. All three were released after emergency treatment at Marin General Hospital.

Three persons were injured in an accident at 2:45 a.m. today on Highway 101 near Larkspur's Lucky drive.

James William Swan Jr., 27, of 1046 Fifth street, Novato, was treated at Marin General Hospital for head cuts and his passenger, Thomas M. Frish-

Bandits Confess Marin Robberies, Hub Burglaries

Four major crimes, three of them committed in Marin County, were solved yesterday with the arrests of two men on charges of armed robbery and burglary, Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos reported today.

Mountanos said the suspects, Leo Anthony Wiest Jr., 20, of 67 Olive avenue, San Anselmo, and Ramon Virgil Balliett, 21, of Santa Rosa, have admitted the 1958 armed robberies of the Kentfield Pharmacy and the Toot and Tote Market at Santa Rosa. A third man still is being sought.

Wiest also confessed to a pair of 1957 burglaries in San Anselmo, the sheriff said. The first, committed Oct. 23 of that year, involved theft of a .357 caliber magnum revolver from a car parked opposite the Tamalpais Theater. The second burglary took place two months later when $54 was stolen from the Model Market on Saunders avenue.

Sheriff's Inspector William Bradley and Deputy Sheriff A. V. Menjou said Wiest was arrested last month on charges of possession and use of marijuana. He was released on bail pending trial of the case.

CIGARETTE CLUE

The two officers, who have been working most of the week on the long-unsolved robberies and burglaries, said a single marijuana cigarette was found concealed in Balliett's car when the suspect was arrested while en route to work in Sonoma.

Balliett at first denied participating in any of the crimes with Wiest. But after several hours of questioning at Marin County Jail he finally admitted driving a getaway car used in the Kentfield Pharmacy holdup, Bradley said.

Balliett then confessed that his home in Santa Rosa was the rendezvous point where Wiest met him after holding up the Toot and Tote Market in that city, the officers reported. Bradley said the suspect told of waiting at home while Wiest and a third man, not identified, committed the crime.

SPLIT CASH

About half of the more than $800 taken from the market consisted of checks, all of which were torn up and flushed down a toilet, Bradley quoted Balliett. The remaining cash was divided among the three men.

The officers said Balliett told of taking half the $173 in currency taken by Wiest in the pharmacy robbery.

Bradley and Menjou worked with Sonoma County sheriff's officers and Petaluma police in apprehending Balliett as he drove to work. The officers had had the suspect under surveillance for hours. They also recovered a .357 magnum revolver, believed to be the one stolen by Wiest in the 1957 car burglary.

Bradley said he and Menjou arrested Wiest at his San Anselmo home, acting on a tip from a source they decline to reveal.

Wiest is an apprentice painter and Balliett a laborer. Both are parolees from the California Youth Authority. Balliett's bail has been set at $5,000, while Wiest's has not been fixed as yet. Sonoma County has placed "holds" on both men on charges of armed robbery.

Supervisors Lean Toward Endorsement

McCarthy Urges Support For Gate Authority

Marin's supervisors leaned toward endorsement of the proposed Golden Gate Authority yesterday afternoon, but they decided to put off their decision until they had heard from Golden Gate Bridge directors.

They set a special meeting next Monday at 9 a.m. to hear Marin's bridge directors and to come to a decision on endorsement or opposition to a measure which would create the authority.

Yesterday Marin Senator John F. McCarthy, who introduced the legislation to create the authority, appeared before the supervisors to explain the measures provisions and answer questions.

Yesterday too, the bridge board voted to oppose the bill, SB 576, insofar as it pertained to inclusion of the Golden Gate Bridge in the authority.

As explained by McCarthy, the authority would take over operation of all bridges of the bay eventually, although some of them would not come under its control until certain bond requirements had been met. This would take about three years, he said.

OTHERS SUCCESSFUL

The authority would immediately start negotiations for taking over the area's airports and seaports as well, the senator said. Purpose of the authority would be to bring about an all-inclusive management of the Bay Area's transportation facilities so that they could be operated with maximum efficiency and without duplication of effort.

He pointed out, for example, that authorities in other areas like New York, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Seattle and others, had been successful in increasing both sea traffic and air traffic in their areas, besides building other facilities.

McCarthy called the authority good for the whole Bay Area as well as for Marin. He pointed out it would have no taxing power except that which will reside with it from the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District's inclusion. This would expire when the bridge bonds are paid off in 1971.

LOOK TO FUTURE

It would make possible, McCarthy went on, things which Marin will eventually need, things like an airport, a second crossing to San Francisco and expanded highway facilities. "We need to look way into the future," he declared.

Supervisor William Fusselman, while saying he favored the idea in general, was "opposed to including the Golden Gate Bridge." He said the proposed authority board of directors would have only two votes out of 12 from north of the bay. On the bridge board, he pointed out, seven of the 14

Daughter To Contest Father's Will

BATAVIA, N.Y. (AP) — A daughter of the late millionaire Donald Woodward, heir to the Jello Co. fortune, filed a formal objection today to his will.

The objection, filed in surrogate's court, stated that Mrs. Suzanne Woodward Austin, of Larkspur, Calif., believed that her father "was not mentally competent when he signed his will 10 days before his death, and that fraud and undue influence were involved."

(Efforts by the Independent-Journal to locate anyone by the name of Suzanne Woodward Austin in Marin County were unsuccessful today.)

Woodward died Jan. 10, at his home in Le Roy, N.Y., 10 days after signing a handwritten will of 30 words leaving his entire estate to his wife, Mrs. Adelaide Foley Woodward.

The amount of the estate has not been disclosed.

At Mrs. Austin's request, the two witnesses to the signing of the will appeared yesterday, before Surrogate Philip J. Weiss. The witnesses are Harold J. Foley of Le Roy, brother of Woodward's widow, and Mrs. Marion Brew, a domestic in the Woodward home.

Both testified that Woodward was of sound mind when he signed the will.

Marin Pair Discover Lost Mission

"We think we've found the lost mission of Santa Isabel," said Donald Darling, 31-year-old chef of the Red Robin Catering Service in Kentfield, who returned yesterday from an expedition to Baja California with his wife, Edith, and two other companions.

They found a low adobe wall beneath a cross-shaped rock in the mountains 25 miles north of Loretto, on the Gulf of California.

The adverturers don't want to give the exact location because they plan another trip to the site. The party of four consisted of the Darlings; Lawrence Craig, 24-year-old San Francisco chef, said Keith Pope, 35, publications editor for Aerojet Corp. in Sacramento.

Dick, who has been with the publications for 16 years, was sent here from Washington, D.C. He and Mrs. Pollard have been living in Belvedere for the past four years. They love it so much there, they are not selling their home and hope that some day they'll return. The house is being rented by the widely known Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gros (Nancy Majors) whose marriage was a society event of a few months ago.

Beauty Tips from ME to YOU BY Walter

Learn the art of retouching—just like photographers can retouch pictures you can learn to do the same to yourself . . . There are now pencils available in skin tones to touch up those flaws that need a little covering-up.

For instance . . . shadows beneath the eyes are brightened by lightly stroking the pencil over the area—this also helps to intensify the eyes, as well expressioned lines or cracks disappear when pencil is lightly used and dusted with a little powder—red blotches, broken veins and other blemishes are blurred when dotted with the pencil and the edges smoothed out . . .

The introduction offer of our new Teen Perm in our Budget Corner was such a success we offer it again. Soft, loose, easy to manage. So little curl you won't believe it's a permanent. Regularly 12.50. One more week only 8.50

Duncan Like Yo-Yo Between Wife, Mother

VENTURA (AP) — Frank Duncan blew his top, he says, when he learned his mother once planned to carry him away from his bride by force.

"It was such a stupid thing," Duncan testified at his mother's murder trial. "It sounded something like a grammar school child might think of."

The handsome young attorney, appearing in Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan's behalf, said he went "back and forth like a yo-yo" between her and his wife.

Mrs. Duncan, 54, who admits to 11 marriages, is accused of hiring two men to kill the daughter-in-law. The prosecution contends jealousy was the motive. Olga Duncan, 30-year-old Canadian nurse, was beaten and strangled on a desolate mountain road last Nov. 18.

Duncan will return to the witness stand when the trial reconvenes Monday. The case is expected to go to the jury of eight women and four men about mid-week.

Yesterday's developments in the drama-packed courtroom included:

Mrs. Duncan's hot declaration that Dist. Atty. Roy Gustafson was lying when he accused her of hiring Olga's killers.

A statement by Duncan that his mother was hysterical when he returned home to her after his wedding.

Mrs. Duncan's firm denial that she plotted Olga's death—"I never desired Olga killed," she cried. "I didn't want harm to come to anyone."

Civil Liberty Group Hears Clergyman

"Unless man believes in his own reasonableness, he becomes part of the great crimes which have degraded his own nature," said the keynote speaker last night at the opening session of a conference sponsored by the Marin chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Rev. Harry Scholefield, minister of the First Unitarian Church in San Francisco, addressed 80 persons last night at the Marin Country Day School on Paradise drive in Corte Madera. The conference was to continue until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Modern man is in danger of shifting the burden of thought from himself to computers, said Reverend Scholefield, but there is a difference between computation and cogitation. He noted that even pessimistic Freud said that the "voice of intellect is soft, but does not rest until it has gained a hearing."

Drake Meat Department Responds

Owners of the meat department at the Drake Market in San Anselmo declared today that they do not plan to keep the department open evenings and Sundays.

"At the present time," said Gino Gizzi and Bill Henderson, "we have no intention of staying open nights or Sundays."

The two men, who operate the department as a rented concession, issued the statement in response to a story in yesterday's Independent-Journal. It indicated the meat department would shift soon to a late-hour schedule.

AUTHORITY

directors are from the north area.

In addition, Fusselman feared continued tolls on the Gate span. "The Bay Bridge could have been toll free years ago if they hadn't used its funds to build other bridges," he declared. "We were promised a toll free bridge. If we go into the authority, we will always have tolls."

Mrs. Vera Schultz did not agree with Fusselman. "Marin is dependent on the rest of the Bay Area," she said, "we are part of it. We have substantiation that the authority plan has delivered advantages in other areas. We know that to remain static on transportation is to go backwards. We must be able to act as a community."

Finally Mrs. Schultz moved that the Marin board endorse the legislation and work for its passage. Walter Castro seconded the motion.

NO VOTE RECORDED

But James Marshall and William Gnoss expressed a desire to hear what the bridge directors had to say. The motion was not put to a vote, although Gnoss said he favored the bill at present.

"The bridge directors didn't even have the courtesy to ask me my opinion or reasons for them before they came out against it," McCarthy noted ruefully. "If you ever heard the terminology bureaucrats, those boys are it."

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Nab Blonde Bandit

LAS VEGAS, (UPI)—A beautiful, well-dressed but hard-talking "champagne blonde" was held today on charges she robbed the First National Bank of Nevada of almost $2,000.

Police and FBI agents arrested her at a road block shortly after the robbery yesterday. She shrieked epithets at the officers when they took her off a Reno-bound bus about 45 miles north of this desert gambling center.

"She's really a beautiful girl," a policeman described her, "but hard as nails."

The girl identified herself as Ida Belle Ingram, of Roanoke, Va. FBI agents said she had worked at both the First National Bank of Alexandria, Va., and the Union Trust Co., of Washington, D.C.

She flew here from Washington Thursday and apparently was broke when she staged the holdup, federal agents said.

Tax Warning

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—New taxes would hamper the economic growth and development of California, warns State Sen. Nelson S. Dilworth (R-Hemet).

The Southern California legislator made the comment yesterday in criticizing certain aspects of Gov. Edmund G. Brown's proposed tax program.

Speaking before the Central Coast Council of the State Chamber of Commerce, Dilworth said spending the 226 million dollars in special funds would be better than raising taxes.

Actor Stone Succumbs

NORTH HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fred Stone, 85, musical comedy star who played in such stage hits as "Wizard of Oz," "The Red Mill" and "Jack O'Lantern," died yesterday after a two-year illness. He played those shows teamed with David Montgomery as the song-and-dance act, Montgomery and Stone. He had been totally blind since a heart attack two years ago.

Sen. Guffey Dies

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former Sen. Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania, a Democratic stalwart during the New Deal era, died Friday night of a heart ailment at the age of 88.

Guffey, a power in Pennsylvania politics for decades, had lived in Washington since losing his Senate seat in the 1946 Republican landslide.

Kennedy Deal Bared

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Robert Kennedy, chief counsel of the Senate Labor-Management Committee, says some elements of both management and labor offered him political support for his brother, Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.), in exchange for laying off parties summoned by the committee.

Sen. Kennedy is regarded as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Robert Kennedy told a news conference Friday "the most serious attempt came from management" but added he also had a serious offer from labor. He declined to name names and said no money was offered.

Death Penalty Upheld

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assemblyman Charles J. Conrad (R-Sherman Oaks) today declared the men on the firing line of law enforcement almost unanimously agree that the death penalty is a deterrent to crime.

He said he would fight legislation to abolish capital punishment.

Lutherans May Merge

CHICAGO, (UPI)—The Joint Commission on Lutheran Unity, representing four denominations, has accepted an invitation to meet with three other Lutheran churches planning merger.

The JCLU, representing the American Evangelical Lutheran Church, the Augustana Evangelical Church, the Finnish Evangelical Church and the United Lutheran Church, said yesterday it will meet with the three bodies merging into the American Lutheran Church in 1960.

Midwest Digs Out

By UP INTERNATIONAL

The Midwest began to dig out today from a late winter snowstorm which crippled traffic, isolated communities, crushed roofs and caused the deaths of at least 26 persons.

The sneak storm swept down suddenly on the upper Midwest, pounding parts of Michigan with blizzard force and walloping Iowa and Wisconsin with new snowfalls up to 20 inches.

The Midwest got the worst of it, but elsewhere, wind, rain and thunderstorms lashed New England, creating traffic problems in Vermont and Maine and flood threats in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Who's Neurotic?

LOS ANGELES (AP)—If you're not worried in times like these, you're neurotic, says Dr. Rollo May, a New York psychologist.

Here to lecture at the University of California at Los Angeles, Dr. May said the goal of psychology is to help people to be anxious about the right things.

He listed as justified anxieties of the age problems such as whether man will survive, how he can learn to know himself and how he can learn to love.

Among wrong things to worry about, Dr. May listed how to make a million dollars.

Others Besides Us Favor Retention Of Cross Filing

We have often spoken out in favor of cross filing after we backed the successful drive to place party designation of all candidates on the ballot.

For this we have been criticized by such organizations as the League of Women Voters and by strong "party responsibility" advocates in the Democratic Party.

To show that we are not alone in our desire to keep the final say in the hands of the voters, not the parties, here are some quotes from other Northern California papers on the same subject:

Sacramento Bee — Primary elections should be open to all persons who want to seek public office. . . . If a Democrat believes a Republican who has cross-filed is the best man for the job, or visa versa, he should have the opportunity to vote for the candidate of his choice.

Woodland Democrat—Nowhere have the people as much to say in their state government as they do in California. Let's keep it that way. . . . If well meaning Governor Brown would abandon his efforts to taboo cross filing, he would be in a stronger position to put over his commendable proposals to compel an honest, realistic accounting of all campaign contributions and expenditures.

Colusa Sun-Herald—There is yet to be heard one sound reason for discontinuing a system which has been so scandal-proof and democratic in effect since it was established by Gov. Hiram Johnson back in 1914.

Santa Rosa Press-Democrat—Once a man is elected to office, it is individual responsibility, not party responsibility, which the voters expect.

Lindsay Gazette — Legislative representation at Sacramento can best be obtained through men chosen for their capabilities, and not because of party label. The latter presupposes certain party control of votes and acts.

The measure to abandon cross filing has passed the Assembly and is now before the Senate. We hope it dies there.

Happy Birthday 4,132 Times

Tomorrow marks the opening of Girl Scout Week, seven days devoted to the activity of two and a half million girls and three quarters of a million adult leaders throughout the United States.

In Marin we have 3,203 girls registered in 252 troops. Helping them are 929 volunteer men and women.

That makes 4,132 Marinites who are taking an active part in this useful and effective activity.

Thursday is the 47th birthday of the Girl Scout movement. We'd like to say "Happy Birthday and Well Done" 4,132 times.

THREE MINUTES A DAY

By JAMES KELLER

DO MORE THAN TALK

The chairlady of a woman's club recently made this sweeping statement to her small group: "Now that we've taken care of the Far East, let's take up the Near East!"

It is common failing to think that the complex crises of modern life can be solved merely by talking about them. If such problems could be solved by words alone, we would have had global peace long ago.

To avoid the danger of being long on words and short on "doing," encourage the fellow members of any organizations to which you belong to spend 30 minutes of performance for every 5 minutes of talk. As St. John said:

"Let us not love in word, nor in tongue but in deed and in truth." (John 3:18)

See that your meetings get beyond the talking stage. Help to put into concrete application the principles for which your organizations stand.

God will bless you if you put your ideals to work in a specific way instead of sitting on the sidelines indulging in wishful thinking or repeatng high-sounding principles.

Let me be a "doer" of Your word, O Lord, not merely a "talker."

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Radio Man Ponders Entering Political Field In School Race

By CHAPIN A. DAY

We may have a radio man doing a little politics before long.

The story is that if a couple of other well qualified candidates don't file pretty soon, Bill Thompson, well known KTIM announcer, may jump into the race for the San Rafael school district's board of trustees.

Can't think of anyone offhand who we'd rather see take a crack at it.

ANOTHER SCHOOL candidate, Tom McDougall of Mill Valley, perennial Tamalpais Union High School District candidate, has been in Sacramento trying to interest the legislators in passing a law.

He's not quite sure how it should be worded, but the idea is that a school district should not have the right to hold three elections in one year, McDougall told the solons. There ought to be a law.

He opposed the Tam district tax boost which passed on the third try.

So far he hasn't gotten much encouragement—and no bill has been introduced to carry out his idea.

ANOTHER MARINITE who has paid a visit to the Capitol is long-time Democrat Sam Gardiner.

He's interested in the proposed establishment of a third municipal court in Marin. Hopes it passes.

The post would originally be filled by an appointment by Gov. Edmund G. Brown. Gardiner was Brown's campaign manager in this area.

SPEAKING OF the governor, at a press conference this week he was trying to explain his current stand on movement of bills to effectuate his water program.

First to move will probably be a bill to freeze the "water fund" (he dubbed it that; its name is the State Investment Fund) so that this many million dollars could be used for nothing but the water program.

Meantime, he went on, he wants to keep all other negotiations fluid so they can be worked together.

"You mean," asked a reporter, "you want to freeze the water but still keep it fluid?"

"That's the idea," smiled the governor.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Songs Beautiful, Director Flaying

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

I take this opportunity of expressing my genuine gratitude, appreciation and complete enjoyment of the outstanding concert given in Angelico auditorium last evening by the University of Southern California. I have been a teacher of voice for over 30 years in several schools of music in colleges and universities in the East and Mid-West, doing extensive glee club and choral conducting.

I think I have, in my experience, never heard more beautiful singing than was done by this excellent organization from University of Southern Cal. The beauty and delicacy of their pianissimo passages were thrilling, and while this is always a goal strived for, seldom is realized to the degree attained last evening by this fine organization.

Furthermore, it was a real pleasure to hear beautiful tone even in the full voice range, without 'yelling' as was experienced recently by another group appearing in this same auditorium . . .

On the other hand, one wonders just why such a thoroughly trained group, it seemed necessary for the director to indulge in such gyratory movement of arms, body and even the stomp of a foot on one occasion. I have always been an advocate of hiding directors. Such flaying of arms et cetera, certainly adds nothing to the effect but is most annoying to the listener. Frankly, I personally enjoyed it all best when I closed my eyes. . . .

South Seas Hears Progress Report

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

The other morning, I got a most pleasant surprise, when my good wife walked into my study and laid a white jumbo envelope on my desk, saying at the same time, "I think this contains a copy of the Independent-Journal." And sure enough, on opening the envelope, I discovered that it held a copy of the 38th PROGRESS REPORT of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, as published by the Independent-Journal!

How the old home town has grown! Old Buildings have made way for new ones and parking lots. Commercial and industrial progress everywhere. New residents by the thousands. Pretty homes in tracts and subdivisions which were cow pastures when I was a boy! A $150,000 addition to the San Rafael Library in which, as a boy, I pored over the books of the voyages of the early navigators and dreamed of the time when I, too, would sail below the horizons to the sunlit isles of tropical adventure in the vast Southern Sea! Progress, progress, progress everywhere. What a reporto f progress!

I read it all through the morning. While I was pleased to read of the new San Rafael, I yet regretted the passing of the old home town. That town had served me well; it had been a springboard for me, to spring into a new life beyond the confines of San Rafael. Whether I shall ever return to the town is more than I can say at this moment. But to keep fresh in my mind all my old memories of it, there hangs on my study wall a framed photograph of the western end of San Rafael, with Mount Tamalpais dominating the scene; and Reservoir shore of San Pablo Bay . . . Were I to return to the old hometown, I fear, I would feel an utter stranger, with so many of the people I once knew now gone to where no search of mine would ever find them in the town!

Minister Can't Treat Illness

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

Why do people try to separate themselves into segments? Our mind is not an isolated independent mass — it functions together with our body as a whole. Is a person any less spiritual because he needed to have treatment for his broken leg? Why should there be any question as to whether or not a person is spiritual because he happens to be mentally ill?

Spirituality is a part of religion, and religion has to do with faith, courage and things to do with the heart as well as the mind. It takes faith to believe in one's self as well as others and courage to know one's limitations.

Some of us need treatment for mental illness and certainly many of us can and do have faith in those who are working to find answers to the cause, and better methods of treatment.

A minister can't treat the mentally ill, unless he happens to be a psychiatrist also, but many help to recognize the problem when it exists.

Dig The Picture Now, Gonnella?

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

This is in answer to Monday's letter from a Frank Gonnella.

Man, where've you been, Gonnella? Don't you know that the "mistaken old ways" of a clergyman, concerned about God and a conscience just don't belong on a Short-Doyle committee, nohow? The mental health master-plan has "put him aside."

Anybody really interested in this deal should have read about Dr. Brock Chisholm's philosophy, or heard it on radio and TV by now. The world famous psychiatrist, Dr. Chisholm, is known as one of the "chief architects" of the entire mental health program.

If they're proud of him, they don't say much about it, somehow!

Life Magazine did, though, Feb. 16, in this editorial: ". . . Dr. Brock Chisholm, the eminent Canadian psychiatrist, declared in the atomic age it is wrong to teach children to believe in Santa Claus on the ground that they will refuse to 'think realistically' when they grow up. As W. H. Auden put it, 'I find such people . . . so unsympathetic and peculiar that I do not know how to argue with them'" . . . P. 47 — Life.

Do you dig the picture now, Mr. Gonnella? A Short-Doyle committee is hardly the place for an old-fashioned man-of-the-cloth! This is the atomic age, man!!

From Missouri: ROOM CLERK: We serve breakfast here from 6 to 11, lunch from 11 to 4, and dinner from 4 to 10.

FARMER: Golly, when am I gonna find time to see the sights?

From Michigan State: FIRST DELEGATE: Let's poll the delegation. SECOND DELEGATE: Okay, I'll get the pole.

From Harvard (honest!): FROSH: Your girl friend is spoiled, isn't she? SOPH: Not at all. It's just the perfume she's wearing.

From U. of Connecticut: "How'd you puncture that tire?" "Ran over a milk bottle." "Didn't you see it?"

"Naw. The kid had it under his coat."

Professor Joe E. Lewis believes his new girl has early American features. She looks like a buffalo.

Recorder Takes Dim View Of Turning His Office Into Marriage Chapel

There's a movement afoot to change the state marriage laws so that county recorders, along with judges and priests, would be able to perform marriage ceremonies.

They're already referring to Marin's recorder as Father Noel Giacomini. Can you imagine Recorder Giacomini halting all business several times a day as he unties couples who are anxious to say "I do?"

The County Recorders Assn. of California proposed the various changes to strengthen the marriage laws. Giacomini is in favor of many of the proposals, but he doesn't relish getting the opportunity to make a "chapel" out of his already crowded office.

MANY A CARRYOVER from ex-Assessor George Hall's days are performing smoothly under new Assessor Bert Broemmel. But one appraiser who never showed up for work under Broemmel was Harold Payton. He quit this month after being on sick leave since Hall's regime.

As we get it, Broemmel inquired several times about Payton's reporting for work. After remaining silent for two months, Payton turned in his resignation, without even trying to show his ability as an appraiser under the new assessor.

Payton is probably more well known as an oldtime fireman who attended many a fire convention throughout the state.

TALK OF THE TOWN is the Kelly-Chiesa battle for San Rafael chief of police. Those in the know are already putting bets on one or the other.

Some rumors still hint that Chiesa is being offered the deputy chief's post if he would pull out of the race. But it appears Chiesa is already committed all the way.

What's this we hear about former Sheriff Walter Sellmer trying to serve as arbiter?

When Chief Kelly first took over as chief in 1943, he had a 12-man force. Among the 12 was Chiesa. Now there are 28 officers on the staff including two women. When Chiesa quit the force to run against his boss, several observers made this comment: "Too bad. Because no matter who wins, San Rafael will lose a good officer."

SPEAKING OF officers, a sheriff's deputy is quitting after two and one-half years to join the El Cerrito police. Reason: He now gets $415 after 2½ years. Top pay is $458. El Cerrito starts him at $412 now, promises $427 in a few months, with a maximum of $505.

NEXT TIME you're kicked out of the Marin General maternity ward like I was, don't feel so bad. They've got a good reason for allowing only two visitors in the afternoon and two in the evening.

It's to guard against staphylococci, which is easier said than eradicated once it infects. I tried to give the Pink Ladies and nurses a bad time, but they politely straightened me out.

A NEW SUBSTATION and a new sergeant for Novato soon?

That's the latest rumor. Boy, that new sheriff isn't wasting time.

They tell me Ed Levine might be one of the deputies to be sent north.

ONLY COST $24 MILLION

Pity Poor Senators In The New Building

By FRANK ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The privations being undergone by our senators in the new office building we taxpayers have just finished for them are painful to behold.

Their cries of anguish as they move into their five-room suites, each with three washrooms, raise a question whether we skimped too much. The building cost only $24,446,000 with an extra million for furniture.

If this was a mistake, we won't make it again. A new office building for House members, now getting started, will set us back $65,000,000.

SEN. NORRIS COTTON (R-N.H.), one of eight senators who have taken up quarters in the new sanctum, told the story in some of its harrowing detail today in a newsletter to his homefolks.

Cotton thinks maybe the error was in spending too much, not too little. He says the senate needed the new building, but . . .

"The building contains offices for 42 (of the 98) senators and their staffs, for 12 committees and their employes, for the busy capitol telephone exchange, for a cafeteria and a basement garage — all essentials," says Cotton. "However, it includes a 500-seat auditorium, a gymnasium, and (imagine it!) a sundeck on the roof."

COTTON PROBABLY hadn't seen the sundeck when he wrote this. It comprises a red tile floor measuring 35 by 35 feet, plus two shower stalls and a john. There is no provision at all for the one lady senator, Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

Cotton says the building is poorly planned and reminds him of a schoolboy's definition of a camel — a sort of a horse, put together by a committee.

"The conduits for telephones and electric wires are so placed that Houdini himself could hardly squirm in and out from behind the desks," the Senator complains. "My own desk is so close to the wall that I am almost sitting on the window sill.

(Standard practice was followed in laying the conduits, the architects say. The alternative was to run loose wires across the floors.)

"IN COMMITTEE we no longer sit informally around a table and chat chummily with the witnesses. We are elevated on a circular dais behind a massive, paneled bulwark . . . so high that . . . when pictures are taken nothing is visible but the tops of our heads."

(Sen. Warren Magnuson (D-Wash.) has solved this. He sits on a pillow.)

"The microphones (are) so defective that they wail like banshees . . .

"THE ELEVATORS are automatic, and when you press a button, you never know which direction you are going or where you'll wind up, if somebody else beats you to the punch."

Cotton's last point is the sorest of all among many senators. They are accustomed to ring three times and go straight to their floors. The electronic brain on each new elevator works fine but so far can't distinguish between senators and people. Possible remedies are being studied.

New Religious Body Symbol Of Drive For Christian Unity

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

America's newest major religious body symbolizes, in its name and history, the powerful drive for Christian unity that is gradually breaking down the ancient barriers of Protestant denominationalism.

Its name is the United Church of Christ. It was formed June 25, 1957, by the merger of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

When the merger is completed, the United Church will have a membership of about 2,100,000, and will be the nation's seventh largest Protestant body.

Although many congregations have begun using the new name, no local church is legally affiliated with the United Church of Christ at present. It will exist only in spirit and on paper until a constitution, now being drafted, is completed and approved.

Some local Congregationalist churches have served notice they will not affiliate with the United Church. They have formed the National Assn. of Congregational Christian Churches. This organization reports a membership of 171 local churches, of a total of 5,544 Congregational Christian Churches in the nation.

Four of the dissident Congregational churches and 10 individuals have filed a suit in the federal district court of New York challenging the legality of the merger. An earlier legal test in New York state courts resulted in a clear-cut victory for the pro-merger forces.

Despite these birth pains, the United Church is already regarded by students of church history as a tremendously significant milestone in the ecumenical movement which seeks to draw together the divided Christian family.

Unlike other church mergers of recent years which have united Methodists with Methodists, Presbyterians with Presbyterians and Lutherans with Lutherans, the United Church represents the confluence of two entirely distinct streams of Protestant Christianity.

Congregationalism, which came to America aboard the Mayflower in 1620, is an offshoot of the English Reformation. The Puritans felt that the ecclesiastical hierarchy of the Church of England was stifling true Christian faith, so they established in New England a new kind of church in which each local congregation was completely free to manage its own affairs. This emphasis on congregational autonomy remains until this day a distinctive feature of Congregationalist churches.

The Evangelical and Reformed Church is a product of the continental Reformation led by John Calvin and Martin Luther. It came to America with the first German and Dutch immigrants to Pennsylvania. Like other churches of the Calvinist tradition, it has a representative system of government (called the Presbyterian polity) in which regional bodies called synods administer many church affairs.

Working out a compromise between these different ecclesiastical structures is the main problem confronting the constitution drafters of the United Church.

There are no major doctrinal issues to be resolved, because both denominations eschew official creeds and leave the individual believer free to work out his own understanding of the Bible within the basic context of faith in Jesus Christ as divine lord and savior.

Worship customs vary widely in both denominations with each congregation free to make its own rules.

The tradition of stark simplicity, inherited from the Puritans, is still found in many Congregationalist churches. The service is built around hymns, scripture reading and the sermon, with the latter the dominant feature. But as in other Protestant denominations, there has been a strong movement in recent years toward a more formal or "liturgical" worship.

Some Evangelical and Reformed Churches are "high" in their liturgy, with ministers wearing vestments and communion served at the altar rail. Others are "low," with ministers in business suits and Communion served in the pews.

Both denominations bring to their union a strong emphasis on well-trained clergy and on higher education in general. Congregationalist fathers founded Harvard "to protect us from an illiterate ministry," and their church has been busy starting colleges ever since—Yale, Dartmouth, Oberlin and Grinnell, to name but a few. The E and R Church, although much smaller in size, has operated eight colleges of its own.

Another common theme of their separate histories is the belief that the church should never withdraw from the world, but should act boldly to bring Christian convictions to bear on social and political problems.

The United Church seems determined to uphold this tradition. It has already set up—as its first working agency—a council for Christian social action.

'NO LASTING EFFECT'

Prof Discounts Impact Of Mass Evangelism

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Will the current era of mass evangelism, personified by globe-trotting Billy Graham, have a lasting effect on American religious and cultural life?

"No," says William G. McLoughlin Jr., an assistant professor of history and American civilization at Brown University here and a longtime student of revivalism, in a book "Modern Revivalism" published this week.

The book reviews the religious awakenings and revivals of the last 135 years, assuming that modern revivalism began about 1825 with Charles G. Finney, and it is more than mildly critical of the phenomenon.

The surprising things about big religious revivals in America, says McLoughlin, is that they occur so infrequently and "have produced so few tangible or lasting results."

In the last 225 years, Mc Loughlin finds only four major "great awakenings" or religious revivals. The current one, he thinks, began about 1945 and will run possibly to 1970.

Contrary to popular belief, "there is no meaningful correlation," McLoughlin says "between the great national awakenings in America and the great periods of political or economic crisis."

Unitarians Here To Vote On Merger

A vote on whether the Unitarian Church of Marin favors a merger of the American Unitarian Assn. with the Universalist Church of America will be on the agenda of the Marin church's fifth anniversary meeting March 15 in the Marin Jewish Community Center, San Rafael.

Also on the agenda will be election of directors, adoption of a budget and discussion of building plans (the church recently acquired a building site near the proposed Marin civic center).

Rev. Samuel A. Wright Jr., pastor, noted that a decision on construction is becoming "urgent" now the church has grown from an initial membership of 93 to more than 350 today.

Regarding the merger vote, Rev. Wright said that since 1896 the American Unitarian Assn. and the Universalist Church of America have conducted mutual activities, and several years ago formed the National Council of Liberal Churches, which coordinates the religious education program of the two denominations.

"Both Unitarian and Universalist Churches are founded on the principle of individual freedom of religious belief," Rev. Wright said.

"However, the two denominations have different historical traditions and on a national level are organized differently."

Lenten Series At Nazarene Church

Dr. D. Shelby Corlett will be the speaker for a Lenten evangelism series at the San Anselmo Church of the Nazarene tomorrow through March 15.

U.S. Churches In Big Charity Plea Tomorrow

Dollar Buys Bargain For Worldwide Relief Agencies

By U.P. International

The biggest bargain available to Americans this weekend will be offered tomorrow morning in thousands of Protestant and Roman Catholic churches.

It's a bargain in charity. Each dollar you contribute will buy at least $10 worth of food, clothing, medicine and other help for needy families abroad.

This is the Sunday on which all Catholic churches and many Protestant denominations conduct their simultaneous annual appeals for support of religious relief agencies which are extending aid to some 50 million persons in 60 countries.

PROTESTANT APPEAL

The Protestant appeal is called "One Great Hour of Sharing." Its proceeds support the work of Church World Service, a cooperative agency representing 35 major denominations.

Catholics will be asked to give to the "Bishop's Relief Fund" which supports the operations of Catholic relief services.

The third major religious relief agency—The United Jewish Appeal—began its annual drive for funds some time ago, but will still be accepting contributions this weekend.

Performing a traditional church function on a global scale, the religious relief agencies have become the main channel for "person to person" American aid to the hungry and homeless of other lands.

FOOD, CLOTHING

This year they are distributing about 1,500,000,000 pounds of food, more than 25 million pounds of clothing, thousands of shipments of vaccines, vitamins and other medical supplies.

They are providing toys, books, and other supplies for countless orphanages, teachers and training materials for vocational schools, resettlement help for refugees. They are operating health clinics, digging wells and conducting demonstrations in modern farming and canning methods.

The most impressive aspect of the religious relief program is that so much is accomplished with so little. The funds available for overseas relief, through all three major faiths, total about 35 million dollars a year.

WOULD COST MORE

But the services rendered by these agencies would cost at least 350 million dollars if they were valued on a straight commercial basis.

The explanation is simple: Most of the work is carried out by volunteers — missionaries, priests, native church leaders, teachers and others who accept no salaries from the relief agencies.

Another factor that makes this charity bargain possible is the availability of surplus foods from U. S. Agriculture Department warehouses. Foods which are in very heavy surplus and which are not needed for domestic relief and welfare programs, are given to the religious agencies free.

Moslems To Build Mosque In Norway

OSLO (AP) — The Mohammedan Mission to Scandinavia has announced plans to construct the first mosque in the Scandinavian countries. It will be built in Oslo.

Kamal Yousuf of Pakistan, an Ahmadiyya Moslem missionary to Norway, Sweden and Denmark, told interviewers that in two years of activity he has made seven converts in Sweden and one in Norway.

HANLEY'S REPORT

Giants Embark On Exhibition Slate

By JACK HANLEY
I-J Correspondent

PHOENIX, Ariz. — A daily routine of batting and fielding practice finally reaches the monotonous stage just like an uninterrupted day-in-and-out diet of the same dish can dull the appetite.

Long ago someone put it very succinctly with that truism: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Today the Giants started playing. The Cactus Baseball League season opened. The Giants were on the road for the opener as they will be next month for the National League opener in St. Louis April 10.

Today's road trip will be a short 120-mile bus hop from Phoenix to Tucson. The opposition at the other end of the line was Cleveland of the American League. The Indians are training in Tucson.

In all proper and due courtesy, Cleveland will have the pleasure of the bus ride Sunday when the Indians visit the Giants for a return game at Phoenix Municipal Stadium.

WHILE THE Giants and Indians are playing their opening two-game series, two other Cactus League clubs—the Boston Red Sox and Chicago Cubs—meet in a pair of games, the first at the Cubs' Mesa training camp, the second at the Sox' headquarters in Scottsdale.

From here on in to the National and American League openers next month, the four teams will play daily exhibition games, except for three open Monday dates, March 9, 16, 23. In all, the Giants have 29 exhibition games scheduled, 12 with Cleveland, 10 with Chicago and seven with Boston.

Five of the Giant-Indian games will be on the road early next month at Salt Lake, Denver, Topeka, Des Moines and Omaha while both teams are flying east for their regular league openers.

"OPENING OF the Cactus League this year has been perfectly timed," said Coach Salty Parker who did all of the training camp ground work until Manager Bill Rigney could take over. "The exhibition games are just what the doctor would order. We've been working hard now for two weeks—three for some of the boys who reported early—and any more of the same routine might dull their edge."

Rigney, incidentally, is rounding into good shape himself. The initial self-consciousness he felt about his wired jaw and missing front teeth, jarred loose in his automobile accident several weeks ago, no longer is present. He has discontinued the habit of holding his hand in front of his mouth while talking.

While giving the entire Giant squad and coaches their signals for the season the other day, he leaned on a bat with his right hand, using his left for appropriate gestures. The signal meeting was held in center field of Phoenix Municipal Stadium to prevent any eavesdropping. And Rigney kept his back to the stands to forestall any visual signal-stealing.

TOMMY O'BRIEN, a retired New York chemical firm executive and Giant fan since 1907 when he first saw Christy Mathewson pitch, made a classic observation of the scene in center field where Giant ball players were grouped three-deep in a semi-circle around Rigney.

"Look at him out there," said O'Brien, who hasn't missed a Giant training camp in a dozen years. "He looks like a symphony conductor, gesturing first to this side and then the other."

And from a distance of 300 feet that is exactly what Rigney resembled. Bet it's the first time he's ever been called that.

Maggi's Stays On Top In S.R. Men's Cage League Race

Maggi's Florists defeated Cerutti Brothers, 50-43, to strengthen their hold on first place in the "B" Division of the San Rafael Recreation and Parks Department Men's Basketball League Thursday night.

George Vaio led the Maggi attack with 22 points on seven field goals and eight free throws. He was followed by Bob Arbini with 14 markers.

Jerry Davis was high man for Cerutti's with 13 points.

In the other games the Independents, with Bill Gildehaus scoring nine points, defeated Ghilotti Brothers, 39-33. Ed Rudloff and Bill Keeler each scored 13 points for Ghilotti's.

The Seminary, behind the 28-point output of Mike Anderson, defeated Gerhardts, 68-57. Jim Bell meshed 18 points to help the winning effort. Walt Osburg and Al Baldwin scored 17 and 16 points, respectively, for Gerhardts.

Going into the last week of play, the league standings are:

Maggis 6-1, Independents 5-2, Seminary 4-3, Cerutti 4-4, Gerhardts 2-6 and Ghilottis 1-6.

Safe Boating, Seamanship Course To Start Monday

Public Instruction Course in Safe Boating and Elementary Seamanship will start at 8 p.m. Monday at the Little Theater of San Rafael High School and will continue every Monday night for eight sessions, concluding on April 27.

The course is presented by San Rafael's Flotilla 14 of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, a non-military organization composed of voluntary yachtsmen. Its primary purpose is to assist the Coast Guard in promoting safety on the water.

According to Harry Heifitz, commander of Flotilla 14, the course is designed to educate the boating public in proper handling of their craft. Such topics as rules of the road, piloting, buoyage system, equipment required by federal law, a nautical vocabulary and a few seaman-like knots will be featured in the course

Instructor will be Perley B. (Sandy) Sancome, who is serving his second term as training officer for the flotilla. He will be assisted by James Levensaler, Charles Boynton and Carl Andenburg.

Examinations will be held during the course and a certificate of Basic Seamanship will be presented by the Coast Guard to those who qualify. There is no charge for the course, but the lesson pamphlets cost 75 cents.

Cal Clinches Title As UCLA Nips Huskies

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

California had the battle won today without firing a shot.

The Bears backed into their third straight Pacific Coast Conference basketball crown when UCLA knocked Washington out of any chance of victory with a 56-55 win last night.

Cal (13-2) meets Oregon State (7-8) tonight at Berkeley, but the pressure will be off since the Bruin victory over the Huskies left the Washingtonians with an 11-4 mark. Washington has only a contest with Southern California tonight left on the docket.

SELECT CIRCLE

The Bears joined a select circle in notching their third consecutive title. Cal won four straight titles in the mid-1920s, and Stanford, with peerless Hank Luisetti at the helm, took three straight from 1936-38. Other than that, nobody has even been able to win two consecutive titles in the past 35 years.

This third crown must be especially satisfying to coach Pete Newell, since this year's team seemed hard hit by the graduation of last year's stars, Earl Robinson and Don McIntyre, and was therefore picked to go nowhere this season. Washington was the heavy favorite.

HUSKIES DIE HARD

And indeed, Washington died hard. The Huskies led the Bruins 29-22 at half-time last night, which in itself is quite an achievement, inasmuch as the game was played in the tiny UCLA gym.

But the Bruins closed the gap and went ahead 44-42 when the Bruin's sharp-shooting ace, Walt Torrence, hooped a long one.

Torrence meshed 18 to win scoring honors, and just about iced the league scoring title, while the flashy Husky pair of Bruno Boin and Doug Smart scored 16 and 15, respectively.

STANFORD THIRD

The battle for third spot in the loop ended in a tie with UCLA and Stanford earning 10-6 records. Stanford stayed even with the Bruins by dumping Oregon State 70-54 last night.

It was Stanford's 15th straight home court win. The Cards' fine guard, Paul Neumann, closed out his career with a 21-point performance, but had to share the spotlight with Dick Haga, who tallied 25. Jim Woodland had 18 for the Beavers.

Tam Indians Win Baseball Opener

Centerfielder John Cleveland clouted a two-run homer in the second inning to provide all the scoring the Tamalpais Indians needed to open their 1959 baseball season on a winning note yesterday as they downed the Lowell Indians of San Francisco, 2-0, at Tam's diamond.

Cleveland's homer came with catcher Bill Buffalow on base via a single. Other Indians who hit safely were outfielder Dave Broome with a triple and shortstop Paul Turncranz with a solo.

Three Tam pitchers took turns on the mound and blanking the visitors. They were Ron Cole, Charley Fisher and Ron Slack, each of whom gave up one hit.

Big 10 Okays Continuation Of Rose Bowl

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Big Ten has cleared its decks for continuing in the Rose Bowl football game.

By a majority vote believed to be 6-4 or 7-3 the conference, which has won 12 of the last 13 Pasadena New Year's Day classics, flashed the green light for continuation beyond the 1960 game.

The exploratory ballot was taken by faculty representatives and athletic directors in their annual spring meeting yesterday. The matter now must go before each Big Ten faculty council for certification and then be voted on officially in the conference's meetings at the University of Michigan, May 21-23.

The vote of sentiment makes way for the Association of Western Universities, successor to the Pacific Coast Conference and the Tournament of Roses Committee, to issue a formal Rose Bowl invitation. It is believed this has not yet been done because the Big Ten first had to clear the air on how it stood.

"We presume that the AWU and Tournament of Roses stand ready to negotiate a new Rose Bowl contract," said Asst. Big Ten Commissioner Bill Reed.

The PCC served notice on the Big Ten last August that its indefinite term Rose Bowl contract would expire because the PCC dissolves officially this June 1. The 1960 game will be played under a contractual trusteeship of the PCC.

The AWU consists of Southern California, Washington, UCLA and California.

Ross Captures Redwood Tourney

Ross defeated Neil-Cummins School, 18-16, yesterday to win the Redwood Recreation Department's Elementary School Basketball Tournament with an undefeated record in four games.

The week-long tournament, which attracted a total of 2,000 spectators, saw Kentfield place second with a 3-1 record, after beating Reed, 20-14, in yesterday's other game. Larkspur-Corte Madera, the other school in the tournament, was idle yesterday.

Ross received a championship trophy and each player

Redl, Jordan Draw; Big Rhubarb Over Referee

NEW YORK (AP) — A fight that didn't have much significance stirred up a mild rhubarb today. Stefan Redl, a stocky 5-5 welterweight from Passaic, N.J., and unbeaten Eddie Jordan, a skinny 5-10 newcomer from Brooklyn, battled to a draw in a television 10-rounder at Madison Square Garden last night. Jordan rallied strongly to gain the tie.

The verdict made Redl and his manager, Carl Duva, howling mad. It made Jordan happy.

Duva was so burned up after the decision was announced that he tore across the ring, hollering with every step:

"Where's the commissioner? What kind of a decision is that?"

Somewhat calmed down later, Duva said he planned to protest to the commission Monday but not over the decision.

"I'm going to protest the handling of the fight by Referee Al Berl," he said. "I'm not going to protest the decision, although Redl won decisively. Every time the referee broke them he threw Redl across the ring."

Berl, who had warned both fighters several times to stop holding, left quickly after the fight and couldn't be reached for comment.

He voted for Jordan, 6-4. Artie Schwartz had Redl ahead, 7-2-1. Judge Bill Recht had it exactly even, 4-4-2 and four points for each. The AP card had Redl in front, 6-4.

Most of the 2,500 fans, who paid about $5,000, cheered the vote for Jordan, a sub and a 7-5 underdog. Eleven of 14 boxing writers thought Redl won.

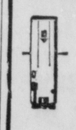

The draw was a good break for the 23-year-old Jordan, subbing for injured Gaspar Ortega. The bout marked his Garden and national television debut, and the result stretched his unbeaten record to 16 and three draws. Redl's record is 22-3-1.

San Rafael Quint Wins Santa Rosa Cage Tournament

The Dugout Dandies of San Rafael won the Santa Rosa Invitational Basketball Tournament this week by defeating Travis Market in the final game, 74-61.

Bob Liebe and Glen Robinson played outstanding ball for the Dandies throughout the entire tournament. Robinson was chosen on the All-Tournament team, as well as being one of the leading scorers.

Win May Be Costly As Tar Ace Breuner Hurt

By ERNEST LEICHTER

College of Marin Tars held out gamely in the final minute and a half to eke out a 42-40 victory over the Golden Valley Conference All-Stars before 450 fans at Kentfield last night.

The victory may have been costly for the Tars because their star center, Bill Breuner, was forced to leave the tilt with about 6 minutes left. Breuner went up for a rebound and landed hard on his right leg. He limped painfully off the floor favoring his knee.

When Breuner departed, Marin held a narrow 37-36 lead. The All-Stars immediately sent back their starting aggregation consisting of three American River and two Shasta players. But the Tars stubbornly held on to maintain the lead. A basket by Dennis Slavich and a goal and two free throws by Claude Curley made certain the Golden Valley Champions were never headed. In the last 1:30 of the contest the largest crowd of the year watched tensely as the All-Stars made four futile attempts to tie the score.

The Tars jumped off to a narrow lead early in the fray, but about midway through the first half the Stars knotted the count at 7-7. The lead then changed hands five times before the All-Stars forged ahead 24-21 at halftime.

The All-Stars increased their margin to 31-24 at the beginning of the second half and looked to be in complete command. But the Tars grimly whittled at the lead until a rebound by Breuner put Marin in front to stay.

CURLEY HITS 14

Curley for Marin was high point man with 14 while reserve guard Dennis Slavich hit six key digits in the second half and took up the rebound slack after the mishap to Breuner. Bob Wright of Sierra was high for the Stars with 9, mostly on soft hooks and rebounds from close in. Terry Banderas, another Sierra star, garnered 4 and played a smooth floor game.

Woody Hutchison, head coach of the Stars from American River, used a platoon system allowing all 14 All-Stars to play about equal time. Both teams were cold from the floor, hitting only about 28 per cent of their shots.

Proceeds from the game will help pay the Marin Tars' expenses to Long Beach next week. They will play Santa Ana in the opening game of the State J. C. tournament.

In the preliminary game last night St. Rita's defeated the Mill Valley Boys' Club, 27-22.

OPEN LETTER TO MARIN COUNTY CITIZENS!

Last year about this time everyone was talking recession. The Americans' morale was at low tide. In order to break the spell of recession talk the Automotive Industry put on an all-out drive called "YOU AUTO BUY NOW."

This drive was successful, it lifted Morale . . . Unemployment decreased sharply, people began to spend their money. It was successful enough to receive an outstanding tribute from the President of the United States.

Today as I see local business and residential people supporting the foreign trade I just wonder if it isn't time we take another look at our American economy. What would happen if:

1. Citizens in need of eye glasses would order them directly from Germany.
2. All new furniture customers ordered items from England.
3. Our auto manufacturers ordered their steel from Austria.
4. All the people desiring a new television or radio would order them from German or Italian exporters.

Wouldn't our country be in a sad state of affairs?

This very thing is happening every day right here in our back yard. You purchase your new radio, Hi-Fi or TV set and it's delivered to your door in a foreign vehicle. You buy your new set of eye glasses from our local doctor and he supports foreign economy by purchasing a foreign vehicle.

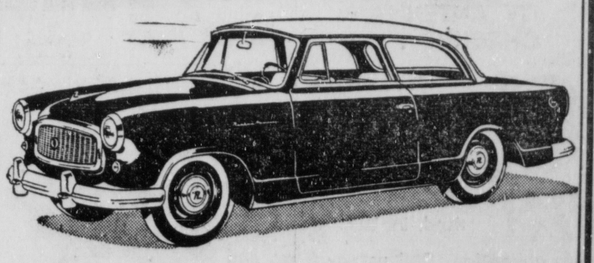

I appeal to you as good American Citizens to support your economy by purchasing American made merchandise.

We have a slogan here at Larry Brink Motors Inc., "Be An American, buy an 'American,' Made in America, by Americans for Americans."

We cordially invite you to visit our showroom at 450 Miller Ave., Mill Valley. We have "Americans" to suit your budget.

Cordially yours,

THE PARENTS' CORNER

By RICHMOND BARBOUR, Ph. D.
Guidance Counsellor

Parents' Forum: Culture Skipped, Are All Fraternities 'Sex Mad?'

Mr. V.W. "My son is taking the 'advanced program' for bright students in his high school. It allows him no time for music or art. He is so busy with routine homework that he hasn't time to be creative. Don't you believe bright children should take music or art? Why should creative classes be denied them?"

Reply. I think bright pupils need music and art. I'm afraid some high school leaders are going overboard. They want to fill the need for scientists and engineers and force the bright students out of art and music and into full-time academic courses. It's a mistake. Did you know that many other parents feel as you do? I suggest you talk with them. Then go to school together. Present your case to your principal. If adjustments are impossible, probably you should send your boy to summer school where he could take art, music, literature, etc.

Mrs. M.C. "My son goes to college. Last fall he joined a fraternity. He tells me he's surprised to find that his 'brothers' talk only of sex. He says that is the one subject which interests them. Are all fraternities sex mad?"

Reply. Let me answer this way. Sex is a major interest of hearly all young men of your son's age. They aren't sex mad. But they are preoccupied. There are differences between individuals and groups. Fraternities probably are neither better nor worse than many other groups.

Mrs. H.T. "Our girl enters the 7th grade in junior high school next fall. I asked her teacher for help in planning her high school courses. I want to be sure she'll qualify for college. Her teacher said it was too early. When should we plan?"

Reply. The best time is while your girl is in the 8th grade. Then you should talk with her counselor or her favorite teachers. Ask for pamphlets explaining the different high school courses. Ask also to see lists of the requirements of colleges she may want to attend.

Developer Sues NMWD For $5,270

North Marin Water District has over-charged the developers and homeowners in Rancho Village by $5,270 in excess water connection fees, they charge in a complaint on file in Marin Superior Court.

Crown Development Co., developer of the subdivision off South Novato boulevard, says that water district agreed to allow homes to connect for $40 each. But the actual cost of each connection turned out to be $55 to $170, according to the complaint.

Crown Development built Rancho Village in 1956. At that time the developer alleges, it agreed to pay for the cost of installing the water system under several conditions. One of those condition was that individual homes would be able to connect for $40, the suit alleges.

As a result of the higher fees, Crown Development contends it paid $3,565 more than it should have, and the homeowners overpaid by $1,705.

Sewer Connecton Fee To Be Held In Trust

San Rafael Sanitation District yesterday accepted a fee for sewer connection on a disputed sewer line, but carefully put the fee aside "in trust" until ownership of the sewer line is clarified.

Mosher Bros., represented by attorney Samuel Gardiner, wants to pay a connection fee for a home they are building on Quarry road. But the sanitation district does not want to accept the fee because ownership of the Quarry road sewer line is still in doubt. A court fight is pending in Marin Superior Court to determine who owns the line—the city of San Rafael, Lloyd Grandi, developer of Fairhills, or other private individuals.

The city contends the sewer line was never accepted and is a private line. About 300 feet of that line is old and leaky and should be replaced, according to city officials. They feel developer Grandi should pay for it.

So as not to hold up Mosher Bros. from connecting up to the line, the district decided to take the fee of $125, but will hold that money in trust until the ownership of the sewer line is decided.

The city and the sanitation district are being careful not to take any action that could be construed to mean the city is accepting ownership of the defective line.

Hartog Sues Mate For Marin Home

Wealthy Hillsborough boat builder Joseph Philip Hartog, 47, who is being sued for separate maintenance in Marin County, struck back in court yesterday in an effort to oust his wife from the family home in Kent Woodlands.

Hartog filed the suit yesterday in Marin Superior Court against Mrs. Barbara Hartog, 35, former model and cover girl, whom he married in August last year in Reno. One year previously, Hartog made news headlines when his first wife, Carola, died with an ice pick wound in San Mateo County. The killing is unsolved.

Hartog contends the Kent Woodlands home should not be in joint tenancy, but should be his separate property for several reasons:

1. He thought he was legally married to Barbara when he bought the home, but Hartog says he later learned that his wife's previous marriage was still in effect. Therefore, their marriage was invalid.

Hartog says Barbara married Carl Dampier Bennett in Miami in 1950, and that marriage is still in effect. He has filed for annulment as an answer to her action for separate maintenance.

2. She promised to live with his three children from the former marriage, and love them, but she has failed to do so, says Hartog.

Since New Year's Eve, Hartog says Barbara forced him to leave the Kent Woodlands home and rent another home in Hillsborough. He incurred $1,800 in moving expense and $325 per month rental since Dec. 31, 1958, says Hartog.

He wants the Kent Woodlands home restored to him as his separate property together with the furnishings, and seeks damages for the rentals he has had to pay since moving out of Kent Woodlands.

Mill Valley Church To Hear Bishop

Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, Episcopal Bishop of California, will be preacher and celebrant at the 11 a.m. service of Holy Communion on Sunday in the Church of Our Saviour, Mill Valley.

Following the service, a reception will be held in the newly completed parish hall. At that time, Bishop Pike will dedicate the hall which marks completion of the physical plant of the church.

The hall is named Hammond Hall, in honor of the first rector of the present church, Rev. Stephen Reginald Hammond. Father Hammond was at the church when it began its present biulding five years ago and was rector for the following three years. When he left, the position was filled by his son, the present rector, Rev. D. Murray Hammond.

The elder Father Hammond is father of four sons, all of whom are Episcopal priests. One of the objects in Hammond Hall is a coat of arms showing the father and his four sons.

Novak Constructs 25 More Homes

Twenty-five homes are under construction in builder John Novak's new Millwood Terrace tract in Novato.

Novak said the tract will, when completed, contain 62 homes on 15 acres at Wilson avenue and Mill road.

He added that he hopes to complete the development by the end of June.

Millwood Terrace features three-bedroom, two-bath, double garage homes at $13,990, the builder said.

Two Drunk Drivers Get Jail Terms; Two Others Fined

Two drunken drivers drew jail terms plus fines, while two others got away with fines, in Marin Municipal Court yesterday.

Judge Albert F. Scheidecker of Sebastopol sentenced Douglas Hope Perry, 34, of Apartment E-39, Hilarita Housing, to 10 days in county jail for his third drunken driving offense in seven years. Perry must also pay a $250 fine.

Perry was caught last Jan. 5 on Highway 101. He had prior convictions in October of 1952, and again in November of 1957.

Surges A. Amundson, 35, of Waldo Point, Sausalito, must spend five days in jail and pay $250 fine for his second offense. He was arrested on Highway 101 last Nov. 19. He had a prior conviction in May of 1953.

Judge Scheidecker also sentenced John Piaszk, 35, of General Delivery, Forest Knolls, with a $200 fine. Piaszk was caught driving last Feb. 11 while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Judge Richard M. Sims took over part of the criminal calendar to sentence Donald Worcester Salisbury, 39, of 130 Yale avenue, Mill Valley. Salisbury was ordered placed on supervised probation for one year and must pay $250 fine. He was caught for drunken driving in Sausalito on Alexander street last July 17.

County Sues For Personal Property Tax

The county has gone to court to force Associated Dredging Co. of Sausalito and other property owners to pay personal property taxes for 1958-59.

Deputy County Counsel Robert Smallman filed the suits against Associated Dredging and five others in Marin Court this week.

The county says Associated Dredging owes $6,168 taxes on personal property with an assessed value of $94,895. The county counsel says the company was notified that their taxes were due, but refused to pay. On Sept. 3, 1958, the taxes became delinquent, and an 8 per cent penalty was added. The total bill now comes to $6,661, the county contends.

The other defendants are accused of owing the county the following amounts in personal property taxes:

Peter P. Damato — $210; Dave Crandell — $151.57; Edward Canadas—$398; Norman J. Clark—$180, and Joe Balestrieri—$333.

THE OLD AND THE NEW—Alfred Nelson (rear) figures he's the winner by acquiring the famous town jeep of the Town of Corte Madera. But Frank Reis, Corte Madera public works superintendent, isn't complaining a bit at exchanging the sturdy little vehicle for the big truck in which he's seated in foreground.

MUSICAL COMEDY

Tam Players Lauded For Performance

Reviewed by
MARTHA BRUCKNER

Tamalpais High School has presented proudly a former (1941) Broadway hit, an evening filling, two-act musical on the school stage. Any doubts, as to whether this might be a too daring enterprise, were soon scattered after the curtain had risen Thursday evening for the first performance of "Paint Your Wagon," a musical play by Lerner-Loewe; and it can be assumed that the last little flaws, usually in a premiere, will have disappeared in the following two performances, last night and tonight.

That the Broadway hit also became a high school hit was made possible through the enthusiasm of the entire cast, including the back stage crew, and through the excellent guidance by the departments involved, mainly those for music, dance and drama, headed by Robert Greenwood, Mrs. Joan Smith and Peter Klain.

It was a lively and spirited performance, with a good sense of humor and well delivered musical lines. The orchestra, a small but selected group, was outstanding.

As the cast of characters listed 32 names, the dance ensembles for the rope dance and the can-can more than 20, the chorus over 40, the orchestra 26 and the production staff over 50 names, the performance activated many talents, as a school production should, but it makes it impossible to mention all of them, although they deserve it.

In the leading musical roles Gary Dahl, Carol Schroeder (alternating with Merrilee White) Joseph Reade, Tim Farrell and Jody Johnson were very much applauded. Kittie McCue, Mary McGee and Joe Stuart were the excellent solo stars of the terrific dance ensemble. The choir ensembles were well rehearsed, sets and costumes simple but genuine.

As the story is taking place in California—near Sonora, to be exact—about 100 years ago, the historical home flavor added a special delight to this entertaining production.

Familiar Jeep Gone Off Corte Madera Streets

By DICK STEINHEIMER

Corte Madera's well-known town jeep has been retired from civic duty.

Dented but undaunted the little orange and red veteran of World War II was traded in this week to Rossi Garage of San Rafael on a shiny new 1959 pickup truck.

To quote one operator of the jeep, "it will take a lot of years for this truck to live up to the reputation of the jeep."

The jeep was ordered replaced several months ago by the town council, which felt the little four-wheel drive vehicle was using up too much tax money in repairs.

BACK IN SERVICE

Lest Corte Madera residents weep, however, the retirement of the jeep was only momentary. Alfred (Al) Nelson, owner of a Paradise drive bicycle shop and brother of Police Chief Frank L. Nelson, said he was able to get in ahead of a flock of other potential buyers and purchase the jeep from the garage.

Nelson, a hunting and fishing fan, said he plans to completely rebuild the vehicle for hunting trips and business use.

BACK FROM FRANCE

He pointed out that the jeep had been a permanent Corte Madera fixture since the end of World War II, when it was brought back from France by Harold B. Wagstaff, now a member of the town planning commission. Wagstaff, sentimental about the jeep himself, said he purchased the little veteran in France in 1946 after being mustered out of the Army. He said the jeep, along with about 70 others, was hoisted onto the troopship George Washington for the return to the United States.

ALL THE WAY

When Wagstaff landed in New York he decided to drive the jeep back to Corte Madera. He said the gears were howling so loud when he got to Corte Madera he was forced to take them apart. He found the jeep apparently had been landed in France through the surf, because the enclosed salt water had eaten the gears.

A year later, Wagstaff and his bride took their honeymoon to Lake Tahoe in the little jeep.

Wagstaff said the vehicle was sold to the town after the 1955 floods. The jeep did duty in that storm helping pull stalled cars through the water.

The jeep was used since then by Frank Reis and the town street department. The four-wheel drive was used frequently on stormy days and nights in patrol of the town's flood control system.

The newcomer is a four-wheel drive International pickup which was obtained by the town for approximately $2,300.

County Replies To Critics Of Civic Center

Recent published statements which allegedly gave a distorted picture of Marin County's civic center project were answered yesterday by Asst. County Administrator Alan Bruce.

In a six-page memorandum to Walter R. Castro, chairman of the board of supervisors, Bruce termed "highly misleading" a statement that the project would cost $13,800,000 and be "beyond the needs and financial means of the taxpayers."

"The civic center proper," said his memorandum, "is estimated to cost $9,512,700 over a 10-year period from 1958 to 1968. However, the present board of supervisors cannot commit future boards and cannot commit the people beyond the term of office of the present board.

"The only current commitment is for the first stage of the civic center, estimated to cost $2,724,000."

Bruce said the board may decide to proceed simultaneously with the second construction stage, which is estimated to cost $1,400,000 if built simultaneously with the first stage. He said the county has $1,240,274 on hand at the moment. The money was accumulated during the 1957-58 tax year and the current fiscal year.

Plans for the first two construction stages are being prepared by Frank Lloyd Wright, world-famous dean of American architecture.

To a published statement that the civic center represents "an architect's dream rather than a modest courthouse," Bruce's memo replied:

"We do not know of anyone who has seen the plans who does not agree that the buildings will be modest and functional as well as esthetically pleasing and appropriate to the Marin County setting."

Bruce said it was estimated last year that the construction cost would be only $21 per square foot.

"On the assumption that costs of building materials and labor may rise 10 per cent before construction of the first and second stages is completed," he wrote, "the actual cost may be $23.10 per square foot.

"This compares with a cost of $23.98 per square foot for the courthouse annex constructed in San Rafael in 1957, which is certainly a 'modest' building."

Judges Named For Scholarship Contest

Selection of judges for the forthcoming eighth annual $500 college scholarship award competition of the Marin County Labor Council was announced today by council president Albert De Mello.

Herman J. Hale, Marin County consultant, state division of apprenticeship standards, will act as chairman. He will be assisted by Leonard Murphy, of Ralph Murphy & Sons, general contractors; Dr. Virgil S. Hollis, county superintendent of schools; Mrs. Carrol A. Snyker, president of Adults for Teenagers, and the Rev. John Bonner, president, Marin County Council of Churches.

The competitive examination of senior students of Marin County public and parochial high schools will be held on Saturday, May 2, at College of Marin, Kentfield. In the past, a total of nine schools in the county have had students eligible to compete. This year two new schools are added: Redwood High School in Larkspur and Novato High School which will graduate its first students this year.

Handling the details of the scholarship award for the Labor Council are the following members of the council's scholarship committee: Philip Ruby and Warren Ewing, both members of Marin County Federation of Teachers, Local 1077, an affiliate of the council.

Seminary Choir Off On Tour

Wilbur F. Ruessell, conductor of the A Cappella Choir of the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, left with his 36-member choir by chartered bus yesterday, on the twenty-second annual tour which will take them through Southern California and Arizona.

Prof. Russell, former member of the choir and assistant in the sacred music department, became acting director and conductor of the choir in late December when Director John Milton Kelly left on a diplomatic mission to Africa for the U.S. state department. Russell is well known to music lovers throughout Marin and the Bay Area as a pianist, organist and harpsichordist.

Dr. Jesse H. Baird, retired seminary president, conducted a 30-minute meditation period for members before they boarded the bus. He reminded them that they would each represent the seminary and the "ministry of music" to everyone they meet during their 11-day tour. Jacob A. Long, vice president, will join the choir as speaker Sunday in San Gabriel and complete the tour with them.

Several Seminary students from the Bay Area are touring members this year: David Askine of Walnut Creek, Alva Opdyke of San Francisco, Wallace Spencer and Frank Thomas of Berkeley and Herbert Valentine of Oakland.

The tour will conclude with a homecoming concert to be held at the sponsoring church, First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo, March 16.

As in past years, the Rotary Club of San Anselmo and the Marin Chorale will sponsor the A Cappella in their fifth homecoming concert.

Another benefit: Your opinion can help us improve the paper, which we are constantly striving to do.

CONTEST RULES

1. Study the questions below, and the comic strips and cartoons illustrated. Indicate what you read or do not read by checking the proper square for each feature. Answers have no bearing whatever on the prize award, but every feature must be checked in order to qualify your entry in the prize contest.

2. When you have checked your reading habit for each feature, then fill in your estimate of what the total paid circulation of the daily Independent-Journal will be on Wednesday, March 11, 1959. This figure varies from day to day—nobody knows what it will be, even at the I-J. Nearly 100% of the 25,000-plus I-J circulation is home delivered, but sales are also made daily at newsstands, stores, and from street stands.

3. The estimate nearest to the correct figure will be the winner. If more than one person sends in the winning number, the $100 prize will be divided equally. Only one award given per family.

4. Members of the I-J staff, employees of this newspaper, and their families are not eligible for the cash prize.

6. Announcement of the winner will be made in the Independent-Journal of Saturday, March 14, 1959, or as soon thereafter as possible.

CLUES TO HELP YOU WIN

The I-J's average daily net paid circulation for 3 months ending March 31, 1955, was 18,945. For 1956 this figure was 20,916 . . . in 1957, 22,926; and for 1958 it was 24,680. These were averages, of course—the count varied from day to day.

How To Switch Things Around To Match Your Peak Efficiency

EVERYONE has his own particular hour of maximum efficiency — a time when anything started stands the best chance of turning out successful. Mine is from 9:15 to somewhere between 10:15 and 10:30 a.m.

You might think I could squeeze in an extra 15 minutes by starting at nine sharp but it doesn't work out that way. It has nothing to do with the morning cup of coffee which I like no later than 8:30 or not at all. My motor just doesn't get warmed up until 9:15 and if I haven't shifted my brain into high gear within an hour my clutch slips and the rest of the day my thinking bogs down when I should be in free wheeling.

One fellow I know can't get off the ground until 6:00 p.m. which is a time for me to pull in for a refill and cool off my engine. He never made good until he went to work on the swing shift in an airplane factory.

Some people have to start long before the first streaks of dawn brighten the sky — others can't make it until the hour hand stands to the right of the meridian.

Now this business of checking the clock to see when you should begin the count down is a little troublesome. If you are in an eight to five job it's pretty difficult to convince the boss he should let you come in at six and take off at three — or read the newspapers and gossip with your secretary until after lunch when your ascendency hits its peak.

It's mostly mental, and there's a way to reconcile offbeat efficiency with normal working hours.

SIX A-Mers: Work on your income tax. Your wits are sharp and after a couple of hours of this any problem will seem like duck soup by comparison. Besides, it's the best time to figure out a way to get back some of what you've already paid in.

EIGHT-TO-NINE A-Mers: You are in the front ranks of good fortune and have nothing to complain about. If you haven't got it up front you just haven't got it.

MID-A-Mers: Ask for a conference and include one or two eight-to-nine A-Mers. Their wheels are already turning and you may get some good ideas. Make sure, however, that it doesn't run past your own mental deadline or you're sunk. In this case, think up an excuse to carry it on until noon and adjourn until after lunch.

ONE-TO-THREE P-Mers: If you or someone else hasn't managed to cook up a morning conference and you can't arrange a dentist appointment or there wasn't anything interesting in the mail, how about studying the financial reports?

Get out the records for 1955, 1956 and 1957, and compare them with 1958. If this doesn't start you thinking, you need a ton of bricks to fall on your head. You better do something about it — and quick.

THREE P.M. UNTIL QUITTING: You've really got a problem — I don't know just what you should do. You're too late a starter for a day job and too early for night work. Maybe you should have married a gal with a lot of money and then you could have played golf or gone travelling and become a novelist.

I guess the only thing left for you is to stay at home and send your wife to work. At least you should be able to start functioning in time to prepare dinner.

This is what comes from my waiting until 2:30 p.m. to get on the ball. I told you I was at my best at nine-fifteen in the morning.

TODAY IS ARBOR DAY, TIME TO PLANT TREES

Most Californians being somewhat on the "tree-happy" side anyway, really don't need an official proclamation from the Governor to encourage them to plant a tree once a year. Yet Arbor Day, today—and consequently Tree Planting Week—have a rather welcome way of making us pause for a moment to consider the tremendous importance of trees in Marin. The California Association of Nurserymen reminds us that this date also coincides with the birthday of Luther Burbank, famed California naturalist.

From a civic viewpoint, this week is an ideal time to organize neighbors, parents, or let's say the congregation of your church, to plant that new street in the subdivision, the new school or the new church.

The sting of a barren freeway can be lessened by strategic tree planting. It has been proven by highway engineers that trees have a safety factor too—breaking the tiresome monotony of the road and helping to cut down driver fatigue.

From a personal standpoint, Tree Planting Week can be a reminder that bareroot season is drawing to a close. That means it will behoove you to go to your nursery without delay and select the flowering tree, the fruit or shade tree that you have been yearning for but have put off buying for one reason or another.

The list of trees that thrive in California would fill several pages. We suggest you consult your local nurseryman about which varieties will suit your particular needs. At any rate, this is a very good time to plant a tree. There is no greater satisfaction.

Victor Jones Knows About Teen-Agers As A Jeweler Knows About A Watch

By JIM GILMARTIN

Victor William Jones can be classified as an authority on that complex creature known as the American teen-ager.

As a high school teacher, attendance officer and athletic coach for some 38 years until his retirement in 1957, the "Grand Old Man" of San Rafael High became as familiar with teeners as an MD is with the human anatomy or a jeweler is with a watch.

He found out what made them tick and tried to keep them running.

"It wasn't always easy," Jones recalled recently. "There were many disappointments. But all in all it was a marvelous experience. If I had it to do over again I would choose the same profession."

AS AN INSTRUCTOR in industrial arts (carpentry and mechanical drawing), Jones said he had several opportunities to get out of teaching and into the more lucrative construction business, "but I wanted to stay with school. The experience of being around kids helped keep me young."

He doesn't stick out his chest and boast that he's helped straighten out many a wayward youngster, but that he did is quite obvious. More than 300 of his former pupils will gather next Wednesday night to tell him "thanks" at a testimonial dinner at Trader Horn's, formerly Hamie's Chuck Wagon, in San Rafael

The event is being sponsored by the San Rafael Athletic Assn., of which Jones is a charter member, and the reason for the testimonial is appropriately summed up by SRAA president Ted Mitchell: "Vic has been a truly outstanding citizen, especially in his contributions to the youth of the community. He's been unselfish and hard-working and, well, we just want to tell him 'thanks for everything.'."

A HEART ATTACK in September of 1955 and a second seizure late the following year led to Jones' retirement from teaching in June of 1957. Now 63 years old, he still keeps in touch with your youngsters as chairman of the Parks and Recreation Commission, which presently is planning the recreational future of the community, and as secretary to the San Rafael Board of Education, a post he's held for 12 years.

Besides those part-time jobs, Jones spends his time "just puttering around the yard" at his large, brown wooden home at 1340 Grand avenue and "playing a little golf" at the Indian Valley course in Novato.

Jones' teaching career included two years at Tonopah, Nev., three more at Carson City and the final 33 at San Rafael High.

HOW DID THE teen-agers of the Model-T, Big Apple and 23 Skidoo era compare with those of the present rock'n' roll and dig that craazy, etc. age?

"Well," Jones thought deeply, "the kids today are a bit spoiled. They're handed everything on a silver platter where in the old days the kids had to work for everything. Take athletics for example. In the old days we could give a football player a bunch of rags for a uniform and he'd fix them up himself and keep them clean. Today the kids are given the best and don't have to lift a finger."

How about a comparison between the delinquents of then and now?

"You'll always have troublemakers as long as there are humans, but in general we have really fine youngsters.

"DRINKING AND smoking are problems. But the kids today do it more openly than they did 20 and 30 years ago, and I think that's the fault of adults who are too easy and lenient now. You see kids walking down the street puffing away; and the real trouble-makers don't seem to give a darn who sees them when they go on a beer bust and start fights. I'm not saying the kids in past years didn't cut up a lot, but they didn't dare get caught. Adults have become too lenient, although the laws today are the same as they were back in 1930."

What's the best way to curb JD?

"Athletics," Jones shot back without batting an eye. "I have never known a kid who was interested in athletics and who made good in some sport who ever got into serious trouble. Athletics keeps them busy. It's the guy who loafs, who's got nothing to do, who ends up in trouble."

JONES SPENT many years as San Rafael's attendance officer and dictated a "be firm, but be fair" philosophy. "That was my most interesting work," he recalled, "because you can accomplish a lot of good. We had some very interesting problems and some very sad cases involving the home life of students. To solve some of these problems and help a youngster get his education is a very rewarding experience. There were some disappointments, but they were outnumbered by the successful results.

"I can remember a lot of chronic absentees who, after they got out of school, surprised a lot of people by turning into fine citizens. In fact, some are now teachers themselves."

ONE MAN who swears by Jones' success as truant officer is Angelo Turrini, owner of United Ambulance Co. and former member of the Board of Education. Turrini, who graduated from San Rafael High in 1932, recalls: "Vic was the fairest and squarest guy in any school system. He never wanted to penalize the kids, just try to rationalize with them. He'd take them down to the wood shop and have a man-to-man talk with them. He was very convincing and kept more than just a few kids from quitting school." Turrini added that he was speaking from experience,

"Ol' Vic caught me cutting school once," he laughed.

Jones came to San Rafael in 1924 when the high school and grammar school were combined in one building at the corner of Fourth and E streets. The following year the high school moved to its present site with approximately 300 students and 12 teachers. Today the sprawling, modern plant houses some 1,450 students with 75 faculty members.

JONES' JOB as head athletic director and coach in those early days was quite trying. He thought back:

"We didn't have a gymnasium, so our basketball teams had to play all games away and we had to borrow cars to get there. The football field was dirt and rock, so I've treated a few cuts and bruises in my day. We pioneered sports at the high school and it was no easy task."

Although San Rafael has maintained a successful interscholastic athletic record over the years, Jones remembers what probably is the darkest chapter in Bulldog annals. It happened in 1926 when the varsity football team went to Vallejo. Let him tell about it:

'The previous year we upset Vallejo, so they were really laying for us. On the opening kickoff we recovered a fumble and went on to score a touchdown for a 7-0 lead. But, brother, from then on it was just too bad for us.

"Vallejo, a big, rough, tough team, then proceeded to trounce us 98-7. We couldn't even finish the game because too many of our kids got hurt. So, you see," he chuckles, "I still hold some kind of a record."

THERE IS ONE record he likes to talk about, however, and that is that none of his football teams ever lost a game to arch-rival Tamalpais.

"The Tam game was THE top attraction of the years," he reminisces. "Just mention Tam and our kids would go wild with excitement. We had bon fire rallies before the games and believe me there were plenty of real old fashioned donnybrooks with the Tam kids. Now that other schools have been built that bitter Tam-San Rafael rivalry has diminished."

Jones left coaching in 1930 to become the industrial arts instructor. Contractors put up four walls and the roof of the woodshop; Jones' students did all the interior work.

HE CAN RATTLE off a list of names of his former pupils who went on to become successful contractors, but he also had his problems with young toughs who took the course because they figured it was a snap. Jones recalls two rough-necks in particular who gave him the most trouble and threatened to "beat the hell out of me." Nothing came of it, he added, "Because I just took off my coat, rolled up my sleeves, cocked my fist and told them I'd finish whatever they started. One of them broke down and cried and said he didn't want to fight; the other called me a bunch of unprintable names and ran like the dickens. We had to expel him."

Aside from school activities, Jones has kept busy through the years as a member of such organizations as the Masons, Kiwanis, American Legion, the San Rafael Athletic Assn. and as a director for many years in the Boy Scouts.

HE ALSO TAUGHT in the hobby shop at San Quentin Prison's night school for five years, did construction work on building Marin City and worked on Civilian Defense during World War II.

Born (Dec. 4, 1895) and raised in Denver, Colo., Victor William attended elementary and high school in Denver followed by two years at Colorado State. He left college to join the U.S. Navy at the start of World War I and served two years as an aviation mechanic.

A shortage of teachers after the war prompted Jones to go right to work rather than back to college, so he embarked on his career in Nevada in 1919 and stayed there until 1924, coaching state championship teams in football and basketball in 1921 and 1922. Jones later was to complete his teaching credentials by attending summer sessions at University of California, Denver University, Heald's Engineering School and San Jose State.

NEXT JUNE 16 Jones and his wife, the former Ruth Murray, will celebrate their 39th wedding enniversary. They have two married daughters, Mrs. Colin Hill of San Rafael and Mrs. Ruth Helen Walsh of Santa Clara, and seven grandchildren. A son, Deane Richard, was killed in Germany in World War II.

In summing up his years of work with the teen-agers of the community, Jones says he found the best approach was to "Be firm, but be fair."

Apparently it works for there are many important citizents in San Rafael who grew up under Jones' wing. They'll be there to salute him at his testimonial next Wednesday night.

A GOOD SPORT—Victor M. Jones, longtime San Rafael High School coach and shop instructor, has maintained a keen interest in sports all his life. Former students will salute him Wednesday night at a dinner.

ILL-FATED ONES — North Pacific Coast engine No. 9, the 'Milton S. Latham,' was wrecked in the collapse of the bridge at Austin Creek on Jan. 14, 1894. Investigation Of Tragedy

Conductor Brown Tells His Story Of Bridge Collapse At Austin Creek

By A. BRAY DICKINSON

(Editor's Note: The tragedy which took eight lives at Austin Creek on Jan. 14, 1894 sparked a full-scale investigation. The unscheduled solo trip by Engine No. 9, its crew and a handful of Cazadero townspeople and visitors ended when the trestle over creek gave way under the locomotive.

By Tuesday morning Austin Creek had subsided enough to expose the stack and forward part of the locomotive. Instead of falling directly beneath the bridge, it had taken a side plunge and lay on its side several feet down stream and close enough to the Duncans Mills bank to enable men from that side to walk out to the wreck on a plank. All day they poked around the wreck, hoping to find more bodies.

DURING THE day many outsiders arrived in this little mountain community.

There were those who joined the ranks of searching parties that had just recovered the body of Postmaster Gould. Several railroad officials were on hand to supervise operations and obtain first-hand information. A construction gang rolled in to begin rebuilding the demolished bridge. A news reporter and staff artist were sent out Monday afternoon by the San Francisco Examiner.

These two men got as far as Guerneville by train, via Santa Rosa, then next morning made the eleven-mile trip over the moutains on horseback to be on the scene.

Coroner Jewett devoted the afternoon to an inquest over the remains of Brommer and Gould. The chief witness was Conductor Brown, who told a story, mainly to clear himself of blame, which was reported in part as follows:

"It was about seven o'clock Sunday evening when Engineer Briggs proposed that we take a run down the road a short distance to see if the bridges were safe enough to bear the weight of the train we were to take out next morning, leaving Cazadero at five o'clock. I assented and we rolled the locomotive out of the roundhouse. Several minutes were consumed in making ready and in the meantime a number of men, among those who are now dead, gathered. Some of them expressed a desire to go with us. I warned them that it was against rules of the company for anyone not connected with the road to ride in the engine cab.

Never thinking that they would make the trip after this warning, I took my place on the forward pilot and we started. I did not see the men jump into the cab.

"We ran down the half mile of track to the bridge and, upon signal, Briggs stopped just this side of the structure. Briggs came to the head of the engine and we conferred as to the best course to pursue. We agreed that I should go over the bridge on foot and walk to the next trestle, taking time to examine both structures. Our idea was that if the second bridge had been washed away or was in a dangerous condition it would be foolish to cross the first bridge.

"Briggs was to wait on the Cazadero side until I returned.

"I crossed and examined the bridge carefully. Although I did not like the looks of things, I thought I would go on to the next bridge and examine the first one again on my return. Had I the least idea that Briggs would attempt to break our agreement, I would have ordered the locomotive back to the roundhouse.

"I crossed the bridge and went on down the track toward Duncans Mills. I heard no sound from the engine that caused me to look backward until I had walked probably a mile. Then I heard a sound that will ring in my ears forever. It was a long, loud scream. For a moment I was paralyzed and lost control of my legs. Through the darkness and the torrent of rain I could see nothing; then I ran back to the bridge, only to find out that my misgivings were correct.

There was no headlight shining at me. Looking down from the parted bridge I could see no trace of the locomotive. I ran down on the bank and waded knee-deep into the water, holding on to the bushes to keep from being swept away.

"There was no sound except the seething waters and I could not see anything.

"Nothing could be done for the poor fellows in the water. I was frantic and dashed my lantern on the ground. My next thought was to notify relatives in Cazadero. I started up the hill but lost my way. I must have wandered around for hours before I saw a light from a logger's cabin. I do not know who the man was that gave me shelter. I stayed until six o'clock in the morning, then struck out for Duncan's and from there telegraphed a report."

Further testimony at the inquest brought out the fact that Engineer Briggs was opposed to taking the engine out on account of the uncertain condition of the bridges but Brown insisted on going.

Their dispute took place at the dinner table in the presence of half a dozen people.

THE VERDICT of the jury was one of accidental death. But Brown was a forlorn individual in Cazadero. Everybody appeared to hold him responsible and scoffed at the story he told, claiming it was ridiculous to say he did not know who rode on the engine; that no one would start out to walk a mile to the second bridge and back in the rain while the locomotive waited. Everyone thought the eight men were pleasure-bent because the trip otherwise would have been made by daylight if their purpose had been really to inspect the bridges.

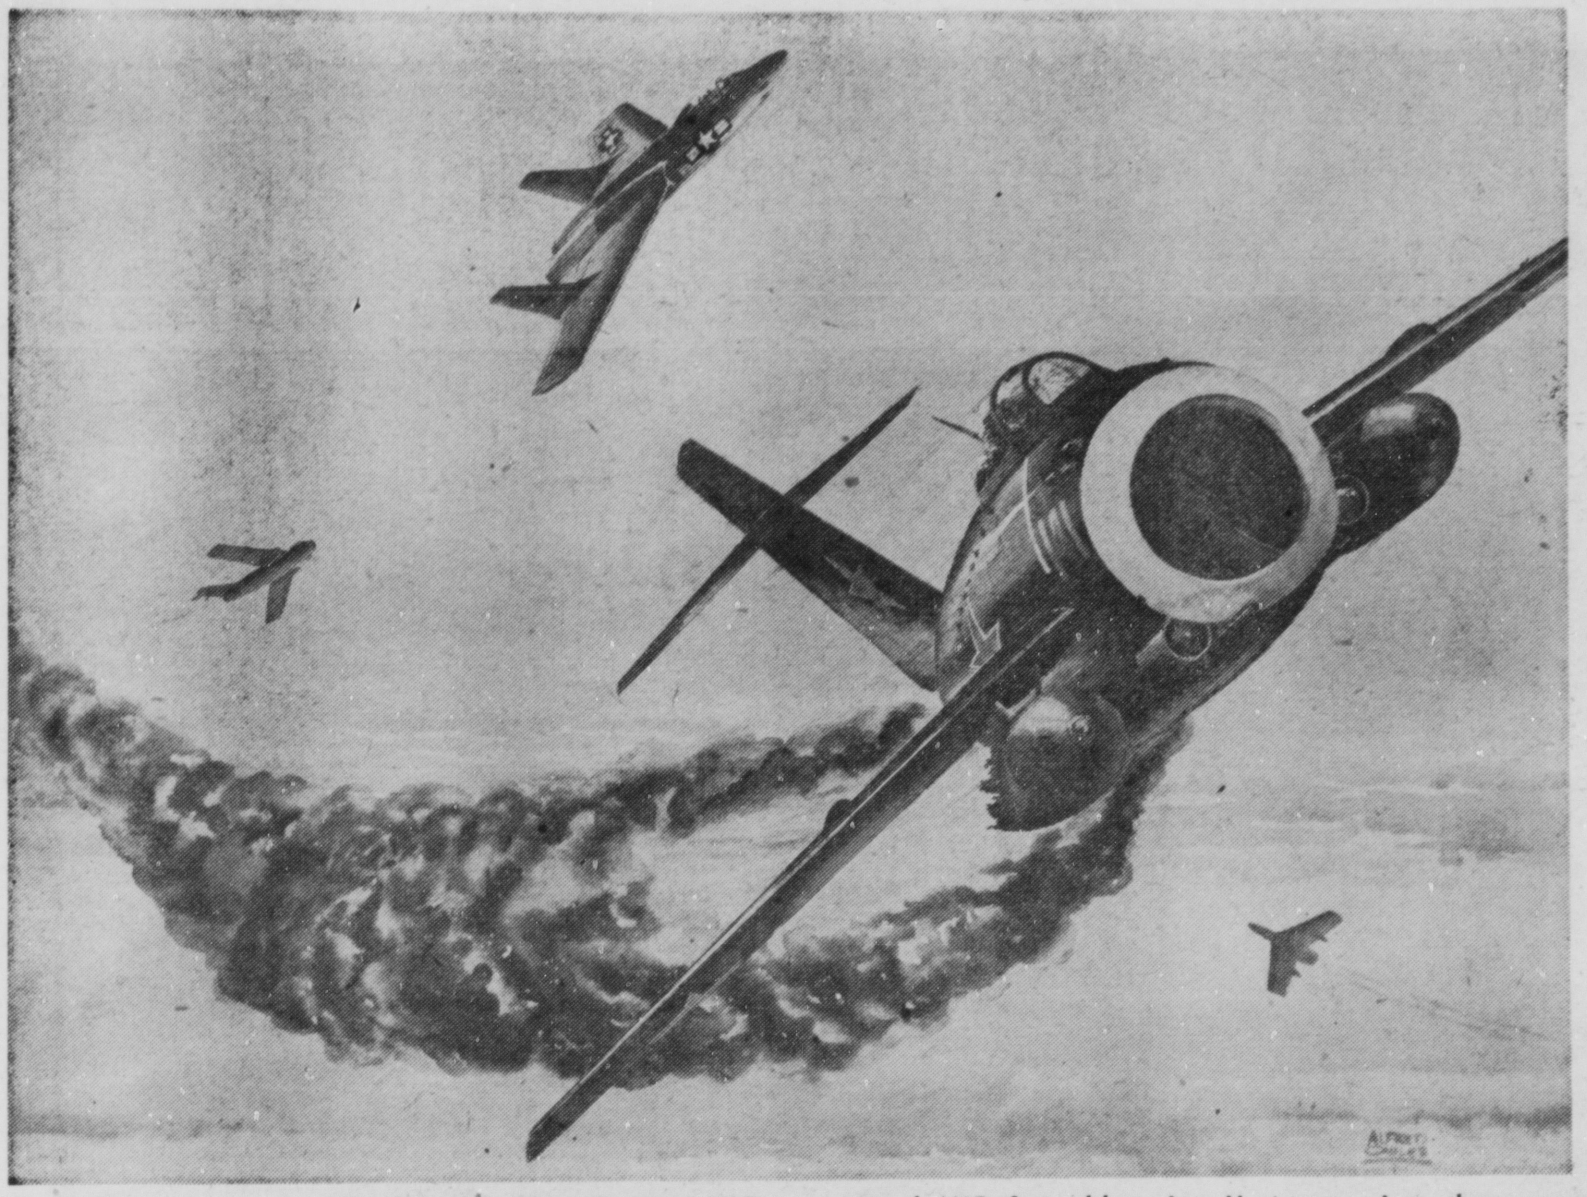

Subsequent evidence indicated that at least one of the victims had a chance for his life. Occupants of a logging camp a mile and a half below the scene of disaster heard calls for help that night and saw a man in shirt sleeves floating down stream among some logs. But he disappeared before any aid could be extended. This was supposed to have been young Hart because his coat and vest were found in a tangle of driftwood by what was then called the Bohemian camp ground.

His watch had stopped at eight o'clock.

Artist Of Air Combat

Alfred Owles of San Anselmo paints airplanes for a living, but it took a second world war to turn his hobby of 25 years into a career.

He first started painting pictures of airplanes in action during World War I, when he "saw a lot of excitement in the air." He began to do watercolors of air battles of his 27th Aero Squadron.

"Painting airplanes must have gotten into my blood, for I have continued with it ever since," he says.

Owles had mastered the English style of watercolors during his four years of study at the School of Art Academy at Nottingham, England. He came to America in 1914 and when war broke out enlisted in the Army Aerial Photograph Company.

After the war, he went to work as an illustrator for Western Utilities Corp. His airplane paintings, done as a hobby, were used as illustrations in English magazines. He also exhibited in such far-flung places as Australia and Hawaii.

During World War II, he found himself working for big aircraft manufacturers. Owles was in demand because he could reproduce an airplane even before it was built. He had always worked from blueprints for accuracy.

He is, by the way, one of the few men who has studied the blueprints of a Russian MIG. Ask him how he came by them and he only smiles mysteriously.

"People mail me information," he will say.

His paintings are never staid. He usually casts his planes against a background of action, picturing the planes from any angle, against ground or sky also alive with action. His detail is accurate down to the inner structure of a wing shot away. His realism extends to showing victims of a shattered plane falling from the flaming wreckage.

ALFRED OWLES

"You notice, I never give the enemy any advantage," he points out.

He has a theory that he shot down more planes and blew up more ammunition dumps during the war than anyone else. He has painted so many planes in the past 40 years that he sometimes forgets their designations.

More recently, his "Devil's Pipe Organ," (bank of heavy artillery guns) has been reproduced in Newsweek magazine. He does ships, too, for Dollar Lines, and has pictured Hiller's new converter plane, a combination of helicopter and conventional propellor plane for landing on constricted fields.

Fifty-seven of Owles' original paintings are now on display at the Nut Tree on Highway 40 as part of the celebration of the restaurant's airport. The firm not only paid for the framing of all 57, but had them insured for $15,000.

Another aftermath of World War I of which he is proud is his "adoption" by the late Dr. Margaraet Ching, who took many flyers under her wing during the Depression.

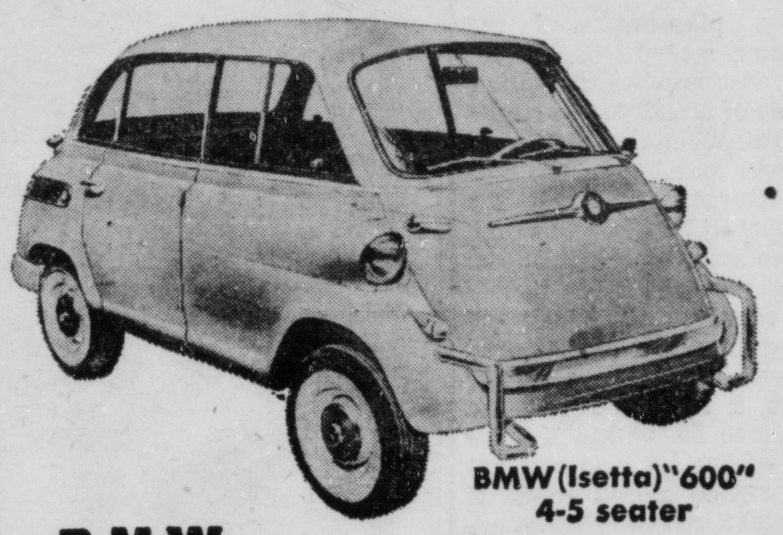

"I'm No. 21. She always remembered us by numbers."

Owles and his wife have lived in Marin since 1924, making their home at 189 Spring Grove avenue. Since airplanes became his full-time job, he has turned to painting landscapes for a hobby, but never exhibits them because he doesn't feel they are much different from any others done in the English style. Mrs. Owles, by the way, is an artist, too. She paints flowers.

STEREO and HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

Eighth of a weekly series of articles which will cover all phases of STEREOPHONIC SOUND for the home.

The truly remarkable achievement that has made Stereo practical for every home is the Stero Disc. The Stero Disc looks like an ordinary LP, long play record, and is played at the same 33⅓ rpm as the LP; however, the Stereo Disc has TWO SOUND TRACKS inscribed on the one groove. Remarkable, isn't it? The groove is cut in a V shape with each side of the groove at an angle of 45 degrees from vertical. The impressions on one groove wall carry one sound track, and the impressions on the other groove wall carry the second sound track.

How are these sound tracks used? The diamond needle on the Stereo Cartridge has the complex job of moving up and down and sideways to follow the impressions of both sound tracks simultaneously. Only one needle is used, but this one needle activates a cartridge made up of two separate elements, one for each sound track.

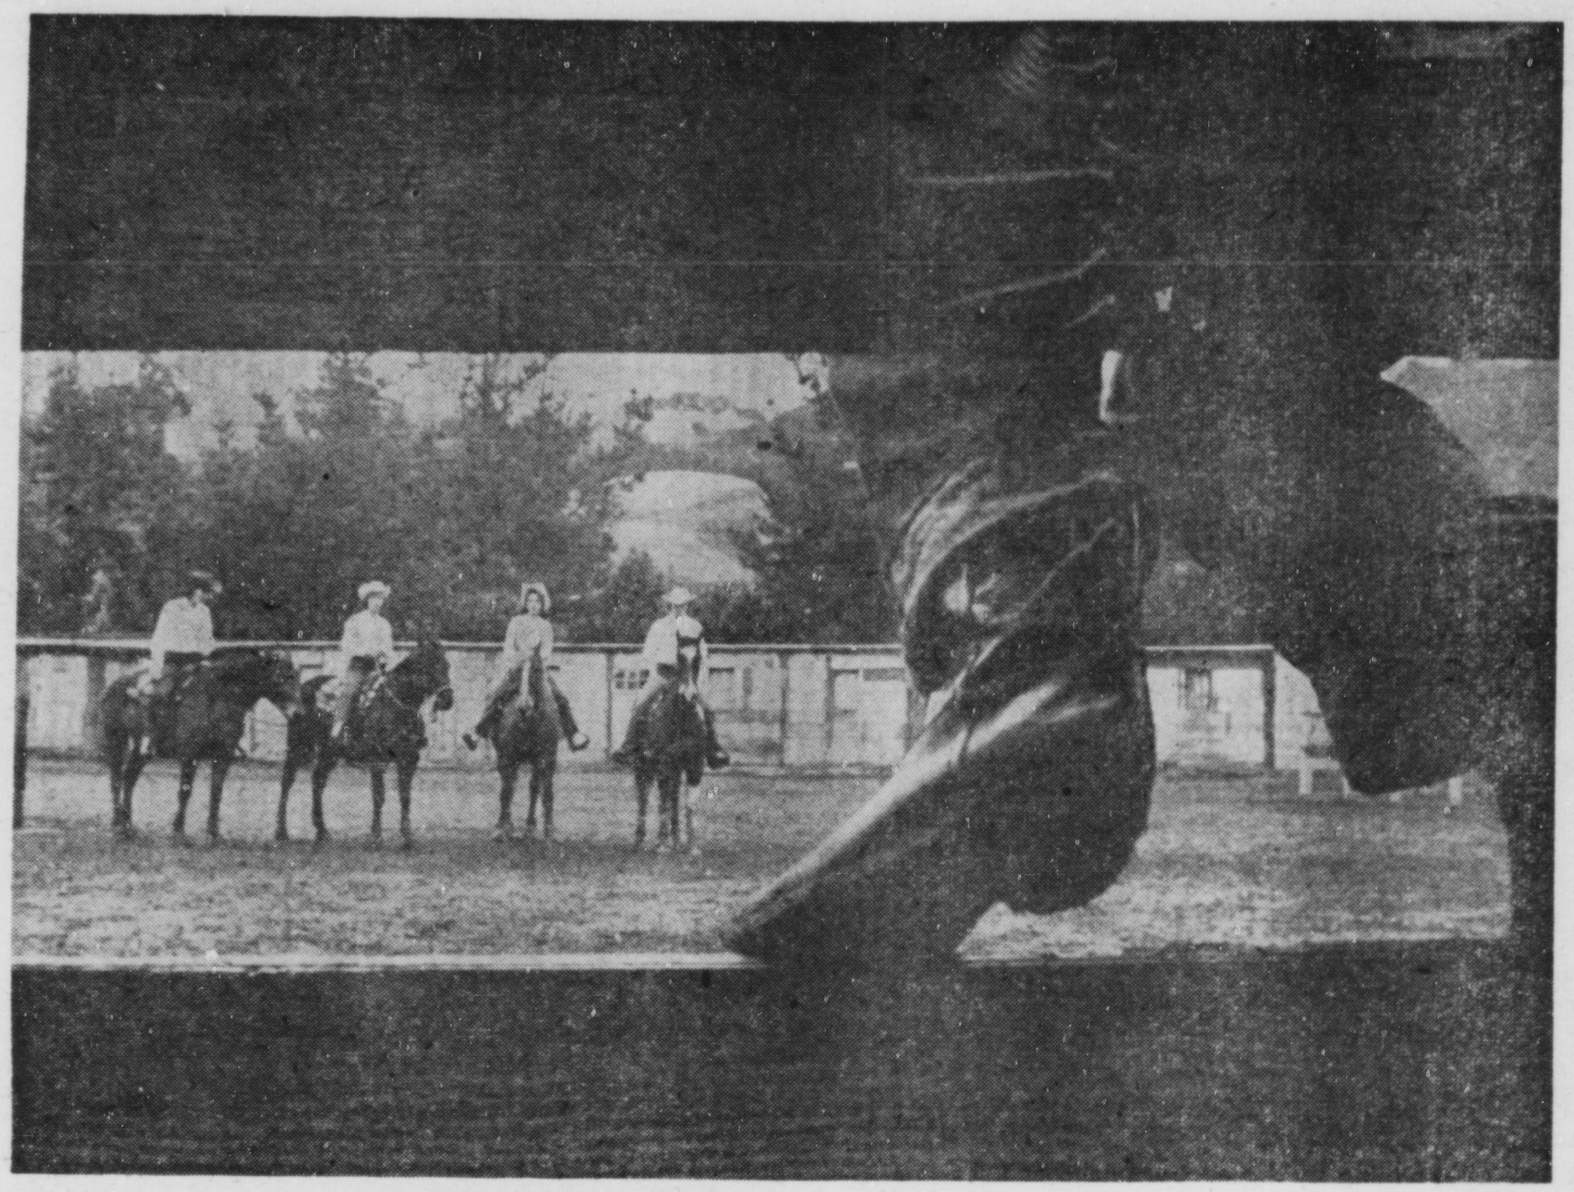

What components are required for a Stereo Phono System? The basic units required are: a high quality turntable or changer (wired for stereo), a stereo cartridge with diamond needle (the diamond needle is a must), a stereo amplifier (a stereo amplifier is really 2 amplifiers built together with integrated controls for balancing the 2 sound tracks), and 2 complete range speaker systems. At any time that the user desires, an AM-FM tuner, and a Tape Recorder can be added to make the Home Stereo Music Center complete.

The placement of the speaker systems is one of the most important requirements of a really good stereo system. When Catania Sound designs and builds the custom stereo models you see in our Hi-Fi Store, no one stereo system is built in less than two cabinets. Unless the room in which you are going to place your stereo system is extremely narrow (6 to 8 feet) and you are going to sit within 4 or 5 feet of the set, you will not get a good stereo effect, if you get a stereo effect at all. You must be able to move one speaker system with respect to the other, so that they can be placed properly in your home.

The public is invited to visit our Hi-Fi Sound room at any time for a complete demonstration of Stereophonic Sound. Let us show you about speaker placement.

By BONNIE GARETY

A mutual interest in horses, horseback riding and Girl Scouting drew six girls and two adults together in the summer of 1958 and resulted in the formation of Marin County Mounted Girl Scout Troop 171, first in Marin and one of nine in the entire United States.

Troop 171 meets on the second and fourth Wednesday evenings of each month alternating at the homes of the leader, Mrs. Richard Henika and assistant leader, Mrs. Albert Shell. Daytime meetings are held as frequently as possible at the Sleepy Hollow Stable in order for the girls to work on a program of the care and handling of horses and equipment, practice drilling and to take trail rides.

Mrs. Henika has extended a welcome to all girls who are interested in senior scouting and horses and has stressed the point that it is not necessary for the prospective member to own her own mount nor is it necessary for her to have been a Girl Scout previously. Some of the girls of Troop 171 own their own horses and others rent from the stable. The troop program includes the Senior Girl Scout "Five Point Program" requirement.

A "get acquainted" night was held Feb. 13 for 13 guests at the home of Mrs. Shell, 1 Legend Road, Sleepy Hollow. Troop 171 entertained the Oakland Mounted Troop with an evening of entertainment and "horse talk" including a color, sound film on "The Care and Handling of Horses." The combination of 13s proved to be a good one for all who participated.

Girls in Troop 171 are as follows: Maribeth Chouinard, Lynda Grant, Kim Morgan, Carol Newman, Virginia Odetto and Gale Shell.

An estimated 8,000 girls and 1,500 adults will set up their tents and exchange ideas on Girl Scouting when the 1959 Girl Scout Roundup takes place near Colorado Springs July 3 through 12. Eight girls have been selected for the patrol which will represent Marin County Girl Scouts for this event. They are as follows: Toni Leisure, San Rafael; Vicki Emerson and Barbara Ford, Mill Valley; Winnie Watkins, Belvedere; Randy Dougherty, Tiburon; Ginny Carter and Marianna Walsh, San Anselmo, and Barbara Hayes.

Requirements for selection which is open to all Marin schools, are as follows: girls must be at least 14 years old by July 29, 1959, and have completed the 9th grade in school; they must be registered Senior Scouts; they must be endorsed by their troop and leader and have fulfilled the camping requirements.

Girls from every U. S. territory and all five continents where members of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts are found, will be represented at the 1959 Round-up. Marin Girl Scouts heading for the Colorado Springs area in July plan to take polished redwood, abalone shells and poppy seeds to represent their section of California.

Conservation First

As part of their conservation program the Girl Scouts this year are embarking on a landscaping project, the area to be landscaped being their own camp, Sky Oaks.

Located approximately half way between Fairfax and the Meadow Club and a bout half a mile off the road, Sky Oaks has great natural beauty with its oaks and madrones and many other native trees and shrubs. However, its natural loveliness can be greatly enhanced through the addition of other natives.

The girls working on their different badges and nature work will have suggested projects worked out for them by Mrs. J. S. Detweiler who will make the master landscaping plan. Working with her will be Mrs. Lawrence Murray and Mrs. Parnell Finn, both of whom have had many years experience with the camping program at the camp.

Miss Lee Crouch of the U.S. Forest Service recently surveyed the camp, and many of her ideas about improving it will be incorporated in the landscaping plan.

IT IS PLANNED that the whole camp will become more secluded with Monterey pines. Ten the pine trees which have recently been donated by troops in Ross, are to grow along the access road. Toyon, California lilac, and Fremontia will be planted around the unit sites to insure privacy there, too. The trails through the camp will be re-designed and made wider so that girls can confine their travel to them and thus not disturb the new plantings.

Just before the recent rains girls from Ross under Mrs. Henry Eddy's direction planted wild flower seeds on the hillsides. Other Ross groups plan to grow additional plants from seeds and cuttings, according to Mrs. Alexander Black who is neighborhood chairman.

These plants along with ones grown by girls in other areas throughout the county will be varied enough to provide material for nature study and plant identification.

It is planned that much of the trail designing and improving will be done next summer by the older girls at day camp under the supervision of Mrs. Finn, day camp director. The whole program has brought forth much enthusiasm from the girls and their leaders who recognize that Sky Oaks is just about as nice a camp as one could ask for—and that it is a privilege for them to have a hand in its beautification.

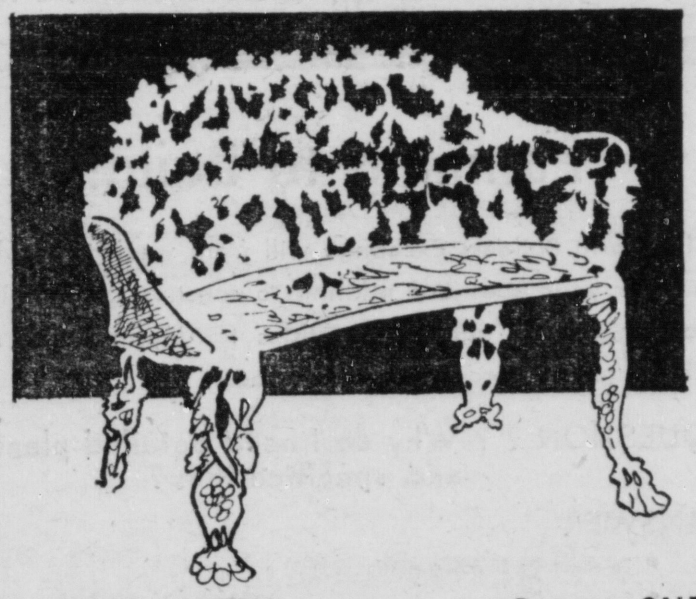

RAIN OR SHINE — Mounted Girl Scout Troop takes a rainy-day canter. Members of the troop are Maribeth Chouinard, Kim Morgan, Carol Newman, Virginia Odette, Gale Shell and Lynda Grant. (Independent-Journal Photos)

'HE'S SO LITTLE'--Sixteen-month-old Willie Simonds watches Mama weighing 4-pound puppy in a wash pan on kitchen scales.

'HE DOESN'T CRY' — Mama Carol Simonds bathes young boxer while son Willie takes lesson in behavior.

Mother And Child At Work

P.S.—Willie's Only 16 Months Old, But He Loves Guide Dogs' Kennels

By DORA PERRY

With today's high cost of living, women with small children often dream of finding a job they can do at home, while keeping an eye on the youngsters. Carol Simonds, who lives at 23 Meadow drive in Santa Venetia, goes the dream one better.

Carol is the kennel manager at Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., and takes Willie, her 16 months old son, to work with her each day.

"I never take him on the night calls, though," Carol is sure to announce.

And what are her night calls?

THE BREEDING program of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc. is regulated by the future training schedule of the school, and calls for four new litters of pups a month. Since pups, like babies, frequently arrive in the wee small hours, Carol often is called to the school in the middle of the night.

Carol has her own office in the kennels on the 11-acre training grounds. It is there, surrounded by anywhere from 120 to 180 dogs, little Willie spends his day while his mother performs her varied duties.

Like everyone on the staff at Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., Carol's primary interest in life is, and always has been, dogs.

If you ask Carol how she happened to get started in this work, she's apt to say: "My maiden name was Rover and people were always calling me Miss Barker or Miss Beagle, so I knew where I belonged."

Her real interest is obvious, though, in the way she handles the new-born pups, and the ease with which she distinguishes one of the wriggly, furry animals from another.

BACK IN 1940, while she was still in her teens, Carol answered an ad for a "college type" girl to do kennel work. The salary was room and board and pocket money. It wasn't until the end of the first month that she learned the "pocket money" was only $5. By then she was so wrapped up in the dogs and her work, she didn't consider quitting.

At the end of six months Carol moved to her second job, at 10 times the salary of the first, or, to be more explicit, room, board and $50 a month. She was working in her third kennel when the war broke out and having just celebrated her 21st birthday and being single, she decided her country needed her, and enlisted in the WAACS.

ALTHOUGH there were no women in the canine corps, Carol asked to be assigned to that department. After several months in the Transport Corps, Carol was sent to Fort Robinson in Nebraska with three other women for a try-out in the K-9 Corps. For various reasons, but mostly because of the hard work, the three others quickly asked to be transferred, leaving Carol with the distinction of being the only woman in the K-9 Corps.

It was there she met William F. Johns, who is now the executive director of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc. At that time Johns, as assistant director of the K-9 Corps, was supervising the training of thousands of combat and reconnaissance dogs, and Carol worked for him.

AFTER THE war was over both Johns and Carol remained active in the dog field, both being licensed professional handlers. They met occasionally in various parts of our country at dog shows.

In 1949 Johns was named executive director of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc. He immediately began revitalizing the school's breeding stock with his own dogs. Through dog fanciers he learned Carol was managing a pet shop in New Jersey and asked her to be kennel manager.

When Carol started to work for Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., the school was not as large as it is today, and she did not have two assistants.

ON THE DOT of 8 each morning Carol and Willie drive down Los Ranchitos road through the gates. If the weather is sunny and warm, Carol opens Willie's play pen on the lawn and he amuses himself until noon. If the weather is dismal, she puts the pen beside her desk as she makes collars or keeps books.

The first part of Carol's working day is spent doing the general housekeeping for her canine family: Sweeping and hosing down the quarters of the adult dogs, and changing the shredded newspaper bedding of the pups. The outside runs are cleaned and washed down after the inside is dry enough for the dogs to be indoors.

The main meal of the day —made up of equal parts of meat, prepared dry food and water—is made in a vast tub which holds 100 pounds. All the dogs partake of this first meal.

young pups receive a third meal.

After Carol has attended to the second feeding, Willie is put down for his long nap. It is then Carol brings the kennel records up to date: Makes notes of what pups are being delivered or returned to "adopted" homes. She also keeps an accurate account of the breeding schedule.

Later Willie, fresh from his nap, watches from his play pen as his mother grooms the dogs. Since every one of the 160 must be brushed frequently and washed when needed, this is quite a chore which Willie enjoys as he periodically offers a high pitched comment that makes no impression on either Carol or the animal.

IF THE TIME is right, Carol also takes care of breeding the dogs in the afternoon. At 4:30 she cleans the kennels, makes one last check, then bundling Willie into his heavy clothing she drives him home.

After spending so many hours with Guide Dogs, you'd think Carol would be anxious to relax. Indeed, her spare time is devoted to her hobby: raising and showing top prize - winning Pembroke Welsh Corgies.

Ask Carol what she'd like her son to be when he grows up and she'll probably answer: "Chances are Willie will be a Guide Dog trainer, and I hope so. Anybody who works at Guide Dogs for the Blind can tell you the work is fascinating.

"When you see the blind people arrive at the school having so much difficulty getting around — then only 4 weeks later watch them leave with the quick, confident stride of a sighted man, it really gets you!"

SINCE GUIDE DOGS for the Blind, Inc., was organized 17 years ago 765 blind men and women have received Guide Dogs from the school, absolutely free. Although it costs approximately $1,700 to train each man-dog team, no charge is made to the blind, as the school is entirely operated on voluntary contributions, usually in the form of annual drives.

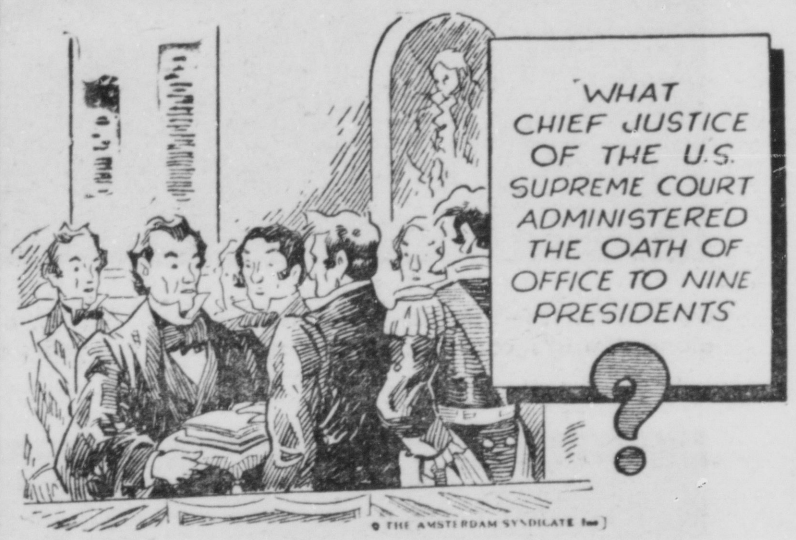

The 1959 campaign of the Marin County Committee of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., opened on Monday under the co-chairmanship of Mrs. Maurice A. Gale and Mrs. Fisher Kinslow, Jr. Contributions to this worthy cause may be sent to the volunteer treasurer: William P. Murray of the First National Bank in San Rafael.

Marin Is A Treasury Of Vanishing Wildlife

This Is What You'll See On Tramps In Marshland, Chapparal Or Ocean Areas

By S. THOMPSON WALKER
Curator
Junior Museum

Marin County offers a variety of natural homes or habitats for many different kinds of wildlife. In the study of plants or animals, even on the most casual basis, it is important that these areas be considered as a part of the study because they can tell the observer much a bout the life and habits of the plants or animals being studied.

The extent of the habitat will vary with the animal being studied. It might be an area covering many miles if the animal under study is an eagle, or it might be a single bush or tree as is often the case in the study of insects.

In the study of plants it is often difficult to determine the reasons for a plant selecting a certain area; it may be features as subtle as soil acidity, drainage or average temperatures. Fortunately many of the local animals have more obvious reasons for their selection of homes and this makes study much easier.

THE NEED FOR food is the basic reason for animals living where they do. If an animal has a diversified diet and can feed on carrion, fruit, insects and garbage as the crow does then it can range over a broadly varied area with great success. This is one of the plentiful animals that thrives on civilization as it is known today. On the other hand an animal with a rather selective diet and restricted feeding habits may find life increasingly difficult. An example of this might be the long-billed curlew which requires a combination of open meadows and marshes where it feeds on insects and small aquatic animals. As the marshes are drained and filled this is one of the birds that must move or die.

For the beginner or casual observer Marin County can be divided into three general areas; the bay, with its mud flats and marshes, the open rolling hills and valleys or chaparral areas, and the rocky cliffs, sandy beaches and rocky points of the ocean coast. These are areas that actually contain many smaller specific and varied habitats but for the beginner the three general areas will serve as a useful start.

BAY with its marshes, mud flats, brackish sloughs.

1. Egrets — the yellow-billed American Egret and the smaller black-billed Snowy Egret are both white birds with long necks and legs that stand in shallow water waiting for fish or stalk slowly through the marsh in search of insects or frogs.

2. Western Grebe — On open water the dark back, white breast and neck and black-topped head are sure signs of the slim graceful western grebe. Repeated dives and long stays underwater as it searches for fish give just proof of its ability and fame as a diver.

3. Red-winged Blackbird— A solid black body relieved only by a vivid red patch on each wing clearly identifies this bird as it teeters on the end of a tule or flies low over the marshes.

4. Killdeer — Rocky beaches or dry fill along the bay usually produce a pair of these noisy birds. A white band on the forehead and two black bands on the breast are sure identification of this plover.

5. Marsh Hawk—The sight of a gull sized bird with long wings and a long narrow tail with a white patch at the base beating slowly over the marshes is proof enough of the presence of the marsh hawk.

6. Willet—A large grayish bird that probes the mud at the edge of the waves and jerks its head when at rest is probably the willet; if it shows a broad white band in a black wing as it flies it is surely the willet.

7. Long-billed Curlew — Easily seen at great range is the 6 or 7 inch down-curved bill which serves as proof that the large brown bird with blackish brown streaks and markings is the curlew. It uses the bill to probe in the mud for small animals.

8. Avocet — A light head and neck and a back that is banded black and white combine with a strange up-curved bill to identify the avocet as it sweeps the shallow water and soft mud in search of food.

9. Coot—This is the very common stocky black bird with a white bill that feeds in fields, marshes, lawns and dives in the sloughs and bay. Although the size and general shape of a duck it is really one of the rails, a group of shy seldom-seen birds of the marsh.

10. Harbor Seal—This marine mammal often rests in numbers on the mud flats and bars around the bay. It is smaller than the sea lion averaging 5 feet in length and has yellowish gray fur with darker spots. Often seen around Angel Island and Sausalito.

CHAPARRAL, rolling hills of grass, oak, manzanita and madrone.

1. Turkey Vulture — This large black bird flies with its wings held in a shallow V with the feathers at the tip spread like fingers. The tiny red head hardly shows at a distance but the eyes in that head are remarkably sharp and can find the vulture's food (dead animals) from a distance of many miles.

2. Brown Towhee—A pedestrian type bird usually seen scratching among grass and leaves for small insects and weed seeds. The plain brown body and rather long brown tail are distinctive in their plainness.

3. House Finch—Often called the Linnet, this is a common bird recognized by the bright red head and breast. The sparrow-like female is grayish brown and is best identified through her association with her brightly colored husband. These birds commonly nest in the garden or patio.

4. Red-tailed Hawk — This greatly persecuted bird may be seen sailing in large lazy circles high in the sky. The body is brown above with the breast light tan or white and the stomach streaked with dark brown. The dull reddish brown tail often shows in good light as the hawk circles in the sun.

5. California Jay — Often called a scrub jay because of a preference for open scrub oak country this bird is generally blue on the upperparts and gray below. The shoulders and back have a large brown patch that clearly shows as the bird flies squawking from tree to tree.

6. California Woodpecker— The presence of dead trees and posts with hundreds of acorns embedded in holes drilled in the surface is a sure indication that the acorn woodpecker is at work in the area. The broad black wings with white patches and the snowy rump are final proof that the bird seen is the noisy storer of so many provisions.

7. Meadowlark — The rich happy song of the meadowlark is probably a better known indication of its presence than the actual sight of the bird. This common member of the blackbird and oriole family can usually be seen on power lines, fence posts or in open fields where the bright yellow breast with the black V stand out clearly.

8. California Ground Squirrel — This squirrel has a brownish tan body marked with scattered spots of black and gray that give it a grizzled appearance. The tail is rather short and only slightly bushy. Their food habits and burrows can be troublesome to man if they are not properly controlled.

9. Badger—This interesting and attractive animal is seldom seen in person but the large oval holes he digs as he searches for ground squirrels are a sure sign of his presence. Look for the broad flattened body of this animal during early morning or late afternoon in open rolling hills where the burrows of the ground squirrel are common.

OCEAN COAST with tide pools, rocky points, sand beaches and rocky cliffs.

1. Cormorant — The black forms of the cormorant are common as they fly close to the water with necks stretched straight out and wings beating rapidly. They ride low on the water when resting and dive with great ease. They are now protected by law in California although they were shot in great numbers a few years ago.

2. Brown Pelican — This huge bird is the picture of grace in flight despite his grotesque appearance on land. The generally gray body, whitish head and huge bill, which is carried at a downward angle in flight, identify this bird as he dives with a heavy splash in search of fish.

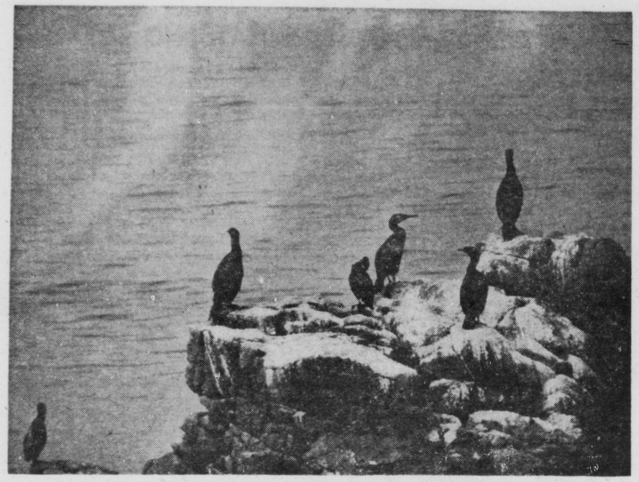

3. Sandpiper — There are many small birds that run along the beaches just out of reach of the incoming waves. Most of them are brown above with light or white underparts. The bill is rather long and slender, the tail short, and the body is held horizontally to the ground. A common sandpiper is the spotted, so named from the dots of brownish black on the white underparts.

4. Surf Scooter — Along most of the coast black heavy bodied birds can be seen riding the waves just off shore. The bill of this bird is heavy and distinctive being colored white and black at the base, reddish for much of its length and bright orange at the tip. When taking off they often paddle or run heavily on the surface for some distance.

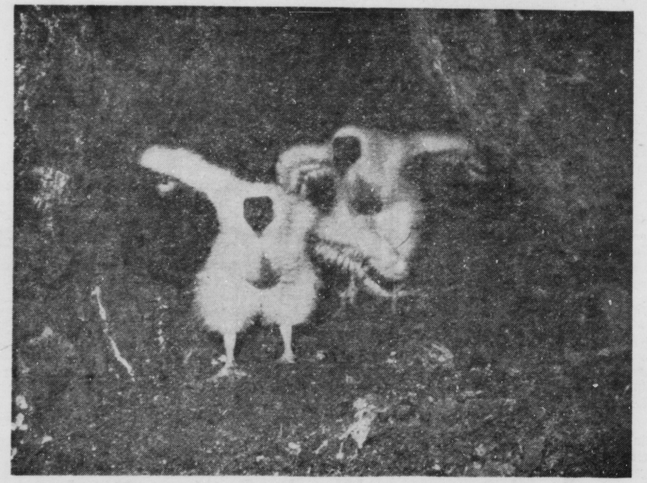

5. Raven—Ravens are solitary birds and can be seen singly or in pairs sailing along the crests of the cliffs at the ocean or on the beach feeding on dead fish and animals washed ashore. They look much like a large crow but sail or soar in the manner of a hawk when the winds are right. Large stick nests seen on the cliffs are usually raven nests.

6. Stellar Sea Lion — Several of the sheltered beaches in the Pt. Reyes area can usually be counted on to have anywhere from a dozen to a hundred or more sea lions. Unlike seals the sea lion is a fairly agile animal despite his great size (a male may be 10 to 12 feet long and weigh a ton) and can by means of rotating hind flippers climb the rocks and lower cliffs along the coast.

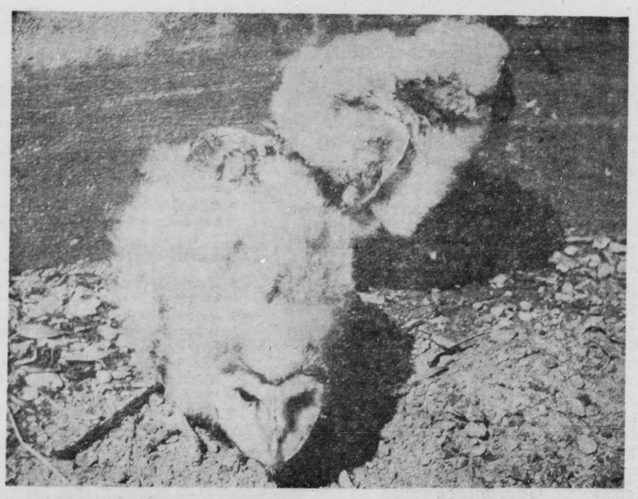

7. Oyster-catcher — Rocky ledges and outcroppings along the coast are favorite areas of a large black bird with an amazing bright red bill. The bill is used to pry shellfish from the rocks and to open the shells.

CORMORANTS—This fish-eater is common along Marin's coast. They are still being shot, and it was legal to do so until three years ago.

TURKEY VULTURES—Believe it or not, these strange creatures were photographed within San Rafael city limits. Their natural nest was at the base of a hollow redwood tree. Nests are characterized by an offensive smell.

BABY BARN OWLS—These strange-looking creatures were already 1 foot high when they fell out of their nest in a palm tree on the Dominican College campus. They are common in Marin, especially around large homes and barns.

ANTHONY'S GREEN HERON — You may catch a glimpse of this rather rare marsh bird if you're lucky. It is named for the irridescent green plumage on its head. Bird stands about two feet high. (Photos by S. Thompson Walker)

For Birds And People

The birds' one assured claim on Marin's fast-vanishing coastline has been established by the Marin Conservation League with the help of the Marin Audubon Society. The sanctuary set up on the eastern shore of Richardson Bay assures the birds a refuge and assures Marinites of a place where they can become acquainted with rare as well as common species of waterfowl.

In the larger picture, the sanctuary is a natural located in th Pacific Flyway, which is to birds what Highway 101 is to Marin commuters. Birds who partake in annual migrations need a place to rest and stop, refuel, however.

ON THE HUMAN side, the sanctuary offers a place where conservation education may be carried on. The old Lyford mansion which was moved from Strawberry to the Rose Verrall property off Tiburon boulevard has been renovated and is now being used for classes.

Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls are among the groups who will take advantage of the program, which is directed by Mrs. Calvin Terwilliger of Mill Valley, education chairman for the local chapter of the National Audubon Society.

The program is much broader than just bird watching. Boys and girls go on field trips in areas away from their homes. Fairfax youngsters learn about creek and bay life. Mill Valley youngsters are taken up into the hills, where they are treated to an ever-changing parade of plant life.

"EACH WEEK is full of surprises," says Mrs. Terwilliger.

The project is not complete. Eventually, the conservationists hope to extend their acreage to around 400. First on the list is the piece of land between the Verrall property and Tiburon Highway. Funds are also being solicited to help buy the stretch of coastline between the sanctuary and Belvedere's tidelands, so that the whole area will be protected from real estate development.

The proximity of the sea plane base at Sausalito alarms neither the conservationists nor the birds, surprisingly enough. Motor boats are another matter.

In order to protect the sanctuary itself, the conservationists will seek legislation to keep small craft out of the arm of the bay where wildfowl congregate.

WEASEL—Seldom seen, this wily creature is responsible for a certain amount of killing, particularly around henhouses. He is not protected by law.

Dominican Broadcast Focuses On Little-Known U.S. Music

A recent Pageant of American Music broadcast by Dominican College over KTIM attracted attention to an interesting part of our musical history.

The works played were those of the American-Moravian composer John Antes (1740-1811), who was also a missionary, watchmaker, violin-maker, mechanic and inventor!

His trios—three altogether—had been published in England by a "Giovanni A-T-S," who called himself a "Dilletante Americano." His none other than John Antes.

THE TRIOS WERE discovered in 1941 in Winston-Salem, N.C. and the broadcast by Dominican was very likely their first West Coast performance.

However, those trios are only a very small part of American - Moravian music which has been brought to light by Dr. Donald M. McCorkle, whose research is follow with great interest by the music department of Dominican.

Especially interested is Sister Mary Dominic, who says that 6,000 to 10,000 manuscripts have been found in church archives back East, containing about 1,000 symphonies, string quartets and trios and well over 6,000 sacred works, consisting of choral anthems, cantatas, oratorios and arias.

It is an altogether amazing discovery of which one would like to hear more samples.

THE NEXT CONCERT of the Bay Area Ballet Company in Marin will be tomorrow at Angelico Hall, on the Dominican campus in San Rafael.

Two premiers are scheduled: "Rappacini's Daughter," a dramatic ballet, and an abstract ballet to music by Vivaldi. Two successful ballets of last season, "Entr'act" and "Jeux d'Enfants" will complete the program.

San Rafael High School students will present a full dress production of "Oklahoma" next weekend.

Sally Hobson, who has leading roles in the ballet, will also be a soloist in "Oklahoma."

Early Religions

Three distinguished scholars examine the major pre-Christian religious systems in "Religions of the Ancient East," the 14th and latest volume to be issued in "The Twentieth Century Encyclopedia of Catholicism." To be published by Hawthorn Books on March 10, the book discusses the growth and influence of the beliefs of Egypt, Sumer, Babylon, Phoenicia and early Iran.

Music & Drama

The March 13 and 14 performances are under direction of Hugo Rinaldi, who performed the show more than 300 times in San Francisco. General director is Edward Day; choreographer is Leona Norman and vocal director is Byron Jones.

HOUSEKEEPING — At Guide Dogs kennels, daily housecleaning involves hosing down first inside, then outside. Willie, 16 months, watches well out of water's way. Pups are outside while inside is cleaned and vice versa.

St. Raphael's Guild Readies Comedy For Staging In April

Rehearsals for a delightful comedy, "The Velvet Glove," by Rosemary Casey, to be presented in St. Raphael's auditorium the evenings of April 9, 10, and 12, at 8:30 p.m., sponsored by St. Raphael's Mothers' Guild are in full swing now.

Directing "The Velvet Glove," a Christopher award play and success on Broadway, will be Mrs. John F. McCarthy who directed the highly entertaining "Seven Nuns at Las Vegas" last spring.

Mrs. McCarthy brings extensive experience and training in directing, acting and teaching to the role of director. She studied for her master's degree in speech and drama at the Catholic University of America where she studied under Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, Rev. Gilbert Hartke, O.P., the noted head of the department of speech and drama, Walter Kerr, the distinguished critic, author, and playwright of the New York Herald-Tribune, and Alan Schneider, New York director.

Mrs. McCarthy also taught drama and directed at the Academy of the Presentation in San Francisco, and taught drama at Dominican College. In-between having six children she took three leading versatile roles for the Ross Valley Players. Her husband is State Senator John F. McCarthy.

In the midst of all this turmoil the reverend mother seeks to soothe and smooth ruffled feathers with her "velvet glove" touch.

BRINGING the finesse of experience to the role of reverend mother is Mrs. Louis J. Leonardi who taught drama at San Rafael High School where she directed many plays and operettas. She also was director of the St. Raphael Players, a thespian group that used to produce the annual St. Patrick Day plays.

Ralph Quaglin, the bishop, also brings experience to his demanding role. A newcomer to Marin, Quaglin is recently from Florida where he had the lead in "The Affairs of State" and "Mary Queen of Scots" in the Tampa Little Theater.

The kindly old monsignor will be played by William Slattery. A past president of the Knights of Columbus and the "perennial" president of the Holy Name Society of St. Raphael's parish, Slattery, among other accomplishments, is also the father of 10 children.

Mrs. Bette Botzenhardt, who portrayed sister superior in the successful comedy presented last year "Seven Nuns at Las Vegas" will play the energetic, determined dean of women, Sister Monica.

THE LOVE INTEREST casts two naturals in the roles of the talented young professor played by Milton Schwartz and the secretary to reverend mother, played by Mrs. Raymond Schmidt. Schwartz won a football scholarship to Santa Clara from San Rafael High School and after service in the Navy for three years, married, has four children and is manager of Casa Marin Furniture. Mrs. Schmidt too is a graduate of San Rafael High School, the young mother of five children and an often sought model.

Rounding out the cast are Miss Marion Egan as Sister Lucy, James Bradley as Father Benton, the assistant to the bishop, and Andy Carrino as Mr. Barton, the publisher. Miss Egan is a school teacher who has taught in far off places like Morocco, Venezuela, and the Hawaiian Islands. Bradley is active in dramatics in high school, and Carrino is a graduate of the University of San Francisco.

FOUR HANDS AT PIANO — Milton and Peggy Saukind of Sausalito have won praise from critics wherever they have played. They will be guest artists Friday evening with the Symphony Guild Orchestra of Marin. (Jacqueline Paul Photo)

SALKINDS OF SAUSALITO

Four Hands At Two Pianos Highlight Symphony Concert

By BARBARA ATKISSON

The Salkinds, Milton and Peggy, duo-pianists of considerable note, will be guest artists with the Symphony Guild of Marin Orchestra March 13 at the Catholic High School auditorium in Greenbrae.

They will play Mozart's two-piano Concerto in E Flat Major with the orchestra under the baton of Sandor Salgo. Otherwise, the program will include the orchestra's interpretations of Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Corl Maria Von Weber," Beethoven's "Pastorale Symphony," Berlioz' "Roman Carnival Overture."

Naturally, the Symphony Guild is pleased and proud to be the Salkinds' host and will expect a full house of Salkind fans at the orchestra's second-of-the-season concert; for the brilliant young artists have a devoted following of music-lovers from all over the Bay Area who may be counted on to drive miles and cross bridges, in any weather, to hear and see this attractive pair at work.

AS NICE A young couple as you'd hope to meet, Milton and Peggy Salkind live in Sausalito with their two children (Karen, 7, and Mark, 5) and two pianos. Milton and Peggy are both teachers of their favorite instrument and manage to stay home most of the time in spite of a fairly heavy concert schedule which will, this spring, include The Oakland Symphony, the San Francisco Composers' Forum, Monterey Peninsula College, and appearances in New York and Washington, D.C.

EAST OR WEST, the critics call them "unforgettable." Of a recent concert (Feb. 1) in La Jolla, one of the raves read, "The Salkinds' artistry and technical skill were immediately apparent and their obvious enthusiasm for and devotion to their music were contagious."

When they were guest artists with the San Francisco Symphony, critics on the city papers filled their columns with superlatives; but musicians know them best for having revived one-piano four-hand music and commissioning young composers to write it.

LATELY, the Salkinds have commissioned a work from Seymour Shifrin of the University of California musical faculty. Before Shifrin, Robert Kurka and Andrew Imbrie were commissioned to compose for the Salkinds; and coincidentally, all three composers, in turn, have received the coveted Brandeis University award for composition.

Milton and Peggy's method of raising the necessary funds for this worthy enterprise is ingenious if not unique. To quote the New York Times:

"Milton Salkind and his wife have found a way both to help composers and to extend the literature in which they have the greatest interest, that for four hands at one piano. They give concerts in private homes to raise money to give commissions for duets."

The results have been gratifying for everyone concerned; and subsequent recitals of the commissioned and other four-hand one-piano works have brough forth such admiring observations as this one from R. H. Hagan of the San Francisco Chronicle: "—They played with a mutual zest and lyrical rapport which convinced me that no two pianists should try to play on one keyboard without producing a marriage license first."

The concert on March 13 that will star the Salkinds will be open to the public as well as the Symphony Guild membership. Single tickets will be available to non-members on the evening of the performance at the Catholic High School auditorium. The time is 8:30 p.m.

Wisteria Mad

To judge from the examples we've seen, some gardeners must look on their houses simply as props to support a wisteria vine. And lovely as the wisteria is, we think this is going too far. To prevent such an impression, thin and prune wisteria back after the spring bloom. Don't be delicate. Overgrown vines will stand severe shaping and pruning.

Bumper Crops On Tiny Plot

There's no question that home-grown vegetables taste far better than their store-bought counterparts. Nor is there a doubt that Californians are luckier than most in being able to harvest crops through most of the year. Even with limited space, you can usually grow enough to give your friends an occasional treat. A member of the California Assn. of Nurserymen will help you plan a crop to best take advantage of both your climate and space problems.

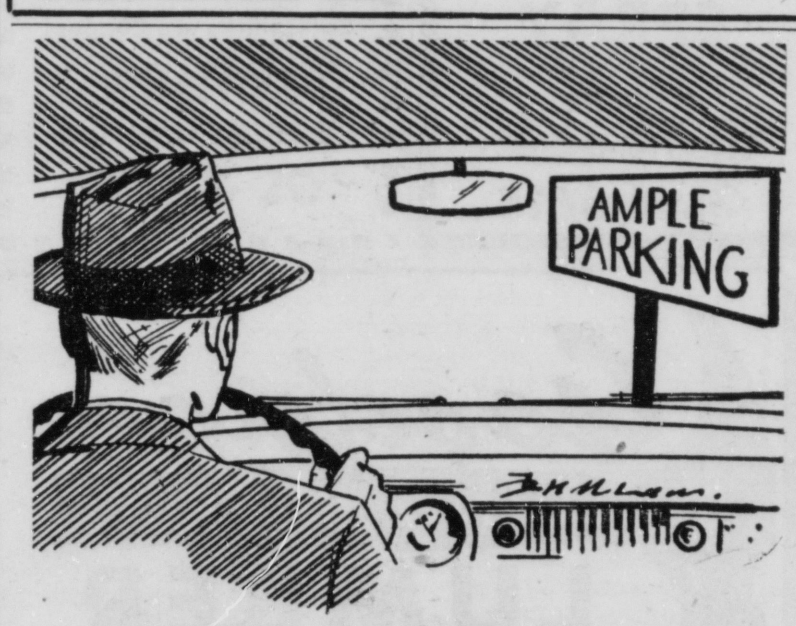

Starry Carpet

Star Jasmine is a versatile vine—to be used as a climber or as a shrubby and attractive ground cover. If you grow it as a ground cover, keep it down by anchoring with wickets and keep it bushy by heading back the shoots. To fill an area, set Star Jasmine plants about five feet apart in a good soil mixture and keep them well watered.

ABALONE (Haliotis sp.) — An Abalone clings to the rocks with a powerful muscle which forms the foot. At extreme low tides it may be pried off the rocks and the foot split, pounded, and made into delicious steaks. Abalone shells are conspicuous and handsome, showing beautiful, irridescent colors inside. In the past, tremendous quantities were taken for food, and one sees great mounds of shells along the Monterey coast. Now the open season is limited, and size and number of catch are restricted. Black, red, and green abalones are found, some as much as 9 inches in length. (From Out-of-Doors in Marin, copyrighted by M. F. Austin)

RED-SHAFTED FLICKER — The Red-shafted Flicker, 11 to 13¼ inches long, is quite conspicuously marked, for its back and underparts are heavily barred and spotted with black on light brown and gray. It has a black crescent on its breast, orange-vermillion moustaches and underwing and tail surfaces. In flight the orange color is plainly displayed. In springtime the Flicker drums a long rolling tatoo on some dry limb or board or chimney. It has various loud calls, some sounding like "flicker, flicker, flicker!" A nest is built in a hole excavated in a tree or a house — where 6 to 10 eggs are laid in May. Half of the Flicker's food consists of ants which he gathers by extending his tongue along the ground some 2½ in. beyond the tip of his bill. When the swarming ants cover its sticky surface it is suddenly drawn in for a feast. (From Out-of-Doors in Marin, copyrighted by M. F. Austin)

FOR SMALLER GARDENS — You may have the glory of Southern magnolia without being crowded out of garden and patio. The answer is Magnolia St. Mary's, which never becomes as big, the blossoms are magnificent. (Independent-Journal Photo)

SPEAKING OF SUPERLATIVES

The Grandest, The Gaudiest (We're Talking Of Magnolias)

You have to reach for superlatives to describe the Magnolia family. They are the grandest and the gaudiest. In short, says one member of the California Assn. of Nurserymen, they're magnificent.

And this holds true whether it's the opulent Southern Magnolia or any of several deciduous varieties that bloom so profusely in late winter and spring. Both will stop traffic on the street where you live.

It seems a general habit of Californians to plant the evergreen Southern Magnolia more in Southern California than in the northern part of the state. Similarly, more of the deciduous varieties have found their ways into gardens farther north. Actually, both do well in either area.

THE SOUTHERN Magnolia, as most everyone knows, is a full, glossy green tree of unusual charm. At maturity it will dwarf the small garden, but growth is slow enough to warrant planting it even where space is limited. Its blooms are up to 8 inches across. A new variety — St. Mary Magnolia — is ideal for smaller gardens. Growth is slower, and the tree is smaller at maturity. Moreover, the blooms are unbelievably huge —a foot or more in diameter when fully opened.

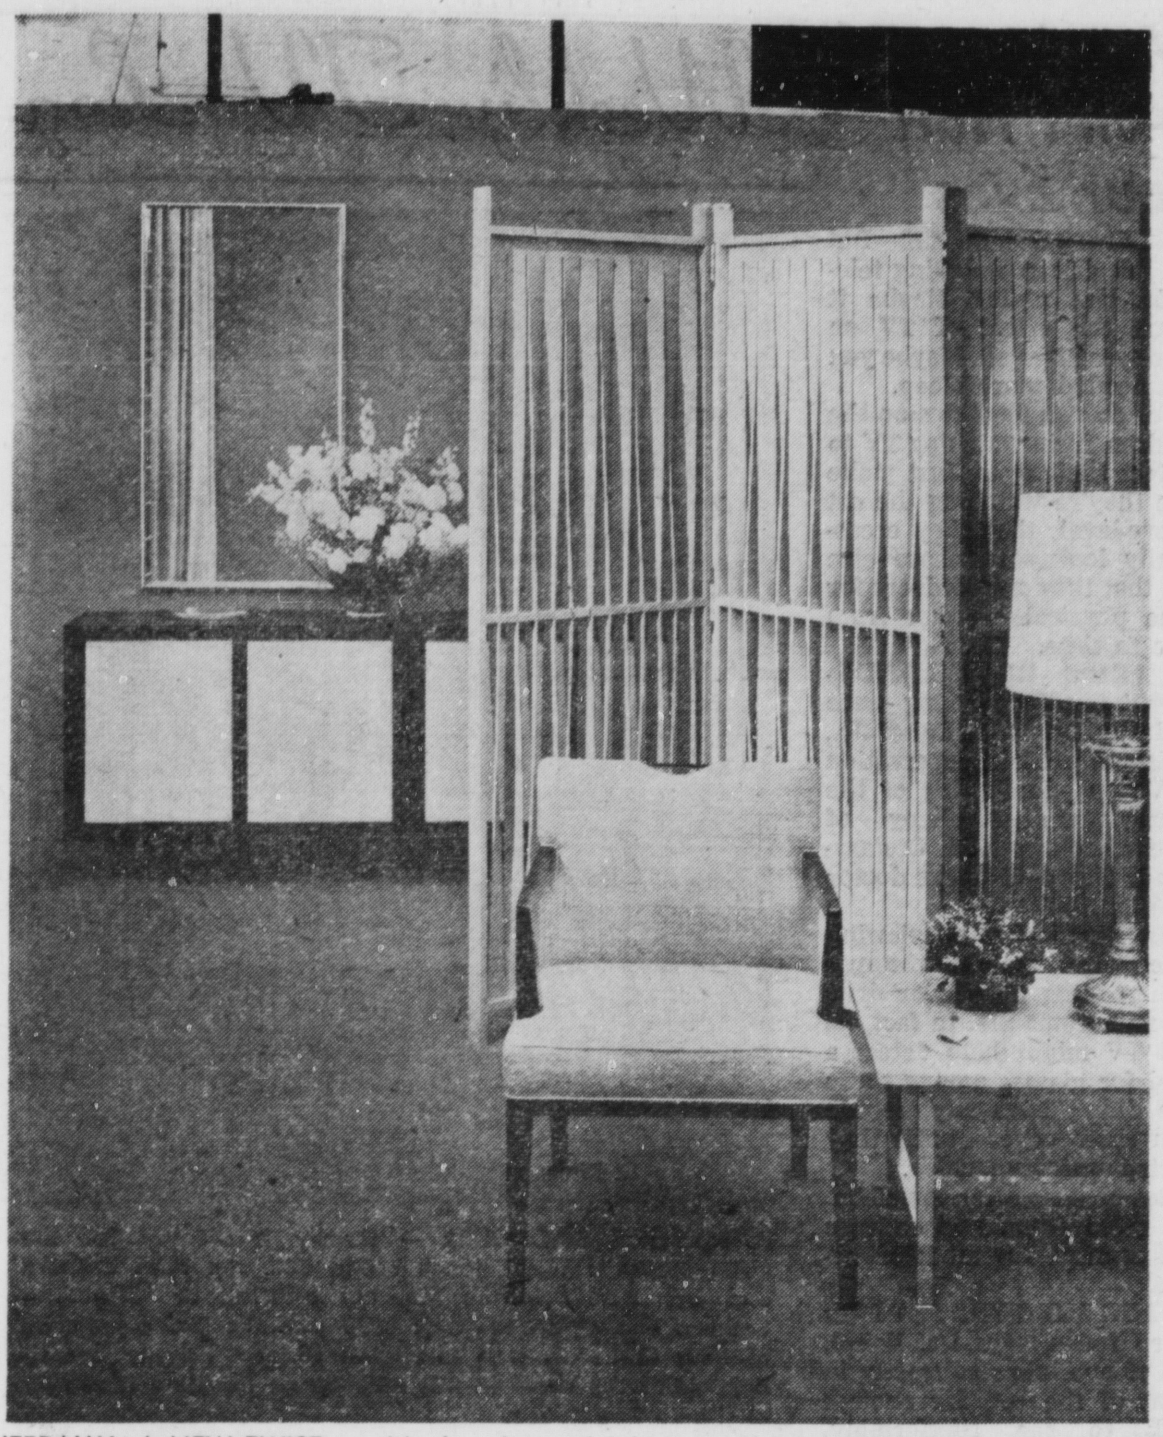

Of the deciduous members of the family, the several forms of Saucer Magnolia are by far the widest grown. They are often and mistakenly called tulip trees because the blooms resemble a tulip. These are white with purple shadings. Some, indeed, are more purple than white. These are the gaudy Magnolias — literally smothered with blooms in late winter or early spring.

Among the favorites — and deservedly so — is the smaller Star Magnolia. It is free-blooming with pinwheel-type blooms. A Pink Star Magnolia is also available, as well as a recent introduction, Red Star Magnolia. This one, with deep purple and pink shadings is, as yet, in limited supply. But it's one that will surely win wide approval.

Botanical names of the Magnolias listed above are: Southern Magnolia (Magnolia grandiflora); St. Mary Magnolia (M. g. St. Mary); Saucer Magnolia (M. soulangeana); Star Magnolia (M. stellata).

GARDENER'S CHECKLIST

- A shot of weed killer will eliminate the competition and get your lawn off on the right foot. Never use it it on clover or dichondra, however, since it will eliminate that, too.
- Camellia plants that have become too leggy will bush out after light pruning of terminal branches. Try to time this to take advantage of a few blooms for the house.
- If you're preparing a planting bed, use a good grade steer manure since it is usually weed free — also higher in food value than cow manure.
- Spring's warmer weather will bring new growth to roses, and the combination will bring out the aphis. Keep your spray gun handy.

LITERALLY, A NEW TWIST — It's the plywood which has the twist in this contemporary screen. Vertical cuts are made in plywood sheet and strips are set apart with spacers. This idea will work for outdoor fences, too.

INDOORS OR OUT

Give The Panel A Clever Twist

Here's "screen test" for your home: Could you use a decorative, lightweight screen for a room divider, furniture backdrop, shield for a work area, or to help define certain areas of the house?

If you answered "yes" to at least one of these possibilities, look at this design idea. It's an unusual screen designed by architect Alan Liddle with a three-dimensional pattern which is achieved by inserting spreaders between saw cuts made in a thin sheet of fir plywood.

Liddle's screen uses three sections of ¼-inch fir plywood in a light lumber frame. After two-inch wide strips are cut almost the whole length of the panel, each strip is twisted 90 degrees at mid-point and glued into place against spreader blocks.

THE RESULTING screen has a texture of highlights and shadows. And it's not expensive — the materials cost about $12.

You can do this job best with a portable saber saw, which can be rented for a modest charge at most lumber yards, hardware stores and equipment rental agencies.

A FREE PLAN showing details for several screens like this may be obtained by writing Marin Magazine, c/o Independent-Journal, P.O. Box, 330, San Rafael. Allow three weeks for delivery.

Easy Does It

One good thing about winter is that your lawn needs less attention to mowing. When you do mow, however, the California Association of Nurserymen reminds you to set the cutting blades down and cut the grass shorter than you would in summer. Don't mow right after a rain and in between mowings stay off the grass when wet to minimize the compaction.

Flat Base Needed

Resilient floor tiles should never be laid over a single wood floor. A subflooring of plywood or hardboard is necessary to serve as a base for the tiles.

Honorable Retreat Under Own Power

When an electric hand saw (the kind that uses a circular blade) stalls while you are making a cut, do not release the trigger switch.

While still pressing the switch, back up the saw a little, which will allow the blade to regain its momentum. You can now resume cutting or you can lift up the saw, shut off the motor and stop for a moment.

Releasing the trigger switch while the saw is stalled in the stock may cause damage to the switch, dull the blade and put severe pressure on the motor.

Do-It-Yourself

Indoor Barbecue Fits In Fireplace

Outdoor chefs who would like to pursue their hobby all year instead of just during warm weather when they can operate grills outdoors now can do so if they have fireplaces in their homes.

A new barbecue brazier which can be set up either outdoors or indoors in a fireplace has been introduced by a major manufacturer of such outdoor grills.

The new brazier comes with two sets of legs. One set is of standard length for use outdoors.

Legs of the other set are only three inches long so the grill can be set up in the fireplace. The short set also is handy for use on the beach so the grill can be tended with everyone seated.

Carry Chair Along

Lightweight folding chairs are ideal for carrying to outdoor concerts, ball games, golf matches, picnics or even on hikes. Some aluminum chairs weigh less than four pounds.

Last week, we discussed the characteristics of English cabinetmakers: Hepplewhite, Sheraton and Chippendale - and of the way MAGNAVOX was aware of stylings and tradition.

MAGNAVOX has pioneered fine sound reproduction since 1915, when it was the first to develop the electro-dynamic speaker which is now the voice of every modern sound system.

This week, we'll point out some of the characteristics of French Provincial furniture - and of the MAGNAVOX 24" French Provincial Normandy TV set in hand-rubbed selected cherry. It has the MAGNAVOX Gold Seal Gurantee, a 332 sq. in. picture tube, 3 speakers, tone control, input jack for record players, and swivel easters - so you can turn it to the most convenient viewing position.

French Provincial is of the Louis XV and XVI period, and compares with the "country furniture" of Chippendale and Hepplewhite. Because of the kinship of the American and French Revolution, in 1800, French styles became popular in America - and still are. The French Directoire style was inspired by the art forms of ancient Greece. The English facsimile, after 1800, is called Regency, because at that time, George IV was Regent of the British Isles. MAGNAVOX Windsor TV set, with 24" screen and genuine authentic 18th Century style, comes in hand-rubbed mahogany . . . Hear it at HOY'S new San Rafael showrooms! (To be continued)

Watching TV Won't Hurt Your Eyes

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI)—Did you fall asleep watching television last night? Maybe it wasn't the effect of TV on your eyes after all. Maybe you just needed more sleep.

Nor do you have to stop the children from watching TV to protect their eyes. Just make sure they're watching the set at eye-level, that they occasionally look somewhere else and that they get outdoors for some physical exercise from time to time.

THESE RECOMMENDATIONS for TV viewing were made by Dr. R. J. Beitel Jr., chairman of the Conservation of Vision committee of the Pennsylvania Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology He's also an eye doctor in Allentown.

Dr. Beitel says televiewing is no more harmful to the eyes than reading a book or driving an automobile. In fact, he said TV might help detect a need for glasses among those who didn't have any trouble with their eyes until they started watching video.

But he does offer some simple rules to guarantee ease and comfort for all televiewers.

MAKE SURE THE SET IS in sharp focus, says Dr. Beitel, and if possible sit directly in front of the set, far enough back to see comfortably, avoiding angles.

From time to time, look away from the set and focus your eyes at a distant object. Never watch in total darkness —a soft, indirect light is recommended — and keep the size of the screen in proportion to the size of the room.

History Of Bay Area On 'Bonanza'

The colorful history of San Francisco and the Bay Area, will be examined in "Bonanza," a new local program to be telecast by KRON-TV Sundays from 12:30 to 1 p.m. starting tomorrow.

Each telecast in this 13-week series will be a sampling of the vast treasure chest of visual evidence of the area's exciting growth. Plentiful use will be made of old photographs, motion picture film and artifacts to be found in local libraries and historical societies.

Old photographs will play an important visual part in the series.

The opening episode will deal with "The Boom Years" from 1848 to 1865, when San Francisco suddenly became a brawling boom town following discovery of gold.

"Bonanza" will employ special camera techniques on the enlarged prints to create an illusion of motion.

The photographs used in each telecast will afterwards be mounted in individual displays and circulated among libraries, schools and other public places in the Bay Area.

"Bonanza" will use the services of two "librarians" to guide viewers through the rich visual treasures and explain the aspects of history they represent. Librarians will be Tom Mullahey, KRON-TV's Director of Public Affairs, and Phyllis Skelton, well known performer on local TV.

Weekly TV Log

A SOTHERN SMOOCHER — Hardly a display for the hotel lobby is this smooch scene between Ann Sothern and Don Porter in the Monday offering of "The Ann Sothern Show" on KPIX at 8:30 p.m. Porter, a veteran of Miss Sothern's first television series, "Private Secretary," joins the show in this episode as the new manager of The Bartley House.

'Mr. Sands' Back With Ann Sothern

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ann Sothern is overhauling her television show in mid-season by returning to her first video love, Don Porter—Ann's co-star in the defunct "Private Secretary" series.

The reason? Romance.

"We felt our show needed love interest—and so did the viewers," said Ann from deep in the plush couch of her fancy dressing room.

IN THE OLD DAYS Porter portrayed Peter Sands, Ann's boss and sometime boyfriend. His name's been changed to James Devery, but he's still the beautiful blonde's boss, this time as a hotel manager.

"Dozens of actors were interviewed and tested for the role," Ann said. "We finally chose Don because of the enormous mail we've had asking about him. Besides, we have a sort of chemistry that comes across very well.

"He will be seen on the show for the first time Monday. The entire program builds up to his appearance at the end of the show, and then he has only one line to say. But thereafter Don will have a big part."

ANN AND DON had seen one another only once in the three years since they worked together in "Private Secretary."

"Yet it was amazing how quickly we picked up the threads," Ann smiled. "It was as if we'd never been apart."

Porter's appearance as Ann's new boss displaced little Ernest Truex, who is being promoted to the hotel's board of directors.

"Ernest is a wonderful actor, and he's staying with the show," Ann explained. "But he played the type of man I could dominate. Viewers wanted to see me with a younger man, and one who would dominate me.

"THE DOMINATION BIT is limited to the show. We worked closely together for three years, and after that length of time most performers can't stand the sight of one another. But Don and I have never had a cross word."

"The Ann Sothern Show," which hit the telewaves last October, hasn't gained the high ratings once held by "Private Secretary."

Its new format, and reteaming Don and Ann, should help the program gain viewers from such formidable opposition as "Alcoa Theater" and "Wells Fargo," according to boss-lady Sothern.

Porter isn't the only holdover from "Private Secretary."

Ann Tyrrell, who formerly played a switchboard operator, now portrays the hotel secretary.

TromBONE

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's more to a trombone than the sound it makes, says Meredith Willson. There's the way you pronounce the word.

"I figure I stepped across from amateur to professional the first time I said it with the accent on the second syllable," says the composer of Broadway's hit "The Music Man."

"For some reason people who aren't musicians always accent it the other way."

PERSONALITY HOUSE — Your personality, that is. This split-level house comes with a large undesignated area on entrance level. Inserts (above) show all three levels of ranch style house.

Place For Your Own Personality

By JOHN O. B. WALLACE

Houses should have a personality all their own, too. This happy state of affairs is seldom realized except in the expensive custom-built dwellings, but the stylish three-level ranch-type split shown here is an emphatic exception to this statement.

Designed by a noted American architect and designed X-24 in the "House of The Week" series, it is a "personality house" in the sense it was created to fit a wide variety of contrary needs and tastes.

ITS CHIEF feature is a large entrance-level room — more than 400 square feet in area.

This space can be adapted to many purposes according to the needs, temperament and personality of the owner.

The architect, Rudolph A. Matern, says:

"I wanted to design a home doors and other parts of the in which there is a large area —easily accessible to the outhouse—that could be used or arranged according to the personal requirements of the individual owners.

"THE BASIC LIVING requirements can be designed into a home to satisfy the population in general. But all individuals live differently and have their own special needs.

"The select-your-plan area in House of The Week design X-24 gives each owner the opportunity to build his own special needs into a basic, well-designed home."

Here are complete details of this plan in an easy-to-follow, arear-by-area description:

NEARLY SQUARE in shape, this area includes the 14 by 20 foot front living room and the dining room. The living room has banks of glass on two walls, one of which is formed by sliding glass doors leading to an adjacent porch.

A through, two-way fireplace serves as a separation between the living and dining rooms. The outside extension of this fireplace becomes a barbecue grill on the covered porch at the right.

The dining room opens directly onto this porch through sliding glass doors.

There are four bedrooms and two baths in the sleeping wing which is separated from the living level by eight steps. Both baths are of the "Hollywood" type with built-in vanitories and planters.

THE MASTER BEDROOM, 18 feet 8 inches by 11 feet 6 inches, has its own private bath. There is a cathedral-type window at the front of the master bedroom, with a long planter box outside.

The kitchen, at the rear of the house and adjoining the dining room, has the appearance of being a balconied kitchen because of its connection with the lower, adjoining level.

There are no partitions to detract from this feeling of openness. A rear service entrance is near the foot of the four steps at the back of the kitchen. The kitchen, an ample 15 by 12 feet, has space for a four-chair breakfast table.

LAUNDRY facilities and a lavatory are on the lower level and handily near the kitchen. The heating plant and the utilities are in the basement.

The porch at the right is covered by the extending roof, is enclosed on two sides by brick walls and runs the full depth of the house.

There is a rear terrace off the lower level.

IN THE BEDROOM wing alone there are 12 closets and a five-unit bank of linen closets. A full basement lies under the living area. The garage is under the bedroom wing at the left.

There are large storage closets in both the lower and upper foyers.

The select-your-plan area is 15 feet 3 inches wide and extends the full depth of the house, 27 feet 5 inches. There are stairs from this area to the basement. A lavatory is only a step away. Its possible arrangements are numerous.

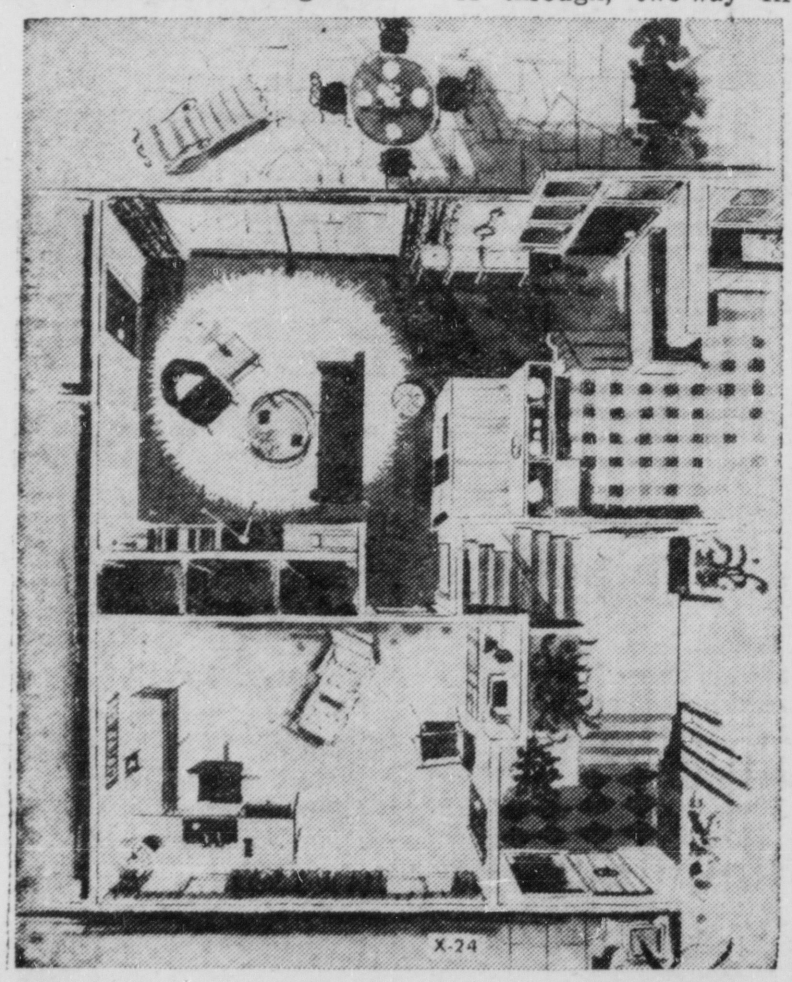

THE FRONT PART could become an office and the rear a family room. Other possibilities include a doctors or professional suite, shop, dark room, maid's room, recreation room, den, hobby room, guest room, a fifth bedroom — or even a rental apartment.

Brick and vertical boards are used in combination on all outside walls. The twin-door front entrance is recessed in masonry and protected overhead by a flat deck.

A pierced masonry wall, planters and an angled trellis add decorative touches. The roof is of ashalt shingles. The chimney is brick with a concrete smoke cap above the flues.

OVERALL dimensions are 65 feet 2 inches by 29 feet 6 inches. A minimum lot of 90 by 100 feet is recommended. There are 1,585 square feet in the living and bedroom levels and 541 square feet in the entrance level.

The garage has 286 square feet. There are eight rooms, including four bedrooms, and 2½ baths.

SKY VIEW — No, the picture is not upside down. You are looking at a cutaway version of the select-your-plan area. At the moment you are, presumably, suspended from a helicopter.

Marin Schools Behind Capital's, Says Congressman

Rep. Clement W. Miller (D-Corte Madera) touched off a spirited debate on federal aid to education at a House hearing in Washington yesterday and said his children were six to eight months behind in their studies after switching from Marin to District of Columbia schools.

The freshman congressman cited his youngsters as examples of the problems faced by local communities in trying to keep pace in a fast growing area of California.

Miller said that although Marin County has good schools, his school-age children found themselves far behind their classmates when they transferred to schools in the nation's capital.

"I am rather surprised to hear this, without in the least disputing Mr. Miller's statement," Supt. Carl Tivel of Larkspur School District said today.

The Miller children attended Corte Madera's Neil Cummins School in the Larkspur district.

Tivel said pupils of the Larkspur district have done well in achievement tests, placing beyond the national norms for such tests. He claimed they are "among those at the top in achievement in Marin County and California."

"Our expenditure per pupil, however, is one of the lowest in Marin County," Tivel noted. "In view of this, I think our teachers have done a wonderful job."

He said the situation faced by the Miller children is "something that could happen between any two districts anywhere" and takes into account a number of factors, including the influx of pupils and the amount of money a district has to spend.

BACKS SUBSIDY

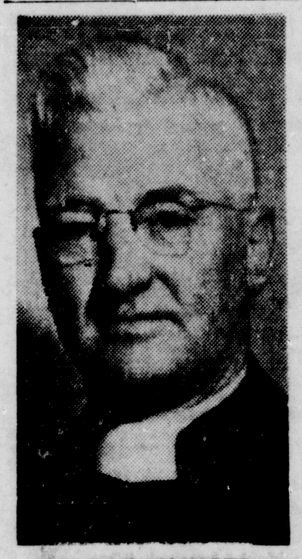

At his appearance yesterday before the House General Education Subcommittee, Miller testified in support of a Democratic-sponsored four-year, $11,500,000,000 school assistance program. The Democratic program calls for bolstering teachers' salaries in addition to contributing to school construction.

Miller termed "useless" a 25-year two-billion-dollar Administration proposal providing for helping school districts pay off new bonds for classroom construction, but including no salary aid provision.

The Marin congressman was sharply criticized by Republican Rep. Carroll D. Kearns of Pennsylvania, who snapped, "You're a youngster around here and you've got a lot to learn. What you are advocating would simply help the socialists to get a foot in the door."

Miller said he realized "I have a lot to learn, and I hope to do so."

Tivel said today he is "thoroughly in accord" with Miller on his advocacy of the Murray-Metcalf bill, the Democratic-sponsored federal aid measure.

31 years of service

Dr. Canoles To Retire From Pulpit

Dr. John Jefferson Canoles, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael for 31 years, last night revealed to his congregation that he plans to retire on June 30.

Dr. Canoles was unable to attend last night's annual meeting of the congregation because of illness but his message was conveyed by Dr. Gurdon Oxtoby, dean of the faculty of San Francisco Theological Seminary and a member of the Presbytery of the Redwoods which will be called upon to select a successor to Dr. Canoles.

The 65-year-old pastor said his decision to resign was made on the advice of his physician. He has been absent from the pulpit of the San Rafael church since before Christmas with the exception of one Sunday last month.

Dr. Canoles sent word to the congregation, which has increased from 200 to 900 members during his pastorate, that he "deeply appreciates San Rafael and the wonderful people who live in this community." He sent the hope that the "members of the church will stay together, work together and go forward together in a spirit of unity and common concern."

Dr. Canoles was born in Baltimore, Md., attended the Uni-

Khrushchev May Meet With Satellite Leaders

LEIPZIG, East Germany (UPI) —Premier Nikita Khrushchev has summoned satellite leaders to a council of war to discuss means of forcing the western allies out of Berlin, it was reported today.

The Soviet chief headed today for Berlin, where he is expected to confer Sunday or Monday with Communist leaders Wladyslaw Gomulka of Poland, Antonin Novotny of Czechoslovakia, and Walter Ulbricht of East Germany.

Although reports of the meeting have not been confirmed officially, East German Premier Otto Grotewohl said last night it is "very likely."

In addition to the Berlin crisis, the four men are expected to discuss the prospects for an East-West foreign ministers' conference and a possible separate peace between Russia and East Germany.

Russia has asked that Poland, Czechoslovakia and East Germany be represented at any future East-West meeting.

13 Hurt In Auto Accidents On Highways In Marin Last Night

Seven-year-old Lonnie Darrell Gillmore of San Rafael was in "fair" condition at Marin General Hospital today with head injuries and fractures of the right leg and jaw suffered last evening when a pickup truck hit the bicycle he was riding.

The youngster, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ray Gillmore of 35 Clorinda avenue, was one of 13 persons injured in auto accidents throughout the county last night.

Police said the pickup, driven by Benjamin L. Peterson, 53, of Lagunitas, was westbound on San Rafael avenue when it hit the bike at Lodge lane. Peterson, who was not cited, told officers he failed to see the boy enter the intersection from the south. The mishap occurred about 5:30 p.m.

The youngster was thrown to the pavement as the front wheel of the bicycle was dragged under the truck and crushed.

Given emergency treatment at San Rafael General Hospital, the child was transferred to Marin General Hospital, where he underwent surgery.

Mrs. Frances Mary Leoni, 44-year-old Bolinas housewife, suffered a fractured pelvis in a 3:50 p.m. traffic collision yesterday on Shoreline highway, near Ross drive in Tamalpais Valley.

Her nine-year-old son, Daniel, suffered a cut of his upper lip. Both were taken to Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Francisco.

At 6 p.m. yesterday Kentfield contractor Norman Valentino Petersen, 33, of 53 Laurel Grove avenue, suffered cuts and bruises of his legs and his four-year-old son Norman Jr. suffered minor cuts and bruises of his face when their pickup truck collided with a car.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Madrzejewski of 31 Roosevelt avenue, San Rafael, were given emergency treatment at Marin General Hospital at 9:56 p.m. yesterday after being involved in a rear-end auto collision. Madrzejewski suffered bruises of his back and his wife complained of pain in her neck and shoulder.

In an accident at 11:20 p.m. yesterday, a pickup truck driven by Stanley Lee Mix, 20-year-old Navy seaman, of 11 Grove avenue, Corte Madera, turned left into the Eat and Run Drive-in on College avenue in Kentfield in the path of a car driven by George Haeker Peterson, 32, a Fresno telephone supervisor.

Injured in the resulting collision were Peterson's wife, Hope, 31, his daughter, Pamela, 10, and son, Geoffrey, 15 months. All three were released after emergency treatment at Marin General Hospital.

Three persons were injured in an accident at 2:45 a.m. today on Highway 101 near Larkspur's Lucky drive.

James William Swan Jr., 27, of 1046 Fifth street, Novato, was treated at Marin General Hospital for head cuts and his passenger, Thomas M. Frish-

Bandits Confess Marin Robberies, Hub Burglaries

Four major crimes, three of them committed in Marin County, were solved yesterday with the arrests of two men on charges of armed robbery and burglary, Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos reported today.

Mountanos said the suspects, Leo Anthony Wiest Jr., 20, of 67 Olive avenue, San Anselmo, and Ramon Virgil Balliett, 21, of Santa Rosa, have admitted the 1958 armed robberies of the Kentfield Pharmacy and the Toot and Tote Market at Santa Rosa. A third man still is being sought.

Wiest also confessed to a pair of 1957 burglaries in San Anselmo, the sheriff said. The first, committed Oct. 23 of that year, involved theft of a .357 caliber magnum revolver from a car parked opposite the Tamalpais Theater. The second burglary took place two months later when $54 was stolen from the Model Market on Saunders avenue.

Sheriff's Inspector William Bradley and Deputy Sheriff A. V. Menjou said Wiest was arrested last month on charges of possession and use of marijuana. He was released on bail pending trial of the case.

CIGARETTE CLUE

The two officers, who have been working most of the week on the long-unsolved robberies and burglaries, said a single marijuana cigarette was found concealed in Balliett's car when the suspect was arrested while en route to work in Sonoma.

Balliett at first denied participating in any of the crimes with Wiest. But after several hours of questioning at Marin County Jail he finally admitted driving a getaway car used in the Kentfield Pharmacy holdup, Bradley said.

Balliett then confessed that his home in Santa Rosa was the rendezvous point where Wiest met him after holding up the Toot and Tote Market in that city, the officers reported. Bradley said the suspect told of waiting at home while Wiest and a third man, not identified, committed the crime.

SPLIT CASH

About half of the more than $800 taken from the market consisted of checks, all of which were torn up and flushed down a toilet, Bradley quoted Balliett. The remaining cash was divided among the three men.

The officers said Balliett told of taking half the $173 in currency taken by Wiest in the pharmacy robbery.

Bradley and Menjou worked with Sonoma County sheriff's officers and Petaluma police in apprehending Balliett as he drove to work. The officers had had the suspect under surveillance for hours. They also recovered a .357 magnum revolver, believed to be the one stolen by Wiest in the 1957 car burglary.

Bradley said he and Menjou arrested Wiest at his San Anselmo home, acting on a tip from a source they decline to reveal.

Wiest is an apprentice painter and Balliett a laborer. Both are parolees from the California Youth Authority. Balliett's bail has been set at $5,000, while Wiest's has not been fixed as yet. Sonoma County has placed "holds" on both men on charges of armed robbery.

Supervisors Lean Toward Endorsement

McCarthy Urges Support For Gate Authority

Marin's supervisors leaned toward endorsement of the proposed Golden Gate Authority yesterday afternoon, but they decided to put off their decision until they had heard from Golden Gate Bridge directors.

They set a special meeting next Monday at 9 a.m. to hear Marin's bridge directors and to come to a decision on endorsement or opposition to a measure which would create the authority.

Yesterday Marin Senator John F. McCarthy, who introduced the legislation to create the authority, appeared before the supervisors to explain the measures provisions and answer questions.

Yesterday too, the bridge board voted to oppose the bill, SB 576, insofar as it pertained to inclusion of the Golden Gate Bridge in the authority.

As explained by McCarthy, the authority would take over operation of all bridges of the bay eventually, although some of them would not come under its control until certain bond requirements had been met. This would take about three years, he said.

OTHERS SUCCESSFUL

The authority would immediately start negotiations for taking over the area's airports and seaports as well, the senator said. Purpose of the authority would be to bring about an all-inclusive management of the Bay Area's transportation facilities so that they could be operated with maximum efficiency and without duplication of effort.

He pointed out, for example, that authorities in other areas like New York, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Seattle and others, had been successful in increasing both sea traffic and air traffic in their areas, besides building other facilities.

McCarthy called the authority good for the whole Bay Area as well as for Marin. He pointed out it would have no taxing power except that which will reside with it from the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District's inclusion. This would expire when the bridge bonds are paid off in 1971.

LOOK TO FUTURE

It would make possible, McCarthy went on, things which Marin will eventually need, things like an airport, a second crossing to San Francisco and expanded highway facilities. "We need to look way into the future," he declared.

Supervisor William Fusselman, while saying he favored the idea in general, was "opposed to including the Golden Gate Bridge." He said the proposed authority board of directors would have only two votes out of 12 from north of the bay. On the bridge board, he pointed out, seven of the 14

Daughter To Contest Father's Will

BATAVIA, N.Y. (AP) — A daughter of the late millionaire Donald Woodward, heir to the Jello Co. fortune, filed a formal objection today to his will.

The objection, filed in surrogate's court, stated that Mrs. Suzanne Woodward Austin, of Larkspur, Calif., believed that her father "was not mentally competent when he signed his will 10 days before his death, and that fraud and undue influence were involved."

(Efforts by the Independent-Journal to locate anyone by the name of Suzanne Woodward Austin in Marin County were unsuccessful today.)

Woodward died Jan. 10, at his home in Le Roy, N.Y., 10 days after signing a handwritten will of 30 words leaving his entire estate to his wife, Mrs. Adelaide Foley Woodward.

The amount of the estate has not been disclosed.

At Mrs. Austin's request, the two witnesses to the signing of the will appeared yesterday, before Surrogate Philip J. Weiss. The witnesses are Harold J. Foley of Le Roy, brother of Woodward's widow, and Mrs. Marion Brew, a domestic in the Woodward home.

Both testified that Woodward was of sound mind when he signed the will.

Marin Pair Discover Lost Mission

"We think we've found the lost mission of Santa Isabel," said Donald Darling, 31-year-old chef of the Red Robin Catering Service in Kentfield, who returned yesterday from an expedition to Baja California with his wife, Edith, and two other companions.

They found a low adobe wall beneath a cross-shaped rock in the mountains 25 miles north of Loretto, on the Gulf of California.

Farewell Parties For Dick Pollards

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Farewell parties are being planned for the Richard Pollards of Belvedere who are now entering another exciting era of a busy life. Dick, who has been chief of the Time-Life bureau out here for the past eight years, has been promoted to chief of the Life bureau which covers Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries. His headquarters will be in London and he and his wife with their two adopted babies, Reilly, who is seven months old, and Cordelia, a month old, are flying there the middle of April.

Dick, who has been with the publications for 16 years, was sent here from Washington, D.C. He and Mrs. Pollard have been living in Belvedere for the past four years. They love it so much there, they are not selling their home and hope that some day they'll return. The house is being rented by the widely known Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gros (Nancy Majors) whose marriage was a society event of a few months ago.

As a farewell to the Pollards, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Lynch and Rod Taft are hosting a dinner dance on April 4 at their adjacent homes on Beach road in Belvedere.

INVITATIONS have been issued to about 150 friends for a formal dinner dance at the Meadow Club on April 4 by Dr. and Mrs. Harry Hensler and Mr. and Mrs. Melville Wolf.

PRE-NUPTIAL parties for Hettie Owen and Patrick Mahoney are now being calendared and dates for several others will soon be set. Hettie and Pat, who will be married on Saturday afternoon, June 27, at St. John's Church in Ross have not completed the list of those to be in the wedding party. The reception will follow at the Kent Woodlands home of Hettie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis F. Owen.

On Sunday, March 22, the engaged couple will be honored at a brunch to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Rod LaMontagne (Debbie Donald) at the home of her parents, the Alexander Donalds, in Woodside. Co-hosts will be the Jonathan Donalds (Liz Henderson). April 8 is the date the John Sutros have set for their dinner dance at the Fairmont Hotel honoring Hettie and her fiance.

AFTER THE PREVIEW of the Symphony Guild concert on Wednesday morning at the Meadow Club a number of luncheons will be given. SOUTH OF THE BORDER for several weeks are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kiechhefer of Kent Woodlands who are dividing their time between Mexico City and Acapulco.

AT THE FIRST NIGHT of the Victor Borge performance at Masonic Memorial Temple in San Francisco, Wednesday night, will be the Henry Nortons and their guests, the George Goheens. The Nortons, who have been at their home in Fairhills for several months, are returning to their home in New York, the end of the month.

For Thursday night the Goheens have taken a box for the performance of Jose Greco and his Spanish dancers at the San Francisco Opera House. With their guests, the junior Goheens, they will have dinner at Trader Vic's before the performance, which is a benefit for the Experiment in International Living. Mrs. George Wheelwright and Mrs. Robert Dunham are on the committee for the benefit.

THE TRAVELING DUO, Don and Lillian Albertsen, have returned from a Caribbean cruise. However, the Albertsens will be at their Kent Woodlands home briefly and then will be on their way again, this time to Hawaii. They've arranged a large cocktail party for a week from tonight at the Meadow Club so they'll have an opportunity to greet many of their friends.

Don and Lillian, who have their own travel agency, took a group of 25 on the Caribbean tour, sailing from New York aboard the "Mauritania" on Feb. 7. They visited Nassau, St. Thomas, Antigua, Martinique, Barbados, Trinidad, Curacao, Cristobal, Port-au-Prince and Jamaica.

Aboard the "Lurline" on March 27 the Albertsens are sailing with another group on a cruise sponsored by Shriners of Medina Temple of Chicago. There'll be 125 on the three weeks' trip. The dinner table, which was only 4 inches off the ground, was lavishly decorated with banana leaves and full blown tulips. A suckling pig was the piece de resistance. An Hawaiian girl sang during the evening.

At the recent luncheon meeting of the High-Twelvettes of Marin, held at Rickey's Rancho Rafael, members learned of activities at Guide Dogs for the Blind Center in San Rafael. The program was opportune as the annual drive for Guide Dogs for the Blind began on March 2. Speakers at the luncheon were Larry Rees, director of training at Guide Dogs, and Benny Larsen, a trainer. They explained how dogs are trained at the center and how the blind person and his dog learn to work together. A film illustrated the talks.

At the luncheon two new members, Mrs. R. P Elder and Mrs. Clifford Archer, were initiated.

Duncan Like Yo-Yo Between Wife, Mother

VENTURA (AP) — Frank Duncan blew his top, he says, when he learned his mother once planned to carry him away from his bride by force.

"It was such a stupid thing," Duncan testified at his mother's murder trial. "It sounded something like a grammar school child might think of."

The handsome young attorney, appearing in Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan's behalf, said he went "back and forth like a yo-yo" between her and his wife.

Mrs. Duncan, 54, who admits to 11 marriages, is accused of hiring two men to kill the daughter-in-law. The prosecution contends jealousy was the motive. Olga Duncan, 30-year-old Canadian nurse, was beaten and strangled on a desolate mountain road last Nov. 18.

Duncan will return to the witness stand when the trial reconvenes Monday. The case is expected to go to the jury of eight women and four men about mid-week.

Yesterday's developments in the drama-packed courtroom included:

Mrs. Duncan's hot declaration that Dist. Atty. Roy Gustafson was lying when he accused her of hiring Olga's killers.

A statement by Duncan that his mother was hysterical when he returned home to her after his wedding.

Mrs. Duncan's firm denial that she plotted Olga's death—"I never desired Olga killed," she cried. "I didn't want harm to come to anyone."

Civil Liberty Group Hears Clergyman

"Unless man believes in his own reasonableness, he becomes part of the great crimes which have degraded his own nature," said the keynote speaker last night at the opening session of a conference sponsored by the Marin chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Rev. Harry Scholefield, minister of the First Unitarian Church in San Francisco, addressed 80 persons last night at the Marin Country Day School on Paradise drive in Corte Madera. The conference was to continue until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Modern man is in danger of shifting the burden of thought from himself to computers, said Reverend Scholefield, but there is a difference between computation and cogitation. He noted that even pessimistic Freud said that the "voice of intellect is soft, but does not rest until it has gained a hearing."

Drake Meat Department Responds

Owners of the meat department at the Drake Market in San Anselmo declared today that they do not plan to keep the department open evenings and Sundays.

"At the present time," said Gino Gizzi and Bill Henderson, "we have no intention of staying open nights or Sundays."

The two men, who operate the department as a rented concession, issued the statement in response to a story in yesterday's Independent-Journal. It indicated the meat department would shift soon to a late-hour schedule.

AUTHORITY

directors are from the north area.

In addition, Fusselman feared continued tolls on the Gate span. "The Bay Bridge could have been toll free years ago if they hadn't used its funds to build other bridges," he declared. "We were promised a toll free bridge. If we go into the authority, we will always have tolls."

Mrs. Vera Schultz did not agree with Fusselman. "Marin is dependent on the rest of the Bay Area," she said, "we are part of it. We have substantiation that the authority plan has delivered advantages in other areas. We know that to remain static on transportation is to go backwards. We must be able to act as a community."

Finally Mrs. Schultz moved that the Marin board endorse the legislation and work for its passage. Walter Castro seconded the motion.

NO VOTE RECORDED

But James Marshall and William Gnoss expressed a desire to hear what the bridge directors had to say. The motion was not put to a vote, although Gnoss said he favored the bill at present.

"The bridge directors didn't even have the courtesy to ask me my opinion or reasons for them before they came out against it," McCarthy noted ruefully. "If you ever heard the terminology bureaucrats, those boys are it."

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Nab Blonde Bandit

LAS VEGAS, (UPI)—A beautiful, well-dressed but hard-talking "champagne blonde" was held today on charges she robbed the First National Bank of Nevada of almost $2,000.

Police and FBI agents arrested her at a road block shortly after the robbery yesterday. She shrieked epithets at the officers when they took her off a Reno-bound bus about 45 miles north of this desert gambling center.

"She's really a beautiful girl," a policeman described her, "but hard as nails."

The girl identified herself as Ida Belle Ingram, of Roanoke, Va. FBI agents said she had worked at both the First National Bank of Alexandria, Va., and the Union Trust Co., of Washington, D.C.

She flew here from Washington Thursday and apparently was broke when she staged the holdup, federal agents said.

Tax Warning

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—New taxes would hamper the economic growth and development of California, warns State Sen. Nelson S. Dilworth (R-Hemet).

The Southern California legislator made the comment yesterday in criticizing certain aspects of Gov. Edmund G. Brown's proposed tax program.

Speaking before the Central Coast Council of the State Chamber of Commerce, Dilworth said spending the 226 million dollars in special funds would be better than raising taxes.

Actor Stone Succumbs

NORTH HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fred Stone, 85, musical comedy star who played in such stage hits as "Wizard of Oz," "The Red Mill" and "Jack O'Lantern," died yesterday after a two-year illness. He played those shows teamed with David Montgomery as the song-and-dance act, Montgomery and Stone. He had been totally blind since a heart attack two years ago.

Sen. Guffey Dies

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former Sen. Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania, a Democratic stalwart during the New Deal era, died Friday night of a heart ailment at the age of 88.

Guffey, a power in Pennsylvania politics for decades, had lived in Washington since losing his Senate seat in the 1946 Republican landslide.

Kennedy Deal Bared

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Robert Kennedy, chief counsel of the Senate Labor-Management Committee, says some elements of both management and labor offered him political support for his brother, Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.), in exchange for laying off parties summoned by the committee.

Sen. Kennedy is regarded as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Robert Kennedy told a news conference Friday "the most serious attempt came from management" but added he also had a serious offer from labor. He declined to name names and said no money was offered.

Death Penalty Upheld

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assemblyman Charles J. Conrad (R-Sherman Oaks) today declared the men on the firing line of law enforcement almost unanimously agree that the death penalty is a deterrent to crime.

He said he would fight legislation to abolish capital punishment.

Lutherans May Merge

CHICAGO, (UPI)—The Joint Commission on Lutheran Unity, representing four denominations, has accepted an invitation to meet with three other Lutheran churches planning merger.

The JCLU, representing the American Evangelical Lutheran Church, the Augustana Evangelical Church, the Finnish Evangelical Church and the United Lutheran Church, said yesterday it will meet with the three bodies merging into the American Lutheran Church in 1960.

Midwest Digs Out

By UP INTERNATIONAL

The Midwest began to dig out today from a late winter snowstorm which crippled traffic, isolated communities, crushed roofs and caused the deaths of at least 26 persons.

The sneak storm swept down suddenly on the upper Midwest, pounding parts of Michigan with blizzard force and walloping Iowa and Wisconsin with new snowfalls up to 20 inches.

The Midwest got the worst of it, but elsewhere, wind, rain and thunderstorms lashed New England, creating traffic problems in Vermont and Maine and flood threats in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Who's Neurotic?

LOS ANGELES (AP)—If you're not worried in times like these, you're neurotic, says Dr. Rollo May, a New York psychologist.

Here to lecture at the University of California at Los Angeles, Dr. May said the goal of psychology is to help people to be anxious about the right things.

He listed as justified anxieties of the age problems such as whether man will survive, how he can learn to know himself and how he can learn to love.

Among wrong things to worry about, Dr. May listed how to make a million dollars.

Others Besides Us Favor Retention Of Cross Filing

We have often spoken out in favor of cross filing after we backed the successful drive to place party designation of all candidates on the ballot.

For this we have been criticized by such organizations as the League of Women Voters and by strong "party responsibility" advocates in the Democratic Party.

To show that we are not alone in our desire to keep the final say in the hands of the voters, not the parties, here are some quotes from other Northern California papers on the same subject:

Sacramento Bee — Primary elections should be open to all persons who want to seek public office. . . . If a Democrat believes a Republican who has cross-filed is the best man for the job, or visa versa, he should have the opportunity to vote for the candidate of his choice.

Woodland Democrat—Nowhere have the people as much to say in their state government as they do in California. Let's keep it that way. . . . If well meaning Governor Brown would abandon his efforts to taboo cross filing, he would be in a stronger position to put over his commendable proposals to compel an honest, realistic accounting of all campaign contributions and expenditures.

Colusa Sun-Herald—There is yet to be heard one sound reason for discontinuing a system which has been so scandal-proof and democratic in effect since it was established by Gov. Hiram Johnson back in 1914.

Santa Rosa Press-Democrat—Once a man is elected to office, it is individual responsibility, not party responsibility, which the voters expect.

Lindsay Gazette — Legislative representation at Sacramento can best be obtained through men chosen for their capabilities, and not because of party label. The latter presupposes certain party control of votes and acts.

The measure to abandon cross filing has passed the Assembly and is now before the Senate. We hope it dies there.

Happy Birthday 4,132 Times

Tomorrow marks the opening of Girl Scout Week, seven days devoted to the activity of two and a half million girls and three quarters of a million adult leaders throughout the United States.

In Marin we have 3,203 girls registered in 252 troops. Helping them are 929 volunteer men and women.

That makes 4,132 Marinites who are taking an active part in this useful and effective activity.

Thursday is the 47th birthday of the Girl Scout movement. We'd like to say "Happy Birthday and Well Done" 4,132 times.

THREE MINUTES A DAY

By JAMES KELLER

DO MORE THAN TALK

The chairlady of a woman's club recently made this sweeping statement to her small group: "Now that we've taken care of the Far East, let's take up the Near East!"

It is common failing to think that the complex crises of modern life can be solved merely by talking about them. If such problems could be solved by words alone, we would have had global peace long ago.

To avoid the danger of being long on words and short on "doing," encourage the fellow members of any organizations to which you belong to spend 30 minutes of performance for every 5 minutes of talk. As St. John said:

"Let us not love in word, nor in tongue but in deed and in truth." (John 3:18)

See that your meetings get beyond the talking stage. Help to put into concrete application the principles for which your organizations stand.

God will bless you if you put your ideals to work in a specific way instead of sitting on the sidelines indulging in wishful thinking or repeatng high-sounding principles.

Let me be a "doer" of Your word, O Lord, not merely a "talker."

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Radio Man Ponders Entering Political Field In School Race

By CHAPIN A. DAY

We may have a radio man doing a little politics before long.

The story is that if a couple of other well qualified candidates don't file pretty soon, Bill Thompson, well known KTIM announcer, may jump into the race for the San Rafael school district's board of trustees.

Can't think of anyone offhand who we'd rather see take a crack at it.

ANOTHER SCHOOL candidate, Tom McDougall of Mill Valley, perennial Tamalpais Union High School District candidate, has been in Sacramento trying to interest the legislators in passing a law.

He's not quite sure how it should be worded, but the idea is that a school district should not have the right to hold three elections in one year, McDougall told the solons. There ought to be a law.

He opposed the Tam district tax boost which passed on the third try.

So far he hasn't gotten much encouragement—and no bill has been introduced to carry out his idea.

ANOTHER MARINITE who has paid a visit to the Capitol is long-time Democrat Sam Gardiner.

He's interested in the proposed establishment of a third municipal court in Marin. Hopes it passes.

The post would originally be filled by an appointment by Gov. Edmund G. Brown. Gardiner was Brown's campaign manager in this area.

SPEAKING OF the governor, at a press conference this week he was trying to explain his current stand on movement of bills to effectuate his water program.

First to move will probably be a bill to freeze the "water fund" (he dubbed it that; its name is the State Investment Fund) so that this many million dollars could be used for nothing but the water program.

Meantime, he went on, he wants to keep all other negotiations fluid so they can be worked together.

"You mean," asked a reporter, "you want to freeze the water but still keep it fluid?"

"That's the idea," smiled the governor.

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

I take this opportunity of expressing my genuine gratitude, appreciation and complete enjoyment of the outstanding concert given in Angelico auditorium last evening by the University of Southern California. I have been a teacher of voice for over 30 years in several schools of music in colleges and universities in the East and Mid-West, doing extensive glee club and choral conducting.

I think I have, in my experience, never heard more beautiful singing than was done by this excellent organization from University of Southern Cal. The beauty and delicacy of their pianissimo passages were thrilling, and while this is always a goal strived for, seldom is realized to the degree attained last evening by this fine organization.

Furthermore, it was a real pleasure to hear beautiful tone even in the full voice range, without 'yelling' as was experienced recently by another group appearing in this same auditorium . . .

On the other hand, one wonders just why such a thoroughly trained group, it seemed necessary for the director to indulge in such gyratory movement of arms, body and even the stomp of a foot on one occasion. I have always been an advocate of hiding directors. Such flaying of arms et cetera, certainly adds nothing to the effect but is most annoying to the listener. Frankly, I personally enjoyed it all best when I closed my eyes. . . .

South Seas Hears Progress Report

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

The other morning, I got a most pleasant surprise, when my good wife walked into my study and laid a white jumbo envelope on my desk, saying at the same time, "I think this contains a copy of the Independent-Journal." And sure enough, on opening the envelope, I discovered that it held a copy of the 38th PROGRESS REPORT of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, as published by the Independent-Journal!

How the old home town has grown! Old Buildings have made way for new ones and parking lots. Commercial and industrial progress everywhere. New residents by the thousands. Pretty homes in tracts and subdivisions which were cow pastures when I was a boy! A $150,000 addition to the San Rafael Library in which, as a boy, I pored over the books of the voyages of the early navigators and dreamed of the time when I, too, would sail below the horizons to the sunlit isles of tropical adventure in the vast Southern Sea! Progress, progress, progress everywhere. What a reporto f progress!

I read it all through the morning. While I was pleased to read of the new San Rafael, I yet regretted the passing of the old home town. That town had served me well; it had been a springboard for me, to spring into a new life beyond the confines of San Rafael. Whether I shall ever return to the town is more than I can say at this moment. But to keep fresh in my mind all my old memories of it, there hangs on my study wall a framed photograph of the western end of San Rafael, with Mount Tamalpais dominating the scene; and Reservoir shore of San Pablo Bay . . . Were I to return to the old hometown, I fear, I would feel an utter stranger, with so many of the people I once knew now gone to where no search of mine would ever find them in the town!

Minister Can't Treat Illness

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

Why do people try to separate themselves into segments? Our mind is not an isolated independent mass — it functions together with our body as a whole. Is a person any less spiritual because he needed to have treatment for his broken leg? Why should there be any question as to whether or not a person is spiritual because he happens to be mentally ill?

Spirituality is a part of religion, and religion has to do with faith, courage and things to do with the heart as well as the mind. It takes faith to believe in one's self as well as others and courage to know one's limitations.

Some of us need treatment for mental illness and certainly many of us can and do have faith in those who are working to find answers to the cause, and better methods of treatment.

A minister can't treat the mentally ill, unless he happens to be a psychiatrist also, but many help to recognize the problem when it exists.

Dig The Picture Now, Gonnella?

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

This is in answer to Monday's letter from a Frank Gonnella.

Man, where've you been, Gonnella? Don't you know that the "mistaken old ways" of a clergyman, concerned about God and a conscience just don't belong on a Short-Doyle committee, nohow? The mental health master-plan has "put him aside."

Anybody really interested in this deal should have read about Dr. Brock Chisholm's philosophy, or heard it on radio and TV by now. The world famous psychiatrist, Dr. Chisholm, is known as one of the "chief architects" of the entire mental health program.

If they're proud of him, they don't say much about it, somehow!

Life Magazine did, though, Feb. 16, in this editorial: ". . . Dr. Brock Chisholm, the eminent Canadian psychiatrist, declared in the atomic age it is wrong to teach children to believe in Santa Claus on the ground that they will refuse to 'think realistically' when they grow up. As W. H. Auden put it, 'I find such people . . . so unsympathetic and peculiar that I do not know how to argue with them'" . . . P. 47 — Life.

Do you dig the picture now, Mr. Gonnella? A Short-Doyle committee is hardly the place for an old-fashioned man-of-the-cloth! This is the atomic age, man!!

Recorder Takes Dim View Of Turning His Office Into Marriage Chapel

There's a movement afoot to change the state marriage laws so that county recorders, along with judges and priests, would be able to perform marriage ceremonies.

They're already referring to Marin's recorder as Father Noel Giacomini. Can you imagine Recorder Giacomini halting all business several times a day as he unties couples who are anxious to say "I do?"

The County Recorders Assn. of California proposed the various changes to strengthen the marriage laws. Giacomini is in favor of many of the proposals, but he doesn't relish getting the opportunity to make a "chapel" out of his already crowded office.

MANY A CARRYOVER from ex-Assessor George Hall's days are performing smoothly under new Assessor Bert Broemmel. But one appraiser who never showed up for work under Broemmel was Harold Payton. He quit this month after being on sick leave since Hall's regime.

As we get it, Broemmel inquired several times about Payton's reporting for work. After remaining silent for two months, Payton turned in his resignation, without even trying to show his ability as an appraiser under the new assessor.

Payton is probably more well known as an oldtime fireman who attended many a fire convention throughout the state.

TALK OF THE TOWN is the Kelly-Chiesa battle for San Rafael chief of police. Those in the know are already putting bets on one or the other.

Some rumors still hint that Chiesa is being offered the deputy chief's post if he would pull out of the race. But it appears Chiesa is already committed all the way.

What's this we hear about former Sheriff Walter Sellmer trying to serve as arbiter?

When Chief Kelly first took over as chief in 1943, he had a 12-man force. Among the 12 was Chiesa. Now there are 28 officers on the staff including two women. When Chiesa quit the force to run against his boss, several observers made this comment: "Too bad. Because no matter who wins, San Rafael will lose a good officer."

SPEAKING OF officers, a sheriff's deputy is quitting after two and one-half years to join the El Cerrito police. Reason: He now gets $415 after 2½ years. Top pay is $458. El Cerrito starts him at $412 now, promises $427 in a few months, with a maximum of $505.

NEXT TIME you're kicked out of the Marin General maternity ward like I was, don't feel so bad. They've got a good reason for allowing only two visitors in the afternoon and two in the evening.

It's to guard against staphylococci, which is easier said than eradicated once it infects. I tried to give the Pink Ladies and nurses a bad time, but they politely straightened me out.

A NEW SUBSTATION and a new sergeant for Novato soon?

That's the latest rumor. Boy, that new sheriff isn't wasting time.

They tell me Ed Levine might be one of the deputies to be sent north.

ONLY COST $24 MILLION

Pity Poor Senators In The New Building

By FRANK ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The privations being undergone by our senators in the new office building we taxpayers have just finished for them are painful to behold.

Their cries of anguish as they move into their five-room suites, each with three washrooms, raise a question whether we skimped too much. The building cost only $24,446,000 with an extra million for furniture.

If this was a mistake, we won't make it again. A new office building for House members, now getting started, will set us back $65,000,000.

SEN. NORRIS COTTON (R-N.H.), one of eight senators who have taken up quarters in the new sanctum, told the story in some of its harrowing detail today in a newsletter to his homefolks.

Cotton thinks maybe the error was in spending too much, not too little. He says the senate needed the new building, but . . .

"The building contains offices for 42 (of the 98) senators and their staffs, for 12 committees and their employes, for the busy capitol telephone exchange, for a cafeteria and a basement garage — all essentials," says Cotton. "However, it includes a 500-seat auditorium, a gymnasium, and (imagine it!) a sundeck on the roof."

COTTON PROBABLY hadn't seen the sundeck when he wrote this. It comprises a red tile floor measuring 35 by 35 feet, plus two shower stalls and a john. There is no provision at all for the one lady senator, Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

Cotton says the building is poorly planned and reminds him of a schoolboy's definition of a camel — a sort of a horse, put together by a committee.

"The conduits for telephones and electric wires are so placed that Houdini himself could hardly squirm in and out from behind the desks," the Senator complains. "My own desk is so close to the wall that I am almost sitting on the window sill.

(Standard practice was followed in laying the conduits, the architects say. The alternative was to run loose wires across the floors.)

"IN COMMITTEE we no longer sit informally around a table and chat chummily with the witnesses. We are elevated on a circular dais behind a massive, paneled bulwark . . . so high that . . . when pictures are taken nothing is visible but the tops of our heads."

(Sen. Warren Magnuson (D-Wash.) has solved this. He sits on a pillow.)

"The microphones (are) so defective that they wail like banshees . . .

"THE ELEVATORS are automatic, and when you press a button, you never know which direction you are going or where you'll wind up, if somebody else beats you to the punch."

Cotton's last point is the sorest of all among many senators. They are accustomed to ring three times and go straight to their floors. The electronic brain on each new elevator works fine but so far can't distinguish between senators and people. Possible remedies are being studied.

New Religious Body Symbol Of Drive For Christian Unity

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

America's newest major religious body symbolizes, in its name and history, the powerful drive for Christian unity that is gradually breaking down the ancient barriers of Protestant denominationalism.

Its name is the United Church of Christ. It was formed June 25, 1957, by the merger of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

When the merger is completed, the United Church will have a membership of about 2,100,000, and will be the nation's seventh largest Protestant body.

Although many congregations have begun using the new name, no local church is legally affiliated with the United Church of Christ at present. It will exist only in spirit and on paper until a constitution, now being drafted, is completed and approved.

Some local Congregationalist churches have served notice they will not affiliate with the United Church. They have formed the National Assn. of Congregational Christian Churches. This organization reports a membership of 171 local churches, of a total of 5,544 Congregational Christian Churches in the nation.

Four of the dissident Congregational churches and 10 individuals have filed a suit in the federal district court of New York challenging the legality of the merger. An earlier legal test in New York state courts resulted in a clear-cut victory for the pro-merger forces.

Despite these birth pains, the United Church is already regarded by students of church history as a tremendously significant milestone in the ecumenical movement which seeks to draw together the divided Christian family.

Unlike other church mergers of recent years which have united Methodists with Methodists, Presbyterians with Presbyterians and Lutherans with Lutherans, the United Church represents the confluence of two entirely distinct streams of Protestant Christianity.

Congregationalism, which came to America aboard the Mayflower in 1620, is an offshoot of the English Reformation. The Puritans felt that the ecclesiastical hierarchy of the Church of England was stifling true Christian faith, so they established in New England a new kind of church in which each local congregation was completely free to manage its own affairs. This emphasis on congregational autonomy remains until this day a distinctive feature of Congregationalist churches.

The Evangelical and Reformed Church is a product of the continental Reformation led by John Calvin and Martin Luther. It came to America with the first German and Dutch immigrants to Pennsylvania. Like other churches of the Calvinist tradition, it has a representative system of government (called the Presbyterian polity) in which regional bodies called synods administer many church affairs.

Working out a compromise between these different ecclesiastical structures is the main problem confronting the constitution drafters of the United Church.

There are no major doctrinal issues to be resolved, because both denominations eschew official creeds and leave the individual believer free to work out his own understanding of the Bible within the basic context of faith in Jesus Christ as divine lord and savior.

Worship customs vary widely in both denominations with each congregation free to make its own rules.

The tradition of stark simplicity, inherited from the Puritans, is still found in many Congregationalist churches. The service is built around hymns, scripture reading and the sermon, with the latter the dominant feature. But as in other Protestant denominations, there has been a strong movement in recent years toward a more formal or "liturgical" worship.

Some Evangelical and Reformed Churches are "high" in their liturgy, with ministers wearing vestments and communion served at the altar rail. Others are "low," with ministers in business suits and Communion served in the pews.

Both denominations bring to their union a strong emphasis on well-trained clergy and on higher education in general. Congregationalist fathers founded Harvard "to protect us from an illiterate ministry," and their church has been busy starting colleges ever since—Yale, Dartmouth, Oberlin and Grinnell, to name but a few. The E and R Church, although much smaller in size, has operated eight colleges of its own.

Another common theme of their separate histories is the belief that the church should never withdraw from the world, but should act boldly to bring Christian convictions to bear on social and political problems.

The United Church seems determined to uphold this tradition. It has already set up—as its first working agency—a council for Christian social action.

'NO LASTING EFFECT'

Prof Discounts Impact Of Mass Evangelism

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Will the current era of mass evangelism, personified by globe-trotting Billy Graham, have a lasting effect on American religious and cultural life?

"No," says William G. McLoughlin Jr., an assistant professor of history and American civilization at Brown University here and a longtime student of revivalism, in a book "Modern Revivalism" published this week.

The book reviews the religious awakenings and revivals of the last 135 years, assuming that modern revivalism began about 1825 with Charles G. Finney, and it is more than mildly critical of the phenomenon.

The surprising things about big religious revivals in America, says McLoughlin, is that they occur so infrequently and "have produced so few tangible or lasting results."

In the last 225 years, Mc Loughlin finds only four major "great awakenings" or religious revivals. The current one, he thinks, began about 1945 and will run possibly to 1970.

Contrary to popular belief, "there is no meaningful correlation," McLoughlin says "between the great national awakenings in America and the great periods of political or economic crisis."

Unitarians Here To Vote On Merger

A vote on whether the Unitarian Church of Marin favors a merger of the American Unitarian Assn. with the Universalist Church of America will be on the agenda of the Marin church's fifth anniversary meeting March 15 in the Marin Jewish Community Center, San Rafael.

Also on the agenda will be election of directors, adoption of a budget and discussion of building plans (the church recently acquired a building site near the proposed Marin civic center).

Rev. Samuel A. Wright Jr., pastor, noted that a decision on construction is becoming "urgent" now the church has grown from an initial membership of 93 to more than 350 today.

Regarding the merger vote, Rev. Wright said that since 1896 the American Unitarian Assn. and the Universalist Church of America have conducted mutual activities, and several years ago formed the National Council of Liberal Churches, which coordinates the religious education program of the two denominations.

"Both Unitarian and Universalist Churches are founded on the principle of individual freedom of religious belief," Rev. Wright said.

"However, the two denominations have different historical traditions and on a national level are organized differently."

U.S. Churches In Big Charity Plea Tomorrow

Dollar Buys Bargain For Worldwide Relief Agencies

By U.P. International

The biggest bargain available to Americans this weekend will be offered tomorrow morning in thousands of Protestant and Roman Catholic churches.

It's a bargain in charity. Each dollar you contribute will buy at least $10 worth of food, clothing, medicine and other help for needy families abroad.

This is the Sunday on which all Catholic churches and many Protestant denominations conduct their simultaneous annual appeals for support of religious relief agencies which are extending aid to some 50 million persons in 60 countries.

PROTESTANT APPEAL

The Protestant appeal is called "One Great Hour of Sharing." Its proceeds support the work of Church World Service, a cooperative agency representing 35 major denominations.

Catholics will be asked to give to the "Bishop's Relief Fund" which supports the operations of Catholic relief services.

The third major religious relief agency—The United Jewish Appeal—began its annual drive for funds some time ago, but will still be accepting contributions this weekend.

Performing a traditional church function on a global scale, the religious relief agencies have become the main channel for "person to person" American aid to the hungry and homeless of other lands.

FOOD, CLOTHING

This year they are distributing about 1,500,000,000 pounds of food, more than 25 million pounds of clothing, thousands of shipments of vaccines, vitamins and other medical supplies.

They are providing toys, books, and other supplies for countless orphanages, teachers and training materials for vocational schools, resettlement help for refugees. They are operating health clinics, digging wells and conducting demonstrations in modern farming and canning methods.

The most impressive aspect of the religious relief program is that so much is accomplished with so little. The funds available for overseas relief, through all three major faiths, total about 35 million dollars a year.

WOULD COST MORE

But the services rendered by these agencies would cost at least 350 million dollars if they were valued on a straight commercial basis.

The explanation is simple: Most of the work is carried out by volunteers — missionaries, priests, native church leaders, teachers and others who accept no salaries from the relief agencies.

Another factor that makes this charity bargain possible is the availability of surplus foods from U. S. Agriculture Department warehouses. Foods which are in very heavy surplus and which are not needed for domestic relief and welfare programs, are given to the religious agencies free.

Moslems To Build Mosque In Norway

OSLO (AP) — The Mohammedan Mission to Scandinavia has announced plans to construct the first mosque in the Scandinavian countries. It will be built in Oslo.

Kamal Yousuf of Pakistan, an Ahmadiyya Moslem missionary to Norway, Sweden and Denmark, told interviewers that in two years of activity he has made seven converts in Sweden and one in Norway.

American-Egypt Friendship Effort

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Women of the United Presbyterian Church have launched a program to promote American-Egyptian friendship.

As part of it, three leading Egyptian women, including the Egyptian "mother of the year" and her daughter, will visit America for participation in local meetings across the country, sponsored by the United Presbyterian Women.

Methodist Service

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The number of Methodist hospitals and homes in this country increased last year from 213 to 229, including 14 new homes for the aged. A report given here said 1,528,613 persons were cared for in the church institutions during the year.

Marin Champs Nip J.C. All-Stars, 42-40

Win May Be Costly As Tar Ace Breuner Hurt

By ERNEST LEICHTER

College of Marin Tars held out gamely in the final minute and a half to eke out a 42-40 victory over the Golden Valley Conference All-Stars before 450 fans at Kentfield last night.

The victory may have been costly for the Tars because their star center, Bill Breuner, was forced to leave the tilt with about 6 minutes left. Breuner went up for a rebound and landed hard on his right leg. He limped painfully off the floor favoring his knee.

When Breuner departed, Marin held a narrow 37-36 lead. The All-Stars immediately sent back their starting aggregation consisting of three American River and two Shasta players. But the Tars stubbornly held on to maintain the lead. A basket by Dennis Slavich and a goal and two free throws by Claude Curley made certain the Golden Valley Champions were never headed. In the last 1:30 of the contest the largest crowd of the year watched tensely as the All-Stars made four futile attempts to tie the score.

The Tars jumped off to a narrow lead early in the fray, but about midway through the first half the Stars knotted the count at 7-7. The lead then changed hands five times before the All-Stars forged ahead 24-21 at halftime.

The All-Stars increased their margin to 31-24 at the beginning of the second half and looked to be in complete command. But the Tars grimly whittled at the lead until a rebound by Breuner put Marin in front to stay.

CURLEY HITS 14

Curley for Marin was high point man with 14 while reserve guard Dennis Slavich hit six key digits in the second half and took up the rebound slack after the mishap to Breuner. Bob Wright of Sierra was high for the Stars with 9, mostly on soft hooks and rebounds from close in. Terry Banderas, another Sierra star, garnered 4 and played a smooth floor game.

Woody Hutchison, head coach of the Stars from American River, used a platoon system allowing all 14 All-Stars to play about equal time. Both teams were cold from the floor, hitting only about 28 per cent of their shots.

Proceeds from the game will help pay the Marin Tars' expenses to Long Beach next week. They will play Santa Ana in the opening game of the State J. C. tournament.

In the preliminary game last night St. Rita's defeated the Mill Valley Boys' Club, 27-22.

Cal Clinches Title As UCLA Nips Huskies

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

California had the battle won today without firing a shot.

The Bears backed into their third straight Pacific Coast Conference basketball crown when UCLA knocked Washington out of any chance of victory with a 56-55 win last night.

Cal (13-2) meets Oregon State (7-8) tonight at Berkeley, but the pressure will be off since the Bruin victory over the Huskies left the Washingtonians with an 11-4 mark. Washington has only a contest with Southern California tonight left on the docket.

SELECT CIRCLE

The Bears joined a select circle in notching their third consecutive title. Cal won four straight titles in the mid-1920s, and Stanford, with peerless Hank Luisetti at the helm, took three straight from 1936-38. Other than that, nobody has even been able to win two consecutive titles in the past 35 years.

This third crown must be especially satisfying to coach Pete Newell, since this year's team seemed hard hit by the graduation of last year's stars, Earl Robinson and Don McIntyre, and was therefore picked to go nowhere this season. Washington was the heavy favorite.

HUSKIES DIE HARD

And indeed, Washington died hard. The Huskies led the Bruins 29-22 at half-time last night, which in itself is quite an achievement, inasmuch as the game was played in the tiny UCLA gym.

But the Bruins closed the gap and went ahead 44-42 when the Bruin's sharp-shooting ace, Walt Torrence, hooped a long one.

Torrence meshed 18 to win scoring honors, and just about iced the league scoring title, while the flashy Husky pair of Bruno Boin and Doug Smart scored 16 and 15, respectively.

STANFORD THIRD

The battle for third spot in the loop ended in a tie with UCLA and Stanford earning 10-6 records. Stanford stayed even with the Bruins by dumping Oregon State 70-54 last night.

It was Stanford's 15th straight home court win. The Cards' fine guard, Paul Neumann, closed out his career with a 21-point performance, but had to share the spotlight with Dick Haga, who tallied 25. Jim Woodland had 18 for the Beavers.

Big 10 Okays Continuation Of Rose Bowl

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Big Ten has cleared its decks for continuing in the Rose Bowl football game.

By a majority vote believed to be 6-4 or 7-3 the conference, which has won 12 of the last 13 Pasadena New Year's Day classics, flashed the green light for continuation beyond the 1960 game.

The exploratory ballot was taken by faculty representatives and athletic directors in their annual spring meeting yesterday. The matter now must go before each Big Ten faculty council for certification and then be voted on officially in the conference's meetings at the University of Michigan, May 21-23.

The vote of sentiment makes way for the Association of Western Universities, successor to the Pacific Coast Conference and the Tournament of Roses Committee, to issue a formal Rose Bowl invitation. It is believed this has not yet been done because the Big Ten first had to clear the air on how it stood.

"We presume that the AWU and Tournament of Roses stand ready to negotiate a new Rose Bowl contract," said Asst. Big Ten Commissioner Bill Reed.

The PCC served notice on the Big Ten last August that its indefinite term Rose Bowl contract would expire because the PCC dissolves officially this June 1. The 1960 game will be played under a contractual trusteeship of the PCC.

The AWU consists of Southern California, Washington, UCLA and California.

Redl, Jordan Draw; Big Rhubarb Over Referee

NEW YORK (AP) — A fight that didn't have much significance stirred up a mild rhubarb today. Stefan Redl, a stocky 5-5 welterweight from Passaic, N.J., and unbeaten Eddie Jordan, a skinny 5-10 newcomer from Brooklyn, battled to a draw in a television 10-rounder at Madison Square Garden last night. Jordan rallied strongly to gain the tie.

The verdict made Redl and his manager, Carl Duva, howling mad. It made Jordan happy.

Duva was so burned up after the decision was announced that he tore across the ring, hollering with every step:

"Where's the commissioner? What kind of a decision is that?"

Somewhat calmed down later, Duva said he planned to protest to the commission Monday but not over the decision.

"I'm going to protest the handling of the fight by Referee Al Berl," he said. "I'm not going to protest the decision, although Redl won decisively. Every time the referee broke them he threw Redl across the ring."

Berl, who had warned both fighters several times to stop holding, left quickly after the fight and couldn't be reached for comment.

He voted for Jordan, 6-4. Artie Schwartz had Redl ahead, 7-2-1. Judge Bill Recht had it exactly even, 4-4-2 and four points for each. The AP card had Redl in front, 6-4.

Most of the 2,500 fans, who paid about $5,000, cheered the vote for Jordan, a sub and a 7-5 underdog. Eleven of 14 boxing writers thought Redl won.

The draw was a good break for the 23-year-old Jordan, subbing for injured Gaspar Ortega. The bout marked his Garden and national television debut, and the result stretched his unbeaten record to 16 and three draws. Redl's record is 22-3-1.

Tam Indians Win Baseball Opener

Centerfielder John Cleaveland clouted a two-run homer in the second inning to provide all the scoring the Tamalpais Indians needed to open their 1959 baseball season on a winning note yesterday as they downed the Lowell Indians of San Francisco, 2-0, at Tam's diamond.

Cleaveland's homer came with catcher Bill Buffalow on base via a single. Other Indians who hit safely were outfielder Dave Broome with a triple and shortstop Paul Turncranz with a solo.

Three Tam pitchers took turns on the mound and blanking the visitors. They were Ron Cole, Charley Fisher and Ron Slack, each of whom gave up one hit.

Safe Boating, Seamanship Course To Start Monday

Public Instruction Course in Safe Boating and Elementary Seamanship will start at 8 p.m. Monday at the Little Theater of San Rafael High School and will continue every Monday night for eight sessions, concluding on April 27.

The course is presented by San Rafael's Flotilla 14 of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, a non-military organization composed of voluntary yachtsmen. Its primary purpose is to assist the Coast Guard in promoting safety on the water.

According to Harry Heifitz, commander of Flotilla 14, the course is designed to educate the boating public in proper handling of their craft. Such topics as rules of the road, piloting, buoyage system, equipment required by federal law, a nautical vocabulary and a few seaman-like knots will be featured in the course.

Instructor will be Perley B. (Sandy) Sancome, who is serving his second term as training officer for the flotilla. He will be assisted by James Levensaler, Charles Boynton and Carl Andenburg.

Examinations will be held during the course and a certificate of Basic Seamanship will be presented by the Coast Guard to those who qualify. There is no charge for the course, but the lesson pamphlets cost 75 cents.

HANLEY'S REPORT

Giants Embark On Exhibition Slate

By JACK HANLEY
I-J Correspondent

PHOENIX, Ariz. — A daily routine of batting and fielding practice finally reaches the monotonous stage just like an uninterrupted day-in-and-out diet of the same dish can dull the appetite.

Long ago someone put it very succinctly with that truism: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Today the Giants started playing. The Cactus Baseball League season opened. The Giants were on the road for the opener as they will be next month for the National League opener in St. Louis April 10.

Today's road trip will be a short 120-mile bus hop from Phoenix to Tucson. The opposition at the other end of the line was Cleveland of the American League. The Indians are training in Tucson.

In all proper and due courtesy, Cleveland will have the pleasure of the bus ride Sunday when the Indians visit the Giants for a return game at Phoenix Municipal Stadium.

WHILE THE Giants and Indians are playing their opening two-game series, two other Cactus League clubs—the Boston Red Sox and Chicago Cubs—meet in a pair of games, the first at the Cubs' Mesa training camp, the second at the Sox' headquarters in Scottsdale.

From here on in to the National and American League openers next month, the four teams will play daily exhibition games, except for three open Monday dates, March 9, 16, 23. In all, the Giants have 29 exhibition games scheduled, 12 with Cleveland, 10 with Chicago and seven with Boston.

Five of the Giant-Indian games will be on the road early next month at Salt Lake, Denver, Topeka, Des Moines and Omaha while both teams are flying east for their regular league openers.

"OPENING OF the Cactus League this year has been perfectly timed," said Coach Salty Parker who did all of the training camp ground work until Manager Bill Rigney could take over. "The exhibition games are just what the doctor would order. We've been working hard now for two weeks—three for some of the boys who reported early—and any more of the same routine might dull their edge."

Rigney, incidentally, is rounding into good shape himself. The initial self-consciousness he felt about his wired jaw and missing front teeth, jarred loose in his automobile accident several weeks ago, no longer is present. He has discontinued the habit of holding his hand in front of his mouth while talking.

His right collarbone, broken in the crash, apparently still bothers him because he gently rubs it every so often with his left hand. He doesn't try to raise his right hand much above his hip.

While giving the entire Giant squad and coaches their signals for the season the other day, he leaned on a bat with his right hand, using his left for appropriate gestures. The signal meeting was held in center field of Phoenix Municipal Stadium to prevent any eavesdropping. And Rigney kept his back to the stands to forestall any visual signal-stealing.

TOMMY O'BRIEN, a retired New York chemical firm executive and Giant fan since 1907 when he first saw Christy Mathewson pitch, made a classic observation of the scene in center field where Giant ball players were grouped three-deep in a semi-circle around Rigney.

"Look at him out there," said O'Brien, who hasn't missed a Giant training camp in a dozen years. "He looks like a symphony conductor, gesturing first to this side and then the other."

And from a distance of 300 feet that is exactly what Rigney resembled. Bet it's the first time he's ever been called that.

OPEN LETTER TO MARIN COUNTY CITIZENS!

Last year about this time everyone was talking recession. The Americans' morale was at low tide. In order to break the spell of recession talk the Automotive Industry put on an all-out drive called "YOU AUTO BUY NOW."

This drive was successful, it lifted Morale . . . Unemployment decreased sharply, people began to spend their money. It was successful enough to receive an outstanding tribute from the President of the United States.

Today as I see local business and residential people supporting the foreign trade I just wonder if it isn't time we take another look at our American economy. What would happen if:

1. Citizens in need of eye glasses would order them directly from Germany.
2. All new furniture customers ordered items from England.
3. Our auto manufacturers ordered their steel from Austria.
4. All the people desiring a new television or radio would order them from German or Italian exporters.

Wouldn't our country be in a sad state of affairs?

This very thing is happening every day right here in our back yard. You purchase your new radio, Hi-Fi or TV set and it's delivered to your door in a foreign vehicle. You buy your new set of eye glasses from our local doctor and he supports foreign economy by purchasing a foreign vehicle.

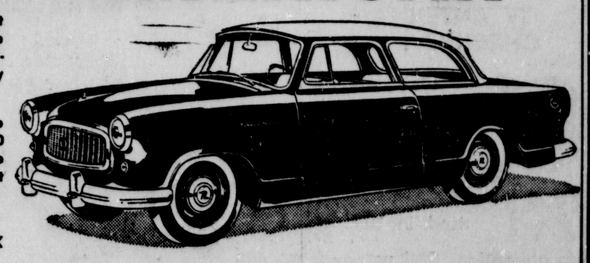

I appeal to you as good American Citizens to support your economy by purchasing American made merchandise.

We have a slogan here at Larry Brink Motors Inc., "Be An American, buy an 'American,' Made in America, by Americans for Americans."

We cordially invite you to visit our showroom at 450 Miller Ave., Mill Valley. We have "Americans" to suit your budget.

Cordially yours,

THE PARENTS' CORNER

By RICHMOND BARBOUR, Ph. D.
Guidance Counsellor

Parents' Forum: Culture Skipped, Are All Fraternities 'Sex Mad?'

Mr. V.W. "My son is taking the 'advanced program' for bright students in his high school. It allows him no time for music or art. He is so busy with routine homework that he hasn't time to be creative. Don't you believe bright children should take music or art? Why should creative classes be denied them?"

Reply. I think bright pupils need music and art. I'm afraid some high school leaders are going overboard. They want to fill the need for scientists and engineers and force the bright students out of art and music and into full-time academic courses. It's a mistake. Did you know that many other parents feel as you do? I suggest you talk with them. Then go to school together. Present your case to your principal. If adjustments are impossible, probably you should send your boy to summer school where he could take art, music, literature, etc.

Mrs. M.C. "My son goes to college. Last fall he joined a fraternity. He tells me he's surprised to find that his 'brothers' talk only of sex. He says that is the one subject which interests them. Are all fraternities sex mad?"

Reply. Let me answer this way. Sex is a major interest of nearly all young men of your son's age. They aren't sex mad. But they are preoccupied. There are differences between individuals and groups. Fraternities probably are neither better nor worse than many other groups.

Mrs. H.T. "Our girl enters the 7th grade in junior high school next fall. I asked her teacher for help in planning her high school courses. I want to be sure she'll qualify for college. Her teacher said it was too early. When should we plan?"

Reply. The best time is while your girl is in the 8th grade. Then you should talk with her counselor or her favorite teachers. Ask for pamphlets explaining the different high school courses. Ask also to see lists of the requirements of colleges she may want to attend.

The largest family attending each performance will receive free popcorn, since Clifton Webb is the father of 17 in his latest picture. The free offer is until 8 p.m. each evening, and the feature has been scheduled early for the benefit of school children.

Developer Sues NMWD For $5,270

North Marin Water District has over-charged the developers and homeowners in Rancho Village by $5,270 in excess water connection fees, they charge in a complaint on file in Marin Superior Court.

Crown Development Co., developer of the subdivision off South Novato boulevard, says that water district agreed to allow homes to connect for $40 each. But the actual cost of each connection turned out to be $55 to $170, according to the complaint.

Crown Development built Rancho Village in 1956. At that time the developer alleges, it agreed to pay for the cost of installing the water system under several conditions. One of those condition was that individual homes would be able to connect for $40, the suit alleges.

As a result of the higher fees, Crown Development contends it paid $3,565 more than it should have, and the homeowners overpaid by $1,705.

Sewer Connecton Fee To Be Held In Trust

San Rafael Sanitation District yesterday accepted a fee for sewer connection on a disputed sewer line, but carefully put the fee aside "in trust" until ownership of the sewer line is clarified.

Mosher Bros., represented by attorney Samuel Gardiner, wants to pay a connection fee for a home they are building on Quarry road. But the sanitation district does not want to accept the fee because ownership of the Quarry road sewer line is still in doubt. A court fight is pending in Marin Superior Court to determine who owns the line—the city of San Rafael, Lloyd Grandi, developer of Fairhills, or other private individuals.

The city contends the sewer line was never accepted and is a private line. About 300 feet of that line is old and leaky and should be replaced, according to city officials. They feel developer Grandi should pay for it.

So as not to hold up Mosher Bros. from connecting up to the line, the district decided to take the fee of $125, but will hold that money in trust until the ownership of the sewer line is decided.

The city and the sanitation district are being careful not to take any action that could be construed to mean the city is accepting ownership of the defective line.

Hartog Sues Mate For Marin Home

Wealthy Hillsborough boat builder Joseph Philip Hartog, 47, who is being sued for separate maintenance in Marin County, struck back in court yesterday in an effort to oust his wife from the family home in Kent Woodlands.

Hartog filed the suit yesterday in Marin Superior Court against Mrs. Barbara Hartog, 35, former model and cover girl, whom he married in August last year in Reno. One year previously, Hartog made news headlines when his first wife, Carola, died with an ice pick wound in San Mateo County. The killing is unsolved.

Hartog contends the Kent Woodlands home should not be in joint tenancy, but should be his separate property for several reasons:

1. He thought he was legally married to Barbara when he bought the home, but Hartog says he later learned that his wife's previous marriage was still in effect. Therefore, their marriage was invalid.

Hartog says Barbara married Carl Dampier Bennett in Miami in 1950, and that marriage is still in effect. He has filed for annulment as an answer to her action for separate maintenance.

2. She promised to live with his three children from the former marriage, and love them, but she has failed to do so, says Hartog.

Since New Year's Eve, Hartog says Barbara forced him to leave the Kent Woodlands home and rent another home in Hillsborough. He incurred $1,800 in moving expense and $325 per month rental since Dec. 31, 1958, says Hartog.

He wants the Kent Woodlands home restored to him as his separate property together with the furnishings, and seeks damages for the rentals he has had to pay since moving out of Kent Woodlands.

Novak Constructs 25 More Homes

Twenty-five homes are under construction in builder John Novak's new Millwood Terrace tract in Novato.

Novak said the tract will, when completed, contain 62 homes on 15 acres at Wilson avenue and Mill road.

He added that he hopes to complete the development by the end of June.

Millwood Terrace features three-bedroom, two-bath, double garage homes at $13,990, the builder said.

Mill Valley Church To Hear Bishop

Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, Episcopal Bishop of California, will be preacher and celebrant at the 11 a.m. service of Holy Communion on Sunday in the Church of Our Saviour, Mill Valley.

Following the service, a reception will be held in the newly completed parish hall. At that time, Bishop Pike will dedicate the hall which marks completion of the physical plant of the church.

The hall is named Hammond Hall, in honor of the first rector of the present church, Rev. Stephen Reginald Hammond. Father Hammond was at the church when it began its present biulding five years ago and was rector for the following three years. When he left, the position was filled by his son, the present rector, Rev. D. Murray Hammond.

The elder Father Hammond is father of four sons, all of whom are Episcopal priests. One of the objects in Hammond Hall is a coat of arms showing the father and his four sons.

Two Drunk Drivers Get Jail Terms; Two Others Fined

Two drunken drivers drew jail terms plus fines, while two others got away with fines, in Marin Municipal Court yesterday.

Judge Albert F. Scheidecker of Sebastopol sentenced Douglas Hope Perry, 34, of Apartment E-39, Hilarita Housing, to 10 days in county jail for his third drunken driving offense in seven years. Perry must also pay a $250 fine.

Perry was caught last Jan. 5 on Highway 101. He had prior convictions in October of 1952, and again in November of 1957.

Surges A. Amundson, 35, of Waldo Point, Sausalito, must spend five days in jail and pay $250 fine for his second offense. He was arrested on Highway 101 last Nov. 19. He had a prior conviction in May of 1953.

Judge Scheidecker also sentenced John Piaszk, 35, of General Delivery, Forest Knolls, with a $200 fine. Piaszk was caught driving last Feb. 11 while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Judge Richard M. Sims took over part of the criminal calendar to sentence Donald Worcester Salisbury, 39, of 130 Yale avenue, Mill Valley. Salisbury was ordered placed on supervised probation for one year and must pay $250 fine. He was caught for drunken driving in Sausalito on Alexander street last July 17.

County Sues For Personal Property Tax

The county has gone to court to force Associated Dredging Co. of Sausalito and other property owners to pay personal property taxes for 1958-59.

Deputy County Counsel Robert Smallman filed the suits against Associated Dredging and five others in Marin Court this week.

The county says Associated Dredging owes $6,168 taxes on personal property with an assessed value of $94,895. The county counsel says the company was notified that their taxes were due, but refused to pay. On Sept. 3, 1958, the taxes became delinquent, and an 8 per cent penalty was added. The total bill now comes to $6,661, the county contends.

The other defendants are accused of owing the county the following amounts in personal property taxes:

Peter P. Damato — $210; Dave Crandell — $151,.57; Edward Canadas—$398; Norman J. Clark—$180, and Joe Balestrieri—$333.

THE OLD AND THE NEW—Alfred Nelson (rear) figures he's the winner by acquiring the famous town jeep of the Town of Corte Madera. But Frank Reis, Corte Madera public works superintendent, isn't complaining a bit at exchanging the sturdy little vehicle for the big truck in which he's seated in foreground.

MUSICAL COMEDY

Tam Players Lauded For Performance

Reviewed by
MARTHA BRUCKNER

Tamalpais High School has presented proudly a former (1941) Broadway hit, an evening filling, two-act musical on the school stage. Any doubts, as to whether this might be a too daring enterprise, were soon scattered after the curtain had risen Thursday evening for the first performance of "Paint Your Wagon," a musical play by Lerner-Loewe; and it can be assumed that the last little flaws, usually in a premiere, will have disappeared in the following two performances, last night and tonight.

That the Broadway hit also became a high school hit was made possible through the enthusiasm of the entire cast, including the back stage crew, and through the excellent guidance by the departments involved, mainly those for music, dance and drama, headed by Robert Greenwood, Mrs. Joan Smith and Peter Klain.

It was a lively and spirited performance, with a good sense of humor and well delivered musical lines. The orchestra, a small but selected group, was outstanding.

As the cast of characters listed 32 names, the dance ensembles for the rope dance and the can-can more than 20, the chorus over 40, the orchestra 26 and the production staff over 50 names, the performance activated many talents, as a school production should, but it makes it impossible to mention all of them, although they deserve it.

In the leading musical roles Gary Dahl, Carol Schroeder (alternating with Merrilee White) Joseph Reade, Tim Farrell and Jody Johnson were very much applauded. Kittie McCue, Mary McGee and Joe Stuart were the excellent solo stars of the terrific dance ensemble. The choir ensembles were well rehearsed, sets and costumes simple but genuine.

As the story is taking place in California—near Sonora, to be exact—about 100 years ago, the historical home flavor added a special delight to this entertaining production.

Familiar Jeep Gone Off Corte Madera Streets

By DICK STEINHEIMER

Corte Madera's well-known town jeep has been retired from civic duty.

Dented but undaunted the little orange and red veteran of World War II was traded in this week to Rossi Garage of San Rafael on a shiny new 1959 pickup truck.

To quote one operator of the jeep, "it will take a lot of years for this truck to live up to the reputation of the jeep."

The jeep was ordered replaced several months ago by the town council, which felt the little four-wheel drive vehicle was using up too much tax money in repairs.

BACK IN SERVICE

Lest Corte Madera residents weep, however, the retirement of the jeep was only momentary. Alfred (Al) Nelson, owner of a Paradise drive bicycle shop and brother of Police Chief Frank L. Nelson, said he was able to get in ahead of a flock of other potential buyers and purchase the jeep from the garage.

Nelson, a hunting and fishing fan, said he plans to completely rebuild the vehicle for hunting trips and business use.

BACK FROM FRANCE

He pointed out that the jeep had been a permanent Corte Madera fixture since the end of World War II, when it was brought back from France by Harold B. Wagstaff, now a member of the town planning commission. Wagstaff, sentimental about the jeep himself, said he purchased the little veteran in France in 1946 after being mustered out of the Army. He said the jeep, along with about 70 others, was hoisted onto the troopship George Washington for the return to the United States.

ALL THE WAY

When Wagstaff landed in New York he decided to drive the jeep back to Corte Madera. He said the gears were howling so loud when he got to Corte Madera he was forced to take them apart. He found the jeep apparently had been landed in France through the surf, because the enclosed salt water had eaten the gears.

A year later, Wagstaff and his bride took their honeymoon to Lake Tahoe in the little jeep.

Wagstaff said the vehicle was sold to the town after the 1955 floods. The jeep did duty in that storm helping pull stalled cars through the water.

The jeep was used since then by Frank Reis and the town street department. The four-wheel drive was used frequently on stormy days and nights in patrol of the town's flood control system.

The newcomer is a four-wheel drive International pickup which was obtained by the town for approximately $2,300.

County Replies To Critics Of Civic Center

Recent published statements which allegedly gave a distorted picture of Marin County's civic center project were answered yesterday by Asst. County Administrator Alan Bruce.

In a six-page memorandum to Walter R. Castro, chairman of the board of supervisors, Bruce termed "highly misleading" a statement that the project would cost $13,800,000 and be "beyond the needs and financial means of the taxpayers."

"The civic center proper," said his memorandum, "is estimated to cost $9,512,700 over a 10-year period from 1958 to 1968. However, the present board of supervisors cannot commit future boards and cannot commit the people beyond the term of office of the present board.

"The only current commitment is for the first stage of the civic center, estimated to cost $2,724,000."

Bruce said the board may decide to proceed simultaneously with the second construction stage, which is estimated to cost $1,400,000 if built simultaneously with the first stage. He said the county has $1,240,274 on hand at the moment. The money was accumulated during the 1957-58 tax year and the current fiscal year.

Plans for the first two construction stages are being prepared by Frank Lloyd Wright, world-famous dean of American architecture.

To a published statement that the civic center represents "an architect's dream rather than a modest courthouse," Bruce's memo replied:

"We do not know of anyone who has seen the plans who does not agree that the buildings will be modest and functional as well as esthetically pleasing and appropriate to the Marin County setting."

Bruce said it was estimated last year that the construction cost would be only $21 per square foot.

"On the assumption that costs of building materials and labor may rise 10 per cent before construction of the first and second stages is completed," he wrote, "the actual cost may be $23.10 per square foot.

"This compares with a cost of $23.98 per square foot for the courthouse annex constructed in San Rafael in 1957, which is certainly a 'modest' building."

Judges Named For Scholarship Contest

Selection of judges for the forthcoming eighth annual $500 college scholarship award competition of the Marin County Labor Council was announced today by council president Albert De Mello.

Herman J. Hale, Marin County consultant, state division of apprenticeship standards, will act as chairman. He will be assisted by Leonard Murphy, of Ralph Murphy & Sons, general contractors; Dr. Virgil S. Hollis, county superintendent of schools; Mrs. Carrol A. Snyker, president of Adults for Teenagers, and the Rev. John Bonner, president, Marin County Council of Churches.

The competitive examination of senior students of Marin County public and parochial high schools will be held on Saturday, May 2, at College of Marin, Kentfield. In the past, a total of nine schools in the county have had students eligible to compete. This year two new schools are added: Redwood High School in Larkspur and Novato High School which will graduate its first students this year.

Handling the details of the scholarship award for the Labor Council are the following members of the council's scholarship committee: Philip Ruby and Warren Ewing, both members of Marin County Federation of Teachers, Local 1077, an affiliate of the council.

Seminary Choir Off On Tour

Wilbur F. Ruessell, conductor of the A Cappella Choir of the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, left with his 36-member choir by chartered bus yesterday, on the twenty-second annual tour which will take them through Southern California and Arizona.

Prof. Russell, former member of the choir and assistant in the sacred music department, became acting director and conductor of the choir in late December when Director John Milton Kelly left on a diplomatic mission to Africa for the U.S. state department. Russell is well known to music lovers throughout Marin and the Bay Area as a pianist, organist and harpsichordist.

Dr. Jesse H. Baird, retired seminary president, conducted a 30-minute meditation period for members before they boarded the bus. He reminded them that they would each represent the seminary and the "ministry of music" to everyone they meet during their 11-day tour. Jacob A. Long, vice president, will join the choir as speaker Sunday in San Gabriel and complete the tour with them.

Several Seminary students from the Bay Area are touring members this year: David Askine of Walnut Creek, Alva Opdyke of San Francisco, Wallace Spencer and Frank Thomas of Berkeley and Herbert Valentine of Oakland.

The tour will conclude with a homecoming concert to be held at the sponsoring church, First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo, March 16.

As in past years, the Rotary Club of San Anselmo and the Marin Chorale will sponsor the A Cappella in their fifth homecoming concert.

Conservation Program On KTIM

KTIM will observe California Conservation week, which opened today on Luther Burbank's birthday, with a special program Monday, 1:15-1:45 p.m. saluting Marin Conservation League's 25 years work in the county.

Appearing on the show to explain what education of the outdoors does for conservation will be Miss Robin Briscoe of the office of county superintendent of schools, and Jack Musio, teacher at Pacheco School.

Joint Lions Meet

The Belvedere-Tiburon Lions Club will meet with the Gallinas Valley Lions Club in the Travelers Inn in San Rafael Monday at 7:30 p.m. Lions District Gov. T. P. Carlson will speak.

My estimate of I-J circulation for Wednesday, March 11, 1959:

.....

DEADLINE: If mailed, envelope must be postmarked by midnight Monday, March 9, 1959, to make entry eligible for cash prize. If delivered to I-J office, entry must be in our hands by 5:30 p. m. Monday, March 9, 1959. This entire page must be received, with all questions answered.

MAIL OR BRING ENTIRE SHEET TO INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL — San Rafael

I-J EDITORS want to know what features readers like best. We want YOUR opinion, and as an inducement to you to spend a little time answering our questions, we offer you a free chance on a $100 cash prize. Another benefit: Your opinion can help us improve the paper, which we are constantly striving to do.

CONTEST RULES

1. Study the questions below, and the comic strips and cartoons illustrated. Indicate what you read or do not read by checking the proper square for each feature. Answers have no bearing whatever on the prize award, but every feature must be checked in order to qualify your entry in the prize contest.

2. When you have checked your reading habit for each feature, then fill in your estimate of what the total paid circulation of the daily Independent-Journal will be on Wednesday, March 11, 1959. This figure varies from day to day—nobody knows what it will be, even at the I-J. Nearly 100% of the 25,000-plus I-J circulation is home delivered, but sales are also made daily at newsstands, stores, and from street stands.

3. The estimate nearest to the correct figure will be the winner. If more than one person sends in the winning number, the $100 prize will be divided equally. Only one award given per family.

4. Members of the I-J staff, employees of this newspaper, and their families are not eligible for the cash prize.

5. Mail or bring this COMPLETE PAGE to the Independent-Journal. If mailed, entry must be postmarked not later than Monday, March 9, 1959. It may be delivered to the I-J not later than 5:30 p.m. on Monday, March 9, 1959.

6. Announcement of the winner will be made in the Independent-Journal of Saturday, March 14, 1959, or as soon thereafter as possible.

CLUES TO HELP YOU WIN

The I-J's average daily net paid circulation for 3 months ending March 31, 1955, was 18,945. For 1956 this figure was 20,916 . . . in 1957, 22,926; and for 1958 it was 24,680. These were averages, of course—the count varied from day to day.

You can take it from there. Good luck!

How To Switch Things Around To Match Your Peak Efficiency

EVERYONE has his own particular hour of maximum efficiency — a time when anything started stands the best chance of turning out successful. Mine is from 9:15 to somewhere between 10:15 and 10:30 a.m.

You might think I could squeeze in an extra 15 minutes by starting at nine sharp but it doesn't work out that way. It has nothing to do with the morning cup of coffee which I like no later than 8:30 or not at all. My motor just doesn't get warmed up until 9:15 and if I haven't shifted my brain into high gear within an hour my clutch slips and the rest of the day my thinking bogs down when I should be in free wheeling.

One fellow I know can't get off the ground until 6:00 p.m. which is a time for me to pull in for a refill and cool off my engine. He never made good until he went to work on the swing shift in an airplane factory.

Some people have to start long before the first streaks of dawn brighten the sky — others can't make it until the hour hand stands to the right of the meridian.

Now this business of checking the clock to see when you should begin the count down is a little troublesome. If you are in an eight to five job it's pretty difficult to convince the boss he should let you come in at six and take off at three — or read the newspapers and gossip with your secretary until after lunch when your ascendency hits its peak.

It's mostly mental, and there's a way to reconcile offbeat efficiency with normal working hours.

SIX A-Mers: Work on your income tax. Your wits are sharp and after a couple of hours of this any problem will seem like duck soup by comparison. Besides, it's the best time to figure out a way to get back some of what you've already paid in.

EIGHT-TO-NINE A-Mers: You are in the front ranks of good fortune and have nothing to complain about. If you haven't got it up front you just haven't got it.

MID-A-Mers: Ask for a conference and include one or two eight-to-nine A-Mers. Their wheels are already turning and you may get some good ideas. Make sure, however, that it doesn't run past your own mental deadline or you're sunk. In this case, think up an excuse to carry it on until noon and adjourn until after lunch.

ONE-TO-THREE P-Mers: If you or someone else hasn't managed to cook up a morning conference and you can't arrange a dentist appointment or there wasn't anything interesting in the mail, how about studying the financial reports?

Get out the records for 1955, 1956 and 1957, and compare them with 1958. If this doesn't start you thinking, you need a ton of bricks to fall on your head. You better do something about it — and quick.

THREE P.M. UNTIL QUITTING: You've really got a problem — I don't know just what you should do. You're too late a starter for a day job and too early for night work. Maybe you should have married a gal with a lot of money and then you could have played golf or gone travelling and become a novelist.

I guess the only thing left for you is to stay at home and send your wife to work. At least you should be able to start functioning in time to prepare dinner.

This is what comes from my waiting until 2:30 p.m. to get on the ball. I told you I was at my best at nine-fifteen in the morning.

TODAY IS ARBOR DAY, TIME TO PLANT TREES

Most Californians being somewhat on the "tree-happy" side anyway, really don't need an official proclamation from the Governor to encourage them to plant a tree once a year. Yet Arbor Day, today—and consequently Tree Planting Week—have a rather welcome way of making us pause for a moment to consider the tremendous importance of trees in Marin. The California Association of Nurserymen reminds us that this date also coincides with the birthday of Luther Burbank, famed California naturalist.

From a civic viewpoint, this week is an ideal time to organize neighbors, parents, or let's say the congregation of your church, to plant that new street in the subdivision, the new school or the new church.

The sting of a barren freeway can be lessened by strategic tree planting. It has been proven by highway engineers that trees have a safety factor too—breaking the tiresome monotony of the road and helping to cut down driver fatigue.

From a personal standpoint, Tree Planting Week can be a reminder that bareroot season is drawing to a close. That means it will behoove you to go to your nursery without delay and select the flowering tree, the fruit or shade tree that you have been yearning for but have put off buying for one reason or another.

The list of trees that thrive in California would fill several pages. We suggest you consult your local nurseryman about which varieties will suit your particular needs. At any rate, this is a very good time to plant a tree. There is no greater satisfaction.

Victor Jones Knows About Teen-Agers As A Jeweler Knows About A Watch

By JIM GILMARTIN

Victor William Jones can be classified as an authority on that complex creature known as the American teen-ager.

As a high school teacher, attendance officer and athletic coach for some 38 years until his retirement in 1957, the "Grand Old Man" of San Rafael High became as familiar with teeners as an MD is with the human anatomy or a jeweler is with a watch.

He found out what made them tick and tried to keep them running.

"It wasn't always easy," Jones recalled recently. "There were many disappointments. But all in all it was a marvelous experience. If I had it to do over again I would choose the same profession."

AS AN INSTRUCTOR in industrial arts (carpentry and mechanical drawing), Jones said he had several opportunities to get out of teaching and into the more lucrative construction business, "but I wanted to stay with school. The experience of being around kids helped keep me young."

He doesn't stick out his chest and boast that he's helped straighten out many a wayward youngster, but that he did is quite obvious. More than 300 of his former pupils will gather next Wednesday night to tell him "thanks" at a testimonial dinner at Trader Horn's, formerly Hamie's Chuck Wagon, in San Rafael

The event is being sponsored by the San Rafael Athletic Assn., of which Jones is a charter member, and the reason for the testimonial is appropriately summed up by SRAA president Ted Mitchell: "Vic has been a truly outstanding citizen, especially in his contributions to the youth of the community. He's been unselfish and hard-working and, well, we just want to tell him 'thanks for everything.'."

A HEART ATTACK in September of 1955 and a second seizure late the following year led to Jones' retirement from teaching in June of 1957. Now 63 years old, he still keeps in touch with your youngsters as chairman of the Parks and Recreation Commission, which presently is planning the recreational future of the community, and as secretary to the San Rafael Board of Education, a post he's held for 12 years.

Besides those part-time jobs, Jones spends his time "just puttering around the yard" at his large, brown wooden home at 1340 Grand avenue and "playing a little golf" at the Indian Valley course in Novato.

Jones' teaching career included two years at Tonopah, Nev., three more at Carson City and the final 33 at San Rafael High.

HOW DID THE teen-agers of the Model-T, Big Apple and 23 Skidoo era compare with those of the present rock'n' roll and dig that craazy, etc. age?

"Well," Jones thought deeply, "the kids today are a bit spoiled. They're handed everything on a silver platter where in the old days the kids had to work for everything. Take athletics for example. In the old days we could give a football player a bunch of rags for a uniform and he'd fix them up himself and keep them clean. Today the kids are given the best and don't have to lift a finger."

A GOOD SPORT—Victor M. Jones, longtime San Rafael High School coach and shop instructor, has maintained a keen interest in sports all his life. Former students will salute him Wednesday night at a dinner.

How about a comparison between the delinquents of then and now?

"You'll always have troublemakers as long as there are humans, but in general we have really fine youngsters.

"DRINKING AND smoking are problems. But the kids today do it more openly than they did 20 and 30 years ago, and I think that's the fault of adults who are too easy and lenient now. You see kids walking down the street puffing away; and the real trouble-makers don't seem to give a darn who sees them when they go on a beer bust and start fights. I'm not saying the kids in past years didn't cut up a lot, but they didn't dare get caught. Adults have become too lenient, although the laws today are the same as they were back in 1930."

What's the best way to curb JD?

"Athletics," Jones shot back without batting an eye. "I have never known a kid who was interested in athletics and who made good in some sport who ever got into serious trouble. Athletics keeps them busy. It's the guy who loafs, who's got nothing to do, who ends up in trouble."

JONES SPENT many years as San Rafael's attendance officer and dictated a "be firm, but be fair" philosophy. "That was my most interesting work," he recalled, "because you can accomplish a lot of good. We had some very interesting problems and some very sad cases involving the home life of students. To solve some of these problems and help a youngster get his education is a very rewarding experience. There were some disappointments, but they were outnumbered by the successful results.

"I can remember a lot of chronic absentees who, after they got out of school, surprised a lot of people by turning into fine citizens. In fact, some are now teachers themselves."

ONE MAN who swears by Jones' success as truant officer is Angelo Turrini, owner of United Ambulance Co. and former member of the Board of Education. Turrini, who graduated from San Rafael High in 1932, recalls: "Vic was the fairest and squarest guy in any school system. He never wanted to penalize the kids, just try to rationalize with them. He'd take them down to the wood shop and have a man-to-man talk with them. He was very convincing and kept more than just a few kids from quitting school." Turrini added that he was speaking from experience,

"Ol' Vic caught me cutting school once," he laughed.

Jones came to San Rafael in 1924 when the high school and grammar school were combined in one building at the corner of Fourth and E streets. The following year the high school moved to its present site with approximately 300 students and 12 teachers. Today the sprawling, modern plant houses some 1,450 students with 75 faculty members.

JONES' JOB as head athletic director and coach in those early days was quite trying. He thought back:

"We didn't have a gymnasium, so our basketball teams had to play all games away and we had to borrow cars to get there. The football field was dirt and rock, so I've treated a few cuts and bruises in my day. We pioneered sports at the high school and it was no easy task."

Although San Rafael has maintained a successful interscholastic athletic record over the years, Jones remembers what probably is the darkest chapter in Bulldog annals. It happened in 1926 when the varsity football team went to Vallejo. Let him tell about it:

'The previous year we upset Vallejo, so they were really laying for us. On the opening kickoff we recovered a fumble and went on to score a touchdown for a 7-0 lead. But, brother, from then on it was just too bad for us.

"Vallejo, a big, rough, tough team, then proceeded to trounce us 98-7. We couldn't even finish the game because too many of our kids got hurt. So, you see," he chuckles, "I still hold some kind of a record."

THERE IS ONE record he likes to talk about, however, and that is that none of his football teams ever lost a game to arch-rival Tamalpais.

"The Tam game was THE top attraction of the years," he reminisces. "Just mention Tam and our kids would go wild with excitement. We had bon fire rallies before the games and believe me there were plenty of real old fashioned donnybrooks with the Tam kids. Now that other schools have been built that bitter Tam-San Rafael rivalry has diminished."

Jones left coaching in 1930 to become the industrial arts instructor. Contractors put up four walls and the roof of the woodshop; Jones' students did all the interior work.

HE CAN RATTLE off a list of names of his former pupils who went on to become successful contractors, but he also had his problems with young toughs who took the course because they figured it was a snap. Jones recalls two rough-necks in particular who gave him the most trouble and threatened to "beat the hell out of me." Nothing came of it, he added, "Because I just took off my coat, rolled up my sleeves, cocked my fist and told them I'd finish whatever they started. One of them broke down and cried and said he didn't want to fight; the other called me a bunch of unprintable names and ran like the dickens. We had to expel him."

Aside from school activities, Jones has kept busy through the years as a member of such organizations as the Masons, Kiwanis, American Legion, the San Rafael Athletic Assn. and as a director for many years in the Boy Scouts.

HE ALSO TAUGHT in the hobby shop at San Quentin Prison's night school for five years, did construction work on building Marin City and worked on Civilian Defense during World War II.

Born (Dec. 4, 1895) and raised in Denver, Colo., Victor William attended elementary and high school in Denver followed by two years at Colorado State. He left college to join the U.S. Navy at the start of World War I and served two years as an aviation mechanic.

A shortage of teachers after the war prompted Jones to go right to work rather than back to college, so he embarked on his career in Nevada in 1919 and stayed there until 1924, coaching state championship teams in football and basketball in 1921 and 1922. Jones later was to complete his teaching credentials by attending summer sessions at University of California, Denver University, Heald's Engineering School and San Jose State.

NEXT JUNE 16 Jones and his wife, the former Ruth Murray, will celebrate their 39th wedding enniversary. They have two married daughters, Mrs. Colin Hill of San Rafael and Mrs. Ruth Helen Walsh of Santa Clara, and seven grandchildren. A son, Deane Richard, was killed in Germany in World War II.

In summing up his years of work with the teen-agers of the community, Jones says he found the best approach was to "Be firm, but be fair."

Apparently it works for there are many important citizents in San Rafael who grew up under Jones' wing. They'll be there to salute him at his testimonial next Wednesday night.

ILL-FATED ONES — North Pacific Coast engine No. 9, the 'Milton S. Latham,' was wrecked in the collapse of the bridge at Austin Creek on Jan. 14, 1894. Investigation Of Tragedy

Conductor Brown Tells His Story Of Bridge Collapse At Austin Creek

By A. BRAY DICKINSON

(Editor's Note: The tragedy which took eight lives at Austin Creek on Jan. 14, 1894 sparked a full-scale investigation. The unscheduled solo trip by Engine No. 9, its crew and a handful of Cazadero townspeople and visitors ended when the trestle over creek gave way under the locomotive.

By Tuesday morning Austin Creek had subsided enough to expose the stack and forward part of the locomotive. Instead of falling directly beneath the bridge, it had taken a side plunge and lay on its side several feet down stream and close enough to the Duncans Mills bank to enable men from that side to walk out to the wreck on a plank. All day they poked around the wreck, hoping to find more bodies.

DURING THE day many outsiders arrived in this little mountain community.

There were those who joined the ranks of searching parties that had just recovered the body of Postmaster Gould. Several railroad officials were on hand to supervise operations and obtain first-hand information. A construction gang rolled in to begin rebuilding the demolished bridge. A news reporter and staff artist were sent out Monday afternoon by the San Francisco Examiner.

These two men got as far as Guerneville by train, via Santa Rosa, then next morning made the eleven-mile trip over the moutains on horseback to be on the scene.

Coroner Jewett devoted the afternoon to an inquest over the remains of Brommer and Gould. The chief witness was Conductor Brown, who told a story, mainly to clear himself of blame, which was reported in part as follows:

"It was about seven o'clock Sunday evening when Engineer Briggs proposed that we take a run down the road a short distance to see if the bridges were safe enough to bear the weight of the train we were to take out next morning, leaving Cazadero at five o'clock. I assented and we rolled the locomotive out of the roundhouse. Several minutes were consumed in making ready and in the meantime a number of men, among those who are now dead, gathered. Some of them expressed a desire to go with us. I warned them that it was against rules of the company for anyone not connected with the road to ride in the engine cab.

Never thinking that they would make the trip after this warning, I took my place on the forward pilot and we started. I did not see the men jump into the cab.

"We ran down the half mile of track to the bridge and, upon signal, Briggs stopped just this side of the structure. Briggs came to the head of the engine and we conferred as to the best course to pursue. We agreed that I should go over the bridge on foot and walk to the next trestle, taking time to examine both structures. Our idea was that if the second bridge had been washed away or was in a dangerous condition it would be foolish to cross the first bridge.

"Briggs was to wait on the Cazadero side until I returned.

"I crossed and examined the bridge carefully. Although I did not like the looks of things, I thought I would go on to the next bridge and examine the first one again on my return. Had I the least idea that Briggs would attempt to break our agreement, I would have ordered the locomotive back to the roundhouse.

"I crossed the bridge and went on down the track toward Duncans Mills. I heard no sound from the engine that caused me to look backward until I had walked probably a mile. Then I heard a sound that will ring in my ears forever. It was a long, loud scream. For a moment I was paralyzed and lost control of my legs. Through the darkness and the torrent of rain I could see nothing; then I ran back to the bridge, only to find out that my misgivings were correct.

There was no headlight shining at me. Looking down from the parted bridge I could see no trace of the locomotive. I ran down on the bank and waded knee-deep into the water, holding on to the bushes to keep from being swept away.

"There was no sound except the seething waters and I could not see anything.

"Nothing could be done for the poor fellows in the water. I was frantic and dashed my lantern on the ground. My next thought was to notify relatives in Cazadero. I started up the hill but lost my way. I must have wandered around for hours before I saw a light from a logger's cabin. I do not know who the man was that gave me shelter. I stayed until six o'clock in the morning, then struck out for Duncan's and from there telegraphed a report."

Further testimony at the inquest brought out the fact that Engineer Briggs was opposed to taking the engine out on account of the uncertain condition of the bridges but Brown insisted on going.

Their dispute took place at the dinner table in the presence of half a dozen people.

THE VERDICT of the jury was one of accidental death. But Brown was a forlorn individual in Cazadero. Everybody appeared to hold him responsible and scoffed at the story he told, claiming it was ridiculous to say he did not know who rode on the engine; that no one would start out to walk a mile to the second bridge and back in the rain while the locomotive waited. Everyone thought the eight men were pleasure-bent because the trip otherwise would have been made by daylight if their purpose had been really to inspect the bridges.

Subsequent evidence indicated that at least one of the victims had a chance for his life. Occupants of a logging camp a mile and a half below the scene of disaster heard calls for help that night and saw a man in shirt sleeves floating down stream among some logs. But he disappeared before any aid could be extended. This was supposed to have been young Hart because his coat and vest were found in a tangle of driftwood by what was then called the Bohemian camp ground.

His watch had stopped at eight o'clock.

Artist Of Air Combat

Alfred Owles of San Anselmo paints airplanes for a living, but it took a second world war to turn his hobby of 25 years into a career.

He first started painting pictures of airplanes in action during World War I, when he "saw a lot of excitement in the air." He began to do watercolors of air battles of his 27th Aero Squadron.

"Painting airplanes must have gotten into my blood, for I have continued with it ever since," he says.

Owles had mastered the English style of watercolors during his four years of study at the School of Art Academy at Nottingham, England. He came to America in 1914 and when war broke out enlisted in the Army Aerial Photograph Company.

After the war, he went to work as an illustrator for Western Utilities Corp. His airplane paintings, done as a hobby, were used as illustrations in English magazines. He also exhibited in such far-flung places as Australia and Hawaii.

During World War II, he found himself working for big aircraft manufacturers. Owles was in demand because he could reproduce an airplane even before it was built. He had always worked from blueprints for accuracy.

He is, by the way, one of the few men who has studied the blueprints of a Russian MIG. Ask him how he came by them and he only smiles mysteriously.

"People mail me information," he will say.

His paintings are never staid. He usually casts his planes against a background of action, picturing the planes from any angle, against ground or sky also alive with action. His detail is accurate down to the inner structure of a wing shot away. His realism extends to showing victims of a shattered plane falling from the flaming wreckage.

ALFRED OWLES

"You notice, I never give the enemy any advantage," he points out.

He has a theory that he shot down more planes and blew up more ammunition dumps during the war than anyone else. He has painted so many planes in the past 40 years that he sometimes forgets their designations.

More recently, his "Devil's Pipe Organ," (bank of heavy artillery guns) has been reproduced in Newsweek magazine. He does ships, too, for Dollar Lines, and has pictured Hiller's new converter plane, a combination of helicopter and conventional propellor plane for landing on constricted fields.

Fifty-seven of Owles' original paintings are now on display at the Nut Tree on Highway 40 as part of the celebration of the restaurant's airport. The firm not only paid for the framing of all 57, but had them insured for $15,000.

Another aftermath of World War I of which he is proud is his "adoption" by the late Dr. Margaraet Ching, who took many flyers under her wing during the Depression.

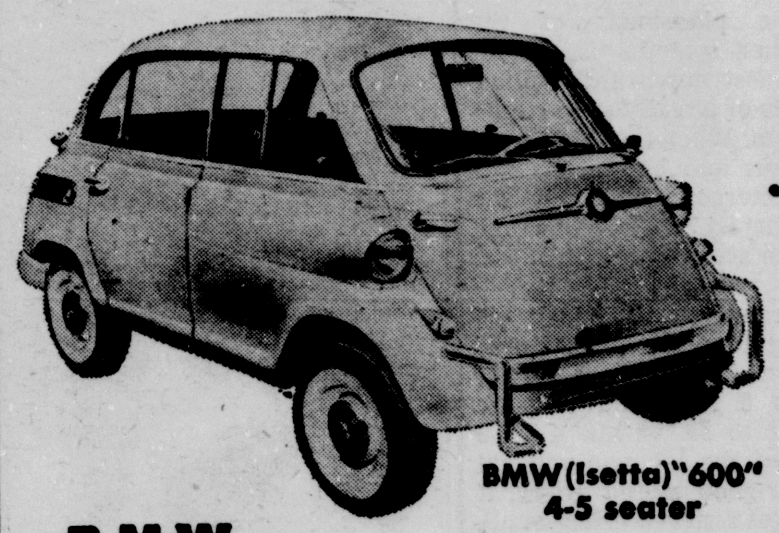

"I'm No. 21. She always remembered us by numbers."

Owles and his wife have lived in Marin since 1924, making their home at 189 Spring Grove avenue. Since airplanes became his full-time job, he has turned to painting landscapes for a hobby, but never exhibits them because he doesn't feel they are much different from any others done in the English style. Mrs. Owles, by the way, is an artist, too. She paints flowers.

STEREO and HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

Eighth of a weekly series of articles which will cover all phases of STEREOPHONIC SOUND for the home.

The truly remarkable achievement that has made Stereo practical for every home is the Stero Disc. The Stero Disc looks like an ordinary LP, long play record, and is played at the same 33⅓ rpm as the LP; however, the Stereo Disc has TWO SOUND TRACKS inscribed on the one groove. Remarkable, isn't it? The groove is cut in a V shape with each side of the groove at an angle of 45 degrees from vertical. The impressions on one groove wall carry one sound track, and the impressions on the other groove wall carry the second sound track.

How are these sound tracks used? The diamond needle on the Stereo Cartridge has the complex job of moving up and down and sideways to follow the impressions of both sound tracks simultaneously. Only one needle is used, but this one needle activates a cartridge made up of two separate elements, one for each sound track.

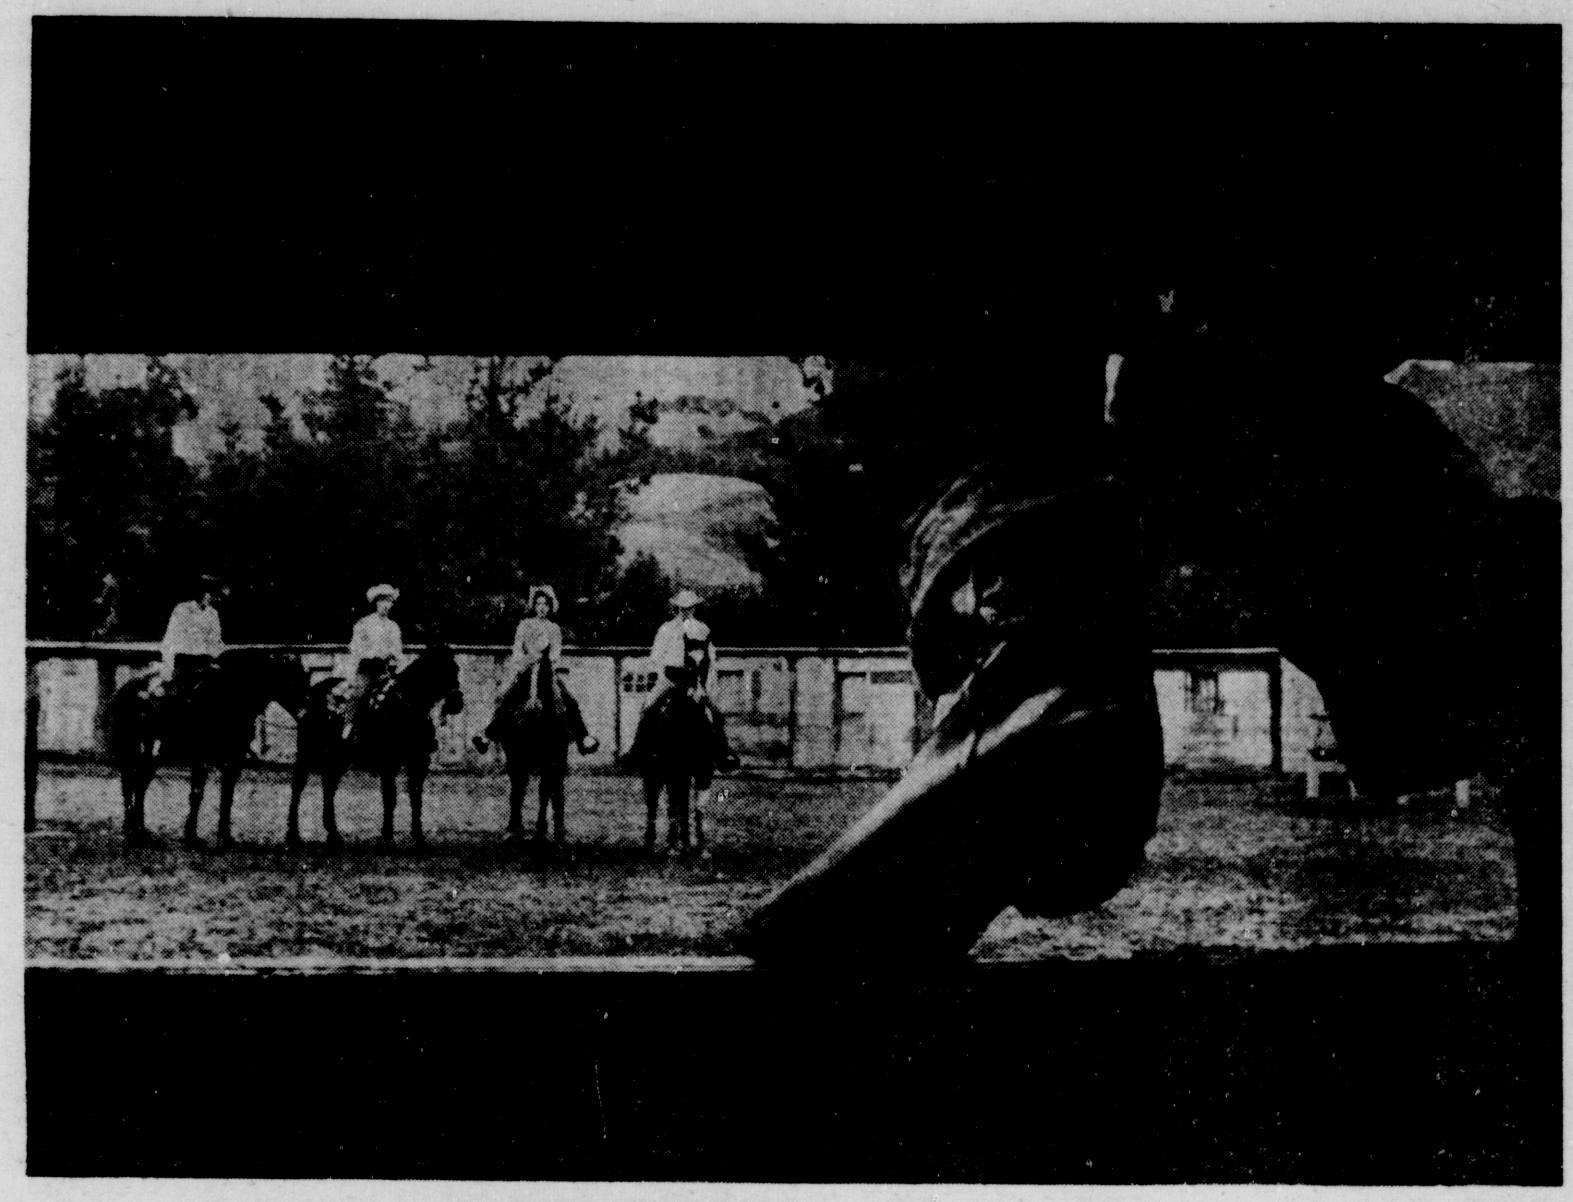

What components are required for a Stereo Phono System? The basic units required are: a high quality turntable or changer (wired for stereo), a stereo cartridge with diamond needle (the diamond needle is a must), a stereo amplifier (a stereo amplifier is really 2 amplifiers built together with integrated controls for balancing the 2 sound tracks), and 2 complete range speaker systems. At any time that the user desires, an AM-FM tuner, and a Tape Recorder can be added to make the Home Stereo Music Center complete.

The placement of the speaker systems is one of the most important requirements of a really good stereo system. When Catania Sound designs and builds the custom stereo models you see in our Hi-Fi Store, no one stereo system is built in less than two cabinets. Unless the room in which you are going to place your stereo system is extremely narrow (6 to 8 feet) and you are going to sit within 4 or 5 feet of the set, you will not get a good stereo effect, if you get a stereo effect at all. You must be able to move one speaker system with respect to the other, so that they can be placed properly in your home.

The public is invited to visit our Hi-Fi Sound room at any time for a complete demonstration of Stereophonic Sound. Let us show you about speaker placement.

By BONNIE GARETY

A mutual interest in horses, horseback riding and Girl Scouting drew six girls and two adults together in the summer of 1958 and resulted in the formation of Marin County Mounted Girl Scout Troop 171, first in Marin and one of nine in the entire United States.

Troop 171 meets on the second and fourth Wednesday evenings of each month alternating at the homes of the leader, Mrs. Richard Henika and assistant leader, Mrs. Albert Shell. Daytime meetings are held as frequently as possible at the Sleepy Hollow Stable in order for the girls to work on a program of the care and handling of horses and equipment, practice drilling and to take trail rides.

Mrs. Henika has extended a welcome to all girls who are interested in senior scouting and horses and has stressed the point that it is not necessary for the prospective member to own her own mount nor is it necessary for her to have been a Girl Scout previously. Some of the girls of Troop 171 own their own horses and others rent from the stable. The troop program includes the Senior Girl Scout "Five Point Program" requirement.

A "get acquainted" night was held Feb. 13 for 13 guests at the home of Mrs. Shell, 1 Legend Road, Sleepy Hollow. Troop 171 entertained the Oakland Mounted Troop with an evening of entertainment and "horse talk" including a color, sound film on "The Care and Handling of Horses." The combination of 13s proved to be a good one for all who participated.

Girls in Troop 171 are as follows: Maribeth Chouinard, Lynda Grant, Kim Morgan, Carol Newman, Virginia Odetto and Gale Shell.

An estimated 8,000 girls and 1,500 adults will set up their tents and exchange ideas on Girl Scouting when the 1959 Girl Scout Roundup takes place near Colorado Springs July 3 through 12. Eight girls have been selected for the patrol which will represent Marin County Girl Scouts for this event. They are as follows: Toni Leisure, San Rafael; Vicki Emerson and Barbara Ford, Mill Valley; Winnie Watkins, Belvedere; Randy Dougherty, Tiburon; Ginny Carter and Marianna Walsh, San Anselmo, and Barbara Hayes.

Requirements for selection which is open to all Marin schools, are as follows: girls must be at least 14 years old by July 29, 1959, and have completed the 9th grade in school; they must be registered Senior Scouts; they must be endorsed by their troop and leader and have fulfilled the camping requirements.

Girls from every U. S. territory and all five continents where members of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts are found, will be represented at the 1959 Round-up. Marin Girl Scouts heading for the Colorado Springs area in July plan to take polished redwood, abalone shells and poppy seeds to represent their section of California.

Conservation First

As part of their conservation program the Girl Scouts this year are embarking on a landscaping project, the area to be landscaped being their own camp, Sky Oaks.

Located approximately half way between Fairfax and the Meadow Club and a bout half a mile off the road, Sky Oaks has great natural beauty with its oaks and madrones and many other native trees and shrubs. However, its natural loveliness can be greatly enhanced through the addition of other natives.

The girls working on their different badges and nature work will have suggested projects worked out for them by Mrs. J. S. Detweiler who will make the master landscaping plan. Working with her will be Mrs. Lawrence Murray and Mrs. Parnell Finn, both of whom have had many years experience with the camping program at the camp.

Miss Lee Crouch of the U.S. Forest Service recently surveyed the camp, and many of her ideas about improving it will be incorporated in the landscaping plan.

IT IS PLANNED that the whole camp will become more secluded with Monterey pines. Ten the pine trees which have recently been donated by troops in Ross, are to grow along the access road. Toyon, California lilac, and Fremontia will be planted around the unit sites to insure privacy there, too. The trails through the camp will be re-designed and made wider so that girls can confine their travel to them and thus not disturb the new plantings.

Just before the recent rains girls from Ross under Mrs. Henry Eddy's direction planted wild flower seeds on the hillsides. Other Ross groups plan to grow additional plants from seeds and cuttings, according to Mrs. Alexander Black who is neighborhood chairman.

These plants along with ones grown by girls in other areas throughout the county will be varied enough to provide material for nature study and plant identification.

It is planned that much of the trail designing and improving will be done next summer by the older girls at day camp under the supervision of Mrs. Finn, day camp director. The whole program has brought forth much enthusiasm from the girls and their leaders who recognize that Sky Oaks is just about as nice a camp as one could ask for—and that it is a privilege for them to have a hand in its beautification.

'HE'S SO LITTLE'--Sixteen-month-old Willie Simonds watches Mama weighing 4-pound puppy in a wash pan on kitchen scales.

'HE DOESN'T CRY' — Mama Carol Simonds bathes young boxer while son Willie takes lesson in behavior.

Mother And Child At Work

P.S.—Willie's Only 16 Months Old, But He Loves Guide Dogs' Kennels

By DORA PERRY

With today's high cost of living, women with small children often dream of finding a job they can do at home, while keeping an eye on the youngsters. Carol Simonds, who lives at 23 Meadow drive in Santa Venetia, goes the dream one better.

Carol is the kennel manager at Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., and takes Willie, her 16 months old son, to work with her each day.

"I never take him on the night calls, though," Carol is sure to announce.

And what are her night calls?

THE BREEDING program of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc. is regulated by the future training schedule of the school, and calls for four new litters of pups a month. Since pups, like babies, frequently arrive in the wee small hours, Carol often is called to the school in the middle of the night.

Carol has her own office in the kennels on the 11-acre training grounds. It is there, surrounded by anywhere from 120 to 180 dogs, little Willie spends his day while his mother performs her varied duties.

Like everyone on the staff at Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., Carol's primary interest in life is, and always has been, dogs.

If you ask Carol how she happened to get started in this work, she's apt to say: "My maiden name was Rover and people were always calling me Miss Barker or Miss Beagle, so I knew where I belonged."

Her real interest is obvious, though, in the way she handles the new-born pups, and the ease with which she distinguishes one of the wriggly, furry animals from another.

BACK IN 1940, while she was still in her teens, Carol answered an ad for a "college type" girl to do kennel work. The salary was room and board and pocket money. It wasn't until the end of the first month that she learned the "pocket money" was only $5. By then she was so wrapped up in the dogs and her work, she didn't consider quitting.

At the end of six months Carol moved to her second job, at 10 times the salary of the first, or, to be more explicit, room, board and $50 a month. She was working in her third kennel when the war broke out and having just celebrated her 21st birthday and being single, she decided her country needed her, and enlisted in the WAACS.

ALTHOUGH there were no women in the canine corps, Carol asked to be assigned to that department. After several months in the Transport Corps, Carol was sent to Fort Robinson in Nebraska with three other women for a try-out in the K-9 Corps. For various reasons, but mostly because of the hard work, the three others quickly asked to be transferred, leaving Carol with the distinction of being the only woman in the K-9 Corps.

It was there she met William F. Johns, who is now the executive director of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc. At that time Johns, as assistant director of the K-9 Corps, was supervising the training of thousands of combat and reconnaissance dogs, and Carol worked for him.

AFTER THE war was over both Johns and Carol remained active in the dog field, both being licensed professional handlers. They met occasionally in various parts of our country at dog shows.

In 1949 Johns was named executive director of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc. He immediately began revitalizing the school's breeding stock with his own dogs. Through dog fanciers he learned Carol was managing a pet shop in New Jersey and asked her to be kennel manager.

When Carol started to work for Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., the school was not as large as it is today, and she did not have two assistants.

ON THE DOT of 8 each morning Carol and Willie drive down Los Ranchitos road through the gates. If the weather is sunny and warm, Carol opens Willie's play pen on the lawn and he amuses himself until noon. If the weather is dismal, she puts the pen beside her desk as she makes collars or keeps books.

The first part of Carol's working day is spent doing the general housekeeping for her canine family: Sweeping and hosing down the quarters of the adult dogs, and changing the shredded newspaper bedding of the pups. The outside runs are cleaned and washed down after the inside is dry enough for the dogs to be indoors.

The main meal of the day —made up of equal parts of meat, prepared dry food and water—is made in a vast tub which holds 100 pounds. All the dogs partake of this first meal.

young pups receive a third meal.

After Carol has attended to the second feeding, Willie is put down for his long nap. It is then Carol brings the kennel records up to date: Makes notes of what pups are being delivered or returned to "adopted" homes. She also keeps an accurate account of the breeding schedule.

Later Willie, fresh from his nap, watches from his play pen as his mother grooms the dogs. Since every one of the 160 must be brushed frequently and washed when needed, this is quite a chore which Willie enjoys as he periodically offers a high pitched comment that makes no impression on either Carol or the animal.

IF THE TIME is right, Carol also takes care of breeding the dogs in the afternoon. At 4:30 she cleans the kennels, makes one last check, then bundling Willie into his heavy clothing she drives him home.

After spending so many hours with Guide Dogs, you'd think Carol would be anxious to relax. Indeed, her spare time is devoted to her hobby: raising and showing top prize - winning Pembroke Welsh Corgies.

Ask Carol what she'd like her son to be when he grows up and she'll probably answer: "Chances are Willie will be a Guide Dog trainer, and I hope so. Anybody who works at Guide Dogs for the Blind can tell you the work is fascinating.

"When you see the blind people arrive at the school having so much difficulty getting around — then only 4 weeks later watch them leave with the quick, confident stride of a sighted man, it really gets you!"

SINCE GUIDE DOGS for the Blind, Inc., was organized 17 years ago 765 blind men and women have received Guide Dogs from the school, absolutely free. Although it costs approximately $1,700 to train each man-dog team, no charge is made to the blind, as the school is entirely operated on voluntary contributions, usually in the form of annual drives.

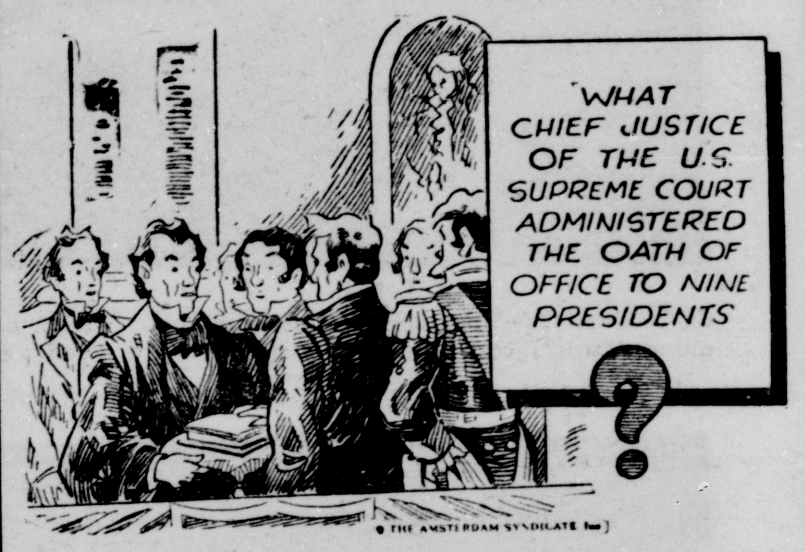

The 1959 campaign of the Marin County Committee of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., opened on Monday under the co-chairmanship of Mrs. Maurice A. Gale and Mrs. Fisher Kinslow, Jr. Contributions to this worthy cause may be sent to the volunteer treasurer: William P. Murray of the First National Bank in San Rafael.

Marin Is A Treasury Of Vanishing Wildlife

This Is What You'll See On Tramps In Marshland, Chapparal Or Ocean Areas

By S. THOMPSON WALKER
Curator
Junior Museum

Marin County offers a variety of natural homes or habitats for many different kinds of wildlife. In the study of plants or animals, even on the most casual basis, it is important that these areas be considered as a part of the study because they can tell the observer much a bout the life and habits of the plants or animals being studied.

The extent of the habitat will vary with the animal being studied. It might be an area covering many miles if the animal under study is an eagle, or it might be a single bush or tree as is often the case in the study of insects.

In the study of plants it is often difficult to determine the reasons for a plant selecting a certain area; it may be features as subtle as soil acidity, drainage or average temperatures. Fortunately many of the local animals have more obvious reasons for their selection of homes and this makes study much easier.

THE NEED FOR food is the basic reason for animals living where they do. If an animal has a diversified diet and can feed on carrion, fruit, insects and garbage as the crow does then it can range over a broadly varied area with great success. This is one of the plentiful animals that thrives on civilization as it is known today. On the other hand an animal with a rather selective diet and restricted feeding habits may find life increasingly difficult. An example of this might be the long-billed curlew which requires a combination of open meadows and marshes where it feeds on insects and small aquatic animals. As the marshes are drained and filled this is one of the birds that must move or die.

For the beginner or casual observer Marin County can be divided into three general areas; the bay, with its mud flats and marshes, the open rolling hills and valleys or chaparral areas, and the rocky cliffs, sandy beaches and rocky points of the ocean coast. These are areas that actually contain many smaller specific and varied habitats but for the beginner the three general areas will serve as a useful start.

BAY with its marshes, mud flats, brackish sloughs.

1. Egrets — the yellow-billed American Egret and the smaller black-billed Snowy Egret are both white birds with long necks and legs that stand in shallow water waiting for fish or stalk slowly through the marsh in search of insects or frogs.

2. Western Grebe — On open water the dark back, white breast and neck and black-topped head are sure signs of the slim graceful western grebe. Repeated dives and long stays underwater as it searches for fish give just proof of its ability and fame as a diver.

3. Red-winged Blackbird— A solid black body relieved only by a vivid red patch on each wing clearly identifies this bird as it teeters on the end of a tule or flies low over the marshes.

4. Killdeer — Rocky beaches or dry fill along the bay usually produce a pair of these noisy birds. A white band on the forehead and two black bands on the breast are sure identification of this plover.

5. Marsh Hawk—The sight of a gull sized bird with long wings and a long narrow tail with a white patch at the base beating slowly over the marshes is proof enough of the presence of the marsh hawk.

6. Willet—A large grayish bird that probes the mud at the edge of the waves and jerks its head when at rest is probably the willet; if it shows a broad white band in a black wing as it flies it is surely the willet.

7. Long-billed Curlew — Easily seen at great range is the 6 or 7 inch down-curved bill which serves as proof that the large brown bird with blackish brown streaks and markings is the curlew. It uses the bill to probe in the mud for small animals.

8. Avocet — A light head and neck and a back that is banded black and white combine with a strange up-curved bill to identify the avocet as it sweeps the shallow water and soft mud in search of food.

9. Coot—This is the very common stocky black bird with a white bill that feeds in fields, marshes, lawns and dives in the sloughs and bay. Although the size and general shape of a duck it is really one of the rails, a group of shy seldom-seen birds of the marsh.

10. Harbor Seal—This marine mammal often rests in numbers on the mud flats and bars around the bay. It is smaller than the sea lion averaging 5 feet in length and has yellowish gray fur with darker spots. Often seen around Angel Island and Sausalito.

CHAPARRAL, rolling hills of grass, oak, manzanita and madrone.

1. Turkey Vulture — This large black bird flies with its wings held in a shallow V with the feathers at the tip spread like fingers. The tiny red head hardly shows at a distance but the eyes in that head are remarkably sharp and can find the vulture's food (dead animals) from a distance of many miles.

2. Brown Towhee—A pedestrian type bird usually seen scratching among grass and leaves for small insects and weed seeds. The plain brown body and rather long brown tail are distinctive in their plainness.

3. House Finch—Often called the Linnet, this is a common bird recognized by the bright red head and breast. The sparrow-like female is grayish brown and is best identified through her association with her brightly colored husband. These birds commonly nest in the garden or patio.

4. Red-tailed Hawk — This greatly persecuted bird may be seen sailing in large lazy circles high in the sky. The body is brown above with the breast light tan or white and the stomach streaked with dark brown. The dull reddish brown tail often shows in good light as the hawk circles in the sun.

5. California Jay — Often called a scrub jay because of a preference for open scrub oak country this bird is generally blue on the upperparts and gray below. The shoulders and back have a large brown patch that clearly shows as the bird flies squawking from tree to tree.

6. California Woodpecker— The presence of dead trees and posts with hundreds of acorns embedded in holes drilled in the surface is a sure indication that the acorn woodpecker is at work in the area. The broad black wings with white patches and the snowy rump are final proof that the bird seen is the noisy storer of so many provisions.

7. Meadowlark — The rich happy song of the meadowlark is probably a better known indication of its presence than the actual sight of the bird. This common member of the blackbird and oriole family can usually be seen on power lines, fence posts or in open fields where the bright yellow breast with the black V stand out clearly.

8. California Ground Squirrel — This squirrel has a brownish tan body marked with scattered spots of black and gray that give it a grizzled appearance. The tail is rather short and only slightly bushy. Their food habits and burrows can be troublesome to man if they are not properly controlled.

9. Badger—This interesting and attractive animal is seldom seen in person but the large oval holes he digs as he searches for ground squirrels are a sure sign of his presence. Look for the broad flattened body of this animal during early morning or late afternoon in open rolling hills where the burrows of the ground squirrel are common.

OCEAN COAST with tide pools, rocky points, sand beaches and rocky cliffs.

1. Cormorant — The black forms of the cormorant are common as they fly close to the water with necks stretched straight out and wings beating rapidly. They ride low on the water when resting and dive with great ease. They are now protected by law in California although they were shot in great numbers a few years ago.

2. Brown Pelican — This huge bird is the picture of grace in flight despite his grotesque appearance on land. The generally gray body, whitish head and huge bill, which is carried at a downward angle in flight, identify this bird as he dives with a heavy splash in search of fish.

3. Sandpiper — There are many small birds that run along the beaches just out of reach of the incoming waves. Most of them are brown above with light or white underparts. The bill is rather long and slender, the tail short, and the body is held horizontally to the ground. A common sandpiper is the spotted, so named from the dots of brownish black on the white underparts.

4. Surf Scooter — Along most of the coast black heavy bodied birds can be seen riding the waves just off shore. The bill of this bird is heavy and distinctive being colored white and black at the base, reddish for much of its length and bright orange at the tip. When taking off they often paddle or run heavily on the surface for some distance.

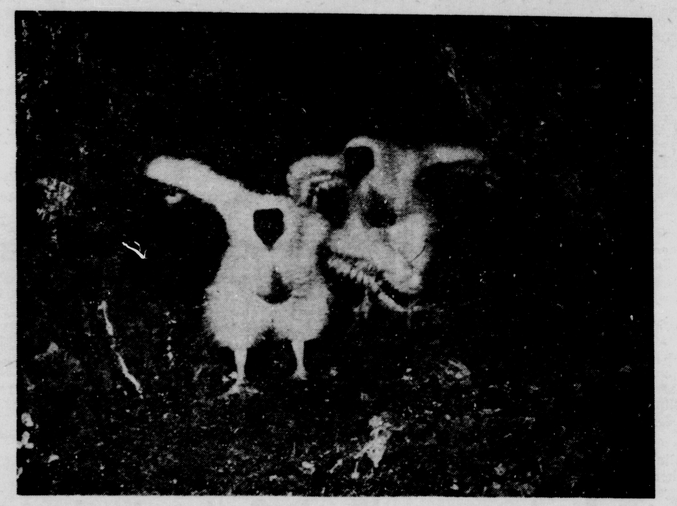

5. Raven—Ravens are solitary birds and can be seen singly or in pairs sailing along the crests of the cliffs at the ocean or on the beach feeding on dead fish and animals washed ashore. They look much like a large crow but sail or soar in the manner of a hawk when the winds are right. Large stick nests seen on the cliffs are usually raven nests.

6. Stellar Sea Lion — Several of the sheltered beaches in the Pt. Reyes area can usually be counted on to have anywhere from a dozen to a hundred or more sea lions. Unlike seals the sea lion is a fairly agile animal despite his great size (a male may be 10 to 12 feet long and weigh a ton) and can by means of rotating hind flippers climb the rocks and lower cliffs along the coast.

7. Oyster-catcher — Rocky ledges and outcroppings along the coast are favorite areas of a large black bird with an amazing bright red bill. The bill is used to pry shellfish from the rocks and to open the shells.

CORMORANTS—This fish-eater is common along Marin's coast. They are still being shot, and it was legal to do so until three years ago.

TURKEY VULTURES—Believe it or not, these strange creatures were photographed within San Rafael city limits. Their natural nest was at the base of a hollow redwood tree. Nests are characterized by an offensive smell.

BABY BARN OWLS—These strange-looking creatures were already 1 foot high when they fell out of their nest in a palm tree on the Dominican College campus. They are common in Marin, especially around large homes and barns.

ANTHONY'S GREEN HERON — You may catch a glimpse of this rather rare marsh bird if you're lucky. It is named for the irridescent green plumage on its head. Bird stands about two feet high. (Photos by S. Thompson Walker)

For Birds And People

The birds' one assured claim on Marin's fast-vanishing coastline has been established by the Marin Conservation League with the help of the Marin Audubon Society. The sanctuary set up on the eastern shore of Richardson Bay assures the birds a refuge and assures Marinites of a place where they can become acquainted with rare as well as common species of waterfowl.

In the larger picture, the sanctuary is a natural located in th Pacific Flyway, which is to birds what Highway 101 is to Marin commuters. Birds who partake in annual migrations need a place to rest and stop, refuel, however.

ON THE HUMAN side, the sanctuary offers a place where conservation education may be carried on. The old Lyford mansion which was moved from Strawberry to the Rose Verrall property off Tiburon boulevard has been renovated and is now being used for classes.

Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls are among the groups who will take advantage of the program, which is directed by Mrs. Calvin Terwilliger of Mill Valley, education chairman for the local chapter of the National Audubon Society.

The program is much broader than just bird watching. Boys and girls go on field trips in areas away from their homes. Fairfax youngsters learn about creek and bay life. Mill Valley youngsters are taken up into the hills, where they are treated to an ever-changing parade of plant life.

"EACH WEEK is full of surprises," says Mrs. Terwilliger.

The project is not complete. Eventually, the conservationists hope to extend their acreage to around 400. First on the list is the piece of land between the Verrall property and Tiburon Highway. Funds are also being solicited to help buy the stretch of coastline between the sanctuary and Belvedere's tidelands, so that the whole area will be protected from real estate development.

The proximity of the sea plane base at Sausalito alarms neither the conservationists nor the birds, surprisingly enough. Motor boats are another matter.

In order to protect the sanctuary itself, the conservationists will seek legislation to keep small craft out of the arm of the bay where wildfowl congregate.

WEASEL—Seldom seen, this wily creature is responsible for a certain amount of killing, particularly around henhouses. He is not protected by law.

Dominican Broadcast Focuses On Little-Known U.S. Music

A recent Pageant of American Music broadcast by Dominican College over KTIM attracted attention to an interesting part of our musical history.

The works played were those of the American-Moravian composer John Antes (1740-1811), who was also a missionary, watchmaker, violin-maker, mechanic and inventor!

His trios—three altogether—had been published in England by a "Giovanni A-T-S," who called himself a "Dilletante Americano." His none other than John Antes.

THE TRIOS WERE discovered in 1941 in Winston-Salem, N.C. and the broadcast by Dominican was very likely their first West Coast performance.

However, those trios are only a very small part of American - Moravian music which has been brought to light by Dr. Donald M. McCorkle, whose research is follow with great interest by the music department of Dominican.

Especially interested is Sister Mary Dominic, who says that 6,000 to 10,000 manuscripts have been found in church archives back East, containing about 1,000 symphonies, string quartets and trios and well over 6,000 sacred works, consisting of choral anthems, cantatas, oratorios and arias.

It is an altogether amazing discovery of which one would like to hear more samples.

THE NEXT CONCERT of the Bay Area Ballet Company in Marin will be tomorrow at Angelico Hall, on the Dominican campus in San Rafael.

Two premiers are scheduled: "Rappacini's Daughter," a dramatic ballet, and an abstract ballet to music by Vivaldi. Two successful ballets of last season, "Entr'act" and "Jeux d'Enfants" will complete the program.

San Rafael High School students will present a full dress production of "Oklahoma" next weekend.

Sally Hobson, who has leading roles in the ballet, will also be a soloist in "Oklahoma."

Early Religions

Three distinguished scholars examine the major pre-Christian religious systems in "Religions of the Ancient East," the 14th and latest volume to be issued in "The Twentieth Century Encyclopedia of Catholicism." To be published by Hawthorn Books on March 10, the book discusses the growth and influence of the beliefs of Egypt, Sumer, Babylon, Phoenicia and early Iran.

Music & Drama

The March 13 and 14 performances are under direction of Hugo Rinaldi, who performed the show more than 300 times in San Francisco. General director is Edward Day; choreographer is Leona Norman and vocal director is Byron Jones.

HOUSEKEEPING — At Guide Dogs kennels, daily housecleaning involves hosing down first inside, then outside. Willie, 16 months, watches well out of water's way. Pups are outside while inside is cleaned and vice versa.

St. Raphael's Guild Readies Comedy For Staging In April

Rehearsals for a delightful comedy, "The Velvet Glove," by Rosemary Casey, to be presented in St. Raphael's auditorium the evenings of April 9, 10, and 12, at 8:30 p.m., sponsored by St. Raphael's Mothers' Guild are in full swing now.

Directing "The Velvet Glove," a Christopher award play and success on Broadway, will be Mrs. John F. McCarthy who directed the highly entertaining "Seven Nuns at Las Vegas" last spring.

Mrs. McCarthy brings extensive experience and training in directing, acting and teaching to the role of director. She studied for her master's degree in speech and drama at the Catholic University of America where she studied under Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, Rev. Gilbert Hartke, O.P., the noted head of the department of speech and drama, Walter Kerr, the distinguished critic, author, and playwright of the New York Herald-Tribune, and Alan Schneider, New York director.

Mrs. McCarthy also taught drama and directed at the Academy of the Presentation in San Francisco, and taught drama at Dominican College. In-between having six children she took three leading versatile roles for the Ross Valley Players. Her husband is State Senator John F. McCarthy.

In the midst of all this turmoil the reverend mother seeks to soothe and smooth ruffled feathers with her "velvet glove" touch.

BRINGING the finesse of experience to the role of reverend mother is Mrs. Louis J. Leonardi who taught drama at San Rafael High School where she directed many plays and operettas. She also was director of the St. Raphael Players, a thespian group that used to produce the annual St. Patrick Day plays.

Ralph Quaglin, the bishop, also brings experience to his demanding role. A newcomer to Marin, Quaglin is recently from Florida where he had the lead in "The Affairs of State" and "Mary Queen of Scots" in the Tampa Little Theater.

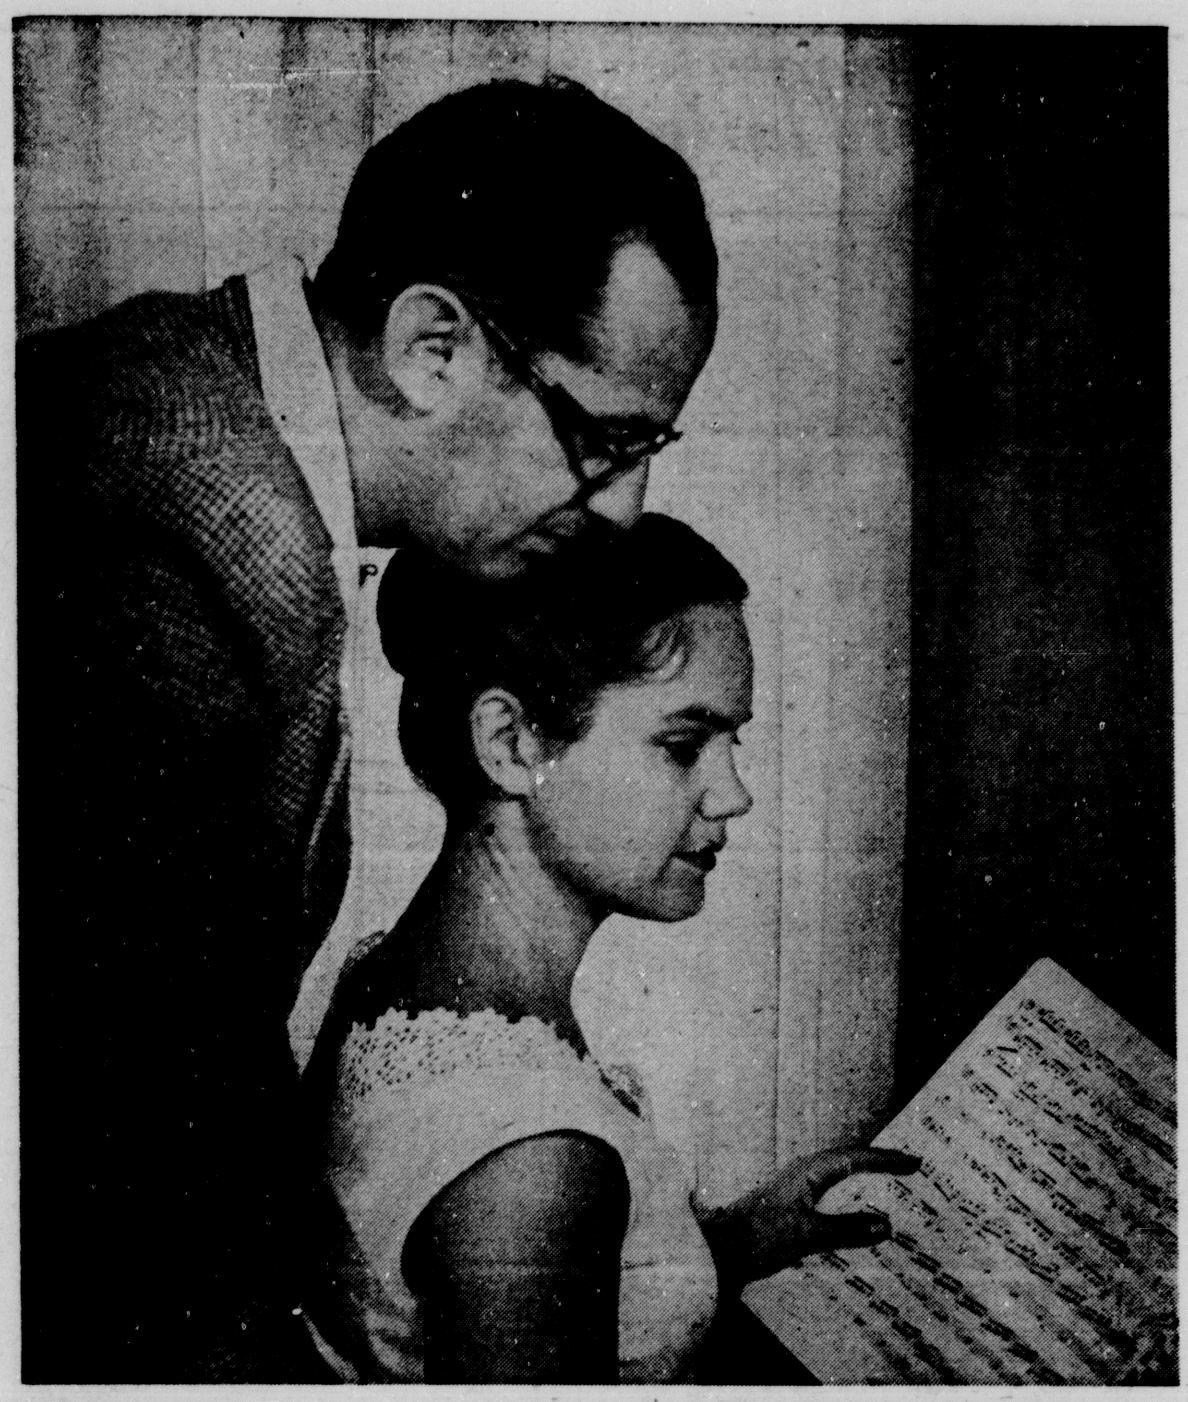

The kindly old monsignor will be played by William Slattery. A past president of the Knights of Columbus and the "perennial" president of the Holy Name Society of St. Raphael's parish, Slattery, among other accomplishments, is also the father of 10 children.

Mrs. Bette Botzenhardt, who portrayed sister superior in the successful comedy presented last year "Seven Nuns at Las Vegas" will play the energetic, determined dean of women, Sister Monica.

THE LOVE INTEREST casts two naturals in the roles of the talented young professor played by Milton Schwartz and the secretary to reverend mother, played by Mrs. Raymond Schmidt. Schwartz won a football scholarship to Santa Clara from San Rafael High School and after service in the Navy for three years, married, has four children and is manager of Casa Marin Furniture. Mrs. Schmidt too is a graduate of San Rafael High School, the young mother of five children and an often sought model.

Rounding out the cast are Miss Marion Egan as Sister Lucy, James Bradley as Father Benton, the assistant to the bishop, and Andy Carrino as Mr. Barton, the publisher. Miss Egan is a school teacher who has taught in far off places like Morocco, Venezuela, and the Hawaiian Islands. Bradley is active in dramatics in high school, and Carrino is a graduate of the University of San Francisco.

Bumper Crops On Tiny Plot

There's no question that home-grown vegetables taste far better than their store-bought counterparts. Nor is there a doubt that Californians are luckier than most in being able to harvest crops through most of the year. Even with limited space, you can usually grow enough to give your friends an occasional treat. A member of the California Assn. of Nurserymen will help you plan a crop to best take advantage of both your climate and space problems.

Starry Carpet

Star Jasmine is a versatile vine—to be used as a climber or as a shrubby and attractive ground cover. If you grow it as a ground cover, keep it down by anchoring with wickets and keep it bushy by heading back the shoots. To fill an area, set Star Jasmine plants about five feet apart in a good soil mixture and keep them well watered.

SALKINDS OF SAUSALITO

Four Hands At Two Pianos Highlight Symphony Concert

By BARBARA ATKISSON

The Salkinds, Milton and Peggy, duo-pianists of considerable note, will be guest artists with the Symphony Guild of Marin Orchestra March 13 at the Catholic High School auditorium in Greenbrae.

They will play Mozart's two-piano Concerto in E Flat Major with the orchestra under the baton of Sandor Salgo. Otherwise, the program will include the orchestra's interpretations of Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Corl Maria Von Weber," Beethoven's "Pastorale Symphony," Berlioz' "Roman Carnival Overture."

Naturally, the Symphony Guild is pleased and proud to be the Salkinds' host and will expect a full house of Salkind fans at the orchestra's second-of-the-season concert; for the brilliant young artists have a devoted following of music-lovers from all over the Bay Area who may be counted on to drive miles and cross bridges, in any weather, to hear and see this attractive pair at work.

AS NICE A young couple as you'd hope to meet, Milton and Peggy Salkind live in Sausalito with their two children (Karen, 7, and Mark, 5) and two pianos. Milton and Peggy are both teachers of their favorite instrument and manage to stay home most of the time in spite of a fairly heavy concert schedule which will, this spring, include The Oakland Symphony, the San Francisco Composers' Forum, Monterey Peninsula College, and appearances in New York and Washington, D.C.

EAST OR WEST, the critics call them "unforgettable." Of a recent concert (Feb. 1) in La Jolla, one of the raves read, "The Salkinds' artistry and technical skill were immediately apparent and their obvious enthusiasm for and devotion to their music were contagious."

When they were guest artists with the San Francisco Symphony, critics on the city papers filled their columns with superlatives; but musicians know them best for having revived one-piano four-hand music and commissioning young composers to write it.

LATELY, the Salkinds have commissioned a work from Seymour Shifrin of the University of California musical faculty. Before Shifrin, Robert Kurka and Andrew Imbrie were commissioned to compose for the Salkinds; and coincidentally, all three composers, in turn, have received the coveted Brandeis University award for composition.

Milton and Peggy's method of raising the necessary funds for this worthy enterprise is ingenious if not unique. To quote the New York Times:

"Milton Salkind and his wife have found a way both to help composers and to extend the literature in which they have the greatest interest, that for four hands at one piano. They give concerts in private homes to raise money to give commissions for duets."

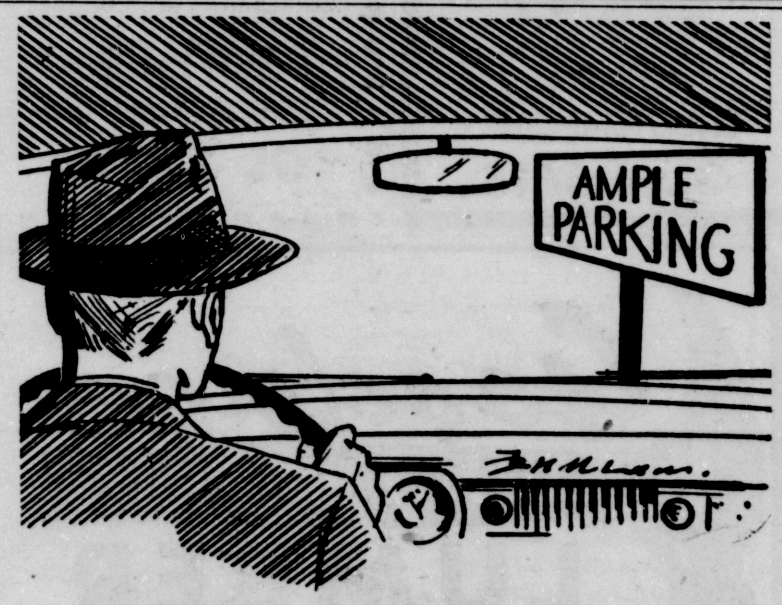

The results have been gratifying for everyone concerned; and subsequent recitals of the commissioned and other four-hand one-piano works have brough forth such admiring observations as this one from R. H. Hagan of the San Francisco Chronicle: "—They played with a mutual zest and lyrical rapport which convinced me that no two pianists should try to play on one keyboard without producing a marriage license first."

The concert on March 13 that will star the Salkinds will be open to the public as well as the Symphony Guild membership. Single tickets will be available to non-members on the evening of the performance at the Catholic High School auditorium. The time is 8:30 p.m.

Wisteria Mad

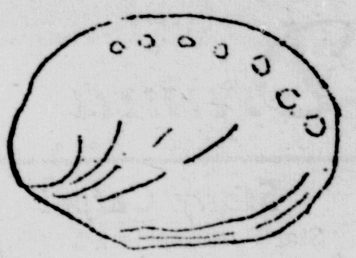

To judge from the examples we've seen, some gardeners must look on their houses simply as props to support a wisteria vine. And lovely as the wisteria is, we think this is going too far. To prevent such an impression, thin and prune wisteria back after the spring bloom. Don't be delicate. Overgrown vines will stand severe shaping and pruning.

ABALONE (Haliotis sp.) — An Abalone clings to the rocks with a powerful muscle which forms the foot. At extreme low tides it may be pried off the rocks and the foot split, pounded, and made into delicious steaks. Abalone shells are conspicuous and handsome, showing beautiful, irridescent colors inside. In the past, tremendous quantities were taken for food, and one sees great mounds of shells along the Monterey coast. Now the open season is limited, and size and number of catch are restricted. Black, red, and green abalones are found, some as much as 9 inches in length. (From Out-of-Doors in Marin, copyrighted by M. F. Austin)

RED-SHAFTED FLICKER — The Red-shafted Flicker, 11 to 13¼ inches long, is quite conspicuously marked, for its back and underparts are heavily barred and spotted with black on light brown and gray. It has a black crescent on its breast, orange-vermillion moustaches and underwing and tail surfaces. In flight the orange color is plainly displayed. In springtime the Flicker drums a long rolling tatoo on some dry limb or board or chimney. It has various loud calls, some sounding like "flicker, flicker, flicker!" A nest is built in a hole excavated in a tree or a house — where 6 to 10 eggs are laid in May. Half of the Flicker's food consists of ants which he gathers by extending his tongue along the ground some 2½ in. beyond the tip of his bill. When the swarming ants cover its sticky surface it is suddenly drawn in for a feast. (From Out-of-Doors in Marin, copyrighted by M. F. Austin)

FOR SMALLER GARDENS — You may have the glory of Southern magnolia without being crowded out of garden and patio. The answer is Magnolia St. Mary's, which never becomes as big, the blossoms are magnificent. (Independent-Journal Photo)

SPEAKING OF SUPERLATIVES

The Grandest, The Gaudiest (We're Talking Of Magnolias)

You have to reach for superlatives to describe the Magnolia family. They are the grandest and the gaudiest. In short, says one member of the California Assn. of Nurserymen, they're magnificent.

And this holds true whether it's the opulent Southern Magnolia or any of several deciduous varieties that bloom so profusely in late winter and spring. Both will stop traffic on the street where you live.

It seems a general habit of Californians to plant the evergreen Southern Magnolia more in Southern California than in the northern part of the state. Similarly, more of the deciduous varieties have found their ways into gardens farther north. Actually, both do well in either area.

THE SOUTHERN Magnolia, as most everyone knows, is a full, glossy green tree of unusual charm. At maturity it will dwarf the small garden, but growth is slow enough to warrant planting it even where space is limited. Its blooms are up to 8 inches across. A new variety — St. Mary Magnolia — is ideal for smaller gardens. Growth is slower, and the tree is smaller at maturity. Moreover, the blooms are unbelievably huge —a foot or more in diameter when fully opened.

Of the deciduous members of the family, the several forms of Saucer Magnolia are by far the widest grown. They are often and mistakenly called tulip trees because the blooms resemble a tulip. These are white with purple shadings. Some, indeed, are more purple than white. These are the gaudy Magnolias — literally smothered with blooms in late winter or early spring.

Among the favorites — and deservedly so — is the smaller Star Magnolia. It is free-blooming with pinwheel-type blooms. A Pink Star Magnolia is also available, as well as a recent introduction, Red Star Magnolia. This one, with deep purple and pink shadings is, as yet, in limited supply. But it's one that will surely win wide approval.

Botanical names of the Magnolias listed above are: Southern Magnolia (Magnolia grandiflora); St. Mary Magnolia (M. g. St. Mary); Saucer Magnolia (M. soulangeana); Star Magnolia (M. stellata).

GARDENER'S CHECKLIST

- A shot of weed killer will eliminate the competition and get your lawn off on the right foot. Never use it it on clover or dichondra, however, since it will eliminate that, too.
- Camellia plants that have become too leggy will bush out after light pruning of terminal branches. Try to time this to take advantage of a few blooms for the house.
- If you're preparing a planting bed, use a good grade steer manure since it is usually weed free — also higher in food value than cow manure.
- Spring's warmer weather will bring new growth to roses, and the combination will bring out the aphis. Keep your spray gun handy.

LITERALLY, A NEW TWIST — It's the plywood which has the twist in this contemporary screen. Vertical cuts are made in plywood sheet and strips are set apart with spacers. This idea will work for outdoor fences, too.

INDOORS OR OUT

Give The Panel A Clever Twist

Here's "screen test" for your home: Could you use a decorative, lightweight screen for a room divider, furniture backdrop, shield for a work area, or to help define certain areas of the house?

If you answered "yes" to at least one of these possibilities, look at this design idea. It's an unusual screen designed by architect Alan Liddle with a three-dimensional pattern which is achieved by inserting spreaders between saw cuts made in a thin sheet of fir plywood.

Liddle's screen uses three sections of ¼-inch fir plywood in a light lumber frame. After two-inch wide strips are cut almost the whole length of the panel, each strip is twisted 90 degrees at mid-point and glued into place against spreader blocks.

THE RESULTING screen has a texture of highlights and shadows. And it's not expensive — the materials cost about $12.

You can do this job best with a portable saber saw, which can be rented for a modest charge at most lumber yards, hardware stores and equipment rental agencies.

A FREE PLAN showing details for several screens like this may be obtained by writing Marin Magazine, c/o Independent-Journal, P.O. Box, 330, San Rafael. Allow three weeks for delivery.

Easy Does It

One good thing about winter is that your lawn needs less attention to mowing. When you do mow, however, the California Association of Nurserymen reminds you to set the cutting blades down and cut the grass shorter than you would in summer. Don't mow right after a rain and in between mowings stay off the grass when wet to minimize the compaction.

Flat Base Needed

Resilient floor tiles should never be laid over a single wood floor. A subflooring of plywood or hardboard is necessary to serve as a base for the tiles.

Honorable Retreat Under Own Power

When an electric hand saw (the kind that uses a circular blade) stalls while you are making a cut, do not release the trigger switch.

While still pressing the switch, back up the saw a little, which will allow the blade to regain its momentum. You can now resume cutting or you can lift up the saw, shut off the motor and stop for a moment.

Releasing the trigger switch while the saw is stalled in the stock may cause damage to the switch, dull the blade and put severe pressure on the motor.

Do-It-Yourself

Indoor Barbecue Fits In Fireplace

Outdoor chefs who would like to pursue their hobby all year instead of just during warm weather when they can operate grills outdoors now can do so if they have fireplaces in their homes.

A new barbecue brazier which can be set up either outdoors or indoors in a fireplace has been introduced by a major manufacturer of such outdoor grills.

The new brazier comes with two sets of legs. One set is of standard length for use outdoors.

Legs of the other set are only three inches long so the grill can be set up in the fireplace. The short set also is handy for use on the beach so the grill can be tended with everyone seated.

Carry Chair Along

Lightweight folding chairs are ideal for carrying to outdoor concerts, ball games, golf matches, picnics or even on hikes. Some aluminum chairs weigh less than four pounds.

Last week, we discussed the characteristics of English cabinetmakers: Hepplewhite, Sheraton and Chippendale - and of the way MAGNAVOX was aware of stylings and tradition.

MAGNAVOX has pioneered fine sound reproduction since 1915, when it was the first to develop the electro-dynamic speaker which is now the voice of every modern sound system.

This week, we'll point out some of the characteristics of French Provincial furniture - and of the MAGNAVOX 24" French Provincial Normandy TV set in hand-rubbed selected cherry. It has the MAGNAVOX Gold Seal Gurantee, a 332 sq. in. picture tube, 3 speakers, tone control, input jack for record players, and swivel easters - so you can turn it to the most convenient viewing position.

French Provincial is of the Louis XV and XVI period, and compares with the "country furniture" of Chippendale and Hepplewhite. Because of the kinship of the American and French Revolution, in 1800, French styles became popular in America - and still are. The French Directoire style was inspired by the art forms of ancient Greece. The English facsimile, after 1800, is called Regency, because at that time, George IV was Regent of the British Isles. MAGNAVOX Windsor TV set, with 24" screen and genuine authentic 18th Century style, comes in hand-rubbed mahogany . . . Hear it at HOY'S new San Rafael showrooms! (To be continued)

Watching TV Won't Hurt Your Eyes

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI)—Did you fall asleep watching television last night? Maybe it wasn't the effect of TV on your eyes after all. Maybe you just needed more sleep.

Nor do you have to stop the children from watching TV to protect their eyes. Just make sure they're watching the set at eye-level, that they occasionally look somewhere else and that they get outdoors for some physical exercise from time to time.

THESE RECOMMENDATIONS for TV viewing were made by Dr. R. J. Beitel Jr., chairman of the Conservation of Vision committee of the Pennsylvania Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology He's also an eye doctor in Allentown.

Dr. Beitel says televiewing is no more harmful to the eyes than reading a book or driving an automobile. In fact, he said TV might help detect a need for glasses among those who didn't have any trouble with their eyes until they started watching video.

But he does offer some simple rules to guarantee ease and comfort for all televiewers.

MAKE SURE THE SET IS in sharp focus, says Dr. Beitel, and if possible sit directly in front of the set, far enough back to see comfortably, avoiding angles.

From time to time, look away from the set and focus your eyes at a distant object. Never watch in total darkness —a soft, indirect light is recommended — and keep the size of the screen in proportion to the size of the room.

History Of Bay Area On 'Bonanza'

The colorful history of San Francisco and the Bay Area, will be examined in "Bonanza," a new local program to be telecast by KRON-TV Sundays from 12:30 to 1 p.m. starting tomorrow.

Each telecast in this 13-week series will be a sampling of the vast treasure chest of visual evidence of the area's exciting growth. Plentiful use will be made of old photographs, motion picture film and artifacts to be found in local libraries and historical societies.

Old photographs will play an important visual part in the series.

The opening episode will deal with "The Boom Years" from 1848 to 1865, when San Francisco suddenly became a brawling boom town following discovery of gold.

"Bonanza" will employ special camera techniques on the enlarged prints to create an illusion of motion.

The photographs used in each telecast will afterwards be mounted in individual displays and circulated among libraries, schools and other public places in the Bay Area.

"Bonanza" will use the services of two "librarians" to guide viewers through the rich visual treasures and explain the aspects of history they represent. Librarians will be Tom Mullahey, KRON-TV's Director of Public Affairs, and Phyllis Skelton, well known performer on local TV.

Weekly TV Log

A SOTHERN SMOOCHER — Hardly a display for the hotel lobby is this smooch scene between Ann Sothern and Don Porter in the Monday offering of "The Ann Sothern Show" on KPIX at 8:30 p.m. Porter, a veteran of Miss Sothern's first television series, "Private Secretary," joins the show in this episode as the new manager of The Bartley House.

'Mr. Sands' Back With Ann Sothern

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ann Sothern is overhauling her television show in mid-season by returning to her first video love, Don Porter—Ann's co-star in the defunct "Private Secretary" series.

The reason? Romance.

"We felt our show needed love interest—and so did the viewers," said Ann from deep in the plush couch of her fancy dressing room.

IN THE OLD DAYS Porter portrayed Peter Sands, Ann's boss and sometime boyfriend. His name's been changed to James Devery, but he's still the beautiful blonde's boss, this time as a hotel manager.

"Dozens of actors were interviewed and tested for the role," Ann said. "We finally chose Don because of the enormous mail we've had asking about him. Besides, we have a sort of chemistry that comes across very well.

"He will be seen on the show for the first time Monday. The entire program builds up to his appearance at the end of the show, and then he has only one line to say. But thereafter Don will have a big part."

ANN AND DON had seen one another only once in the three years since they worked together in "Private Secretary."

"Yet it was amazing how quickly we picked up the threads," Ann smiled. "It was as if we'd never been apart."

Porter's appearance as Ann's new boss displaced little Ernest Truex, who is being promoted to the hotel's board of directors.

"Ernest is a wonderful actor, and he's staying with the show," Ann explained. "But he played the type of man I could dominate. Viewers wanted to see me with a younger man, and one who would dominate me.

"THE DOMINATION BIT is limited to the show. We worked closely together for three years, and after that length of time most performers can't stand the sight of one another. But Don and I have never had a cross word."

"The Ann Sothern Show," which hit the telewaves last October, hasn't gained the high ratings once held by "Private Secretary."

Its new format, and reteaming Don and Ann, should help the program gain viewers from such formidable opposition as "Alcoa Theater" and "Wells Fargo," according to boss-lady Sothern.

Porter isn't the only holdover from "Private Secretary."

Ann Tyrrell, who formerly played a switchboard operator, now portrays the hotel secretary.

TromBONE

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's more to a trombone than the sound it makes, says Meredith Willson. There's the way you pronounce the word.

"I figure I stepped across from amateur to professional the first time I said it with the accent on the second syllable," says the composer of Broadway's hit "The Music Man."

"For some reason people who aren't musicians always accent it the other way."

PERSONALITY HOUSE — Your personality, that is. This split-level house comes with a large undesignated area on entrance level. Inserts (above) show all three levels of ranch style house.

Place For Your Own Personality

By JOHN O. B. WALLACE

Houses should have a personality all their own, too. This happy state of affairs is seldom realized except in the expensive custom-built dwellings, but the stylish three-level ranch-type split shown here is an emphatic exception to this statement.

Designed by a noted American architect and designed X-24 in the "House of The Week" series, it is a "personality house" in the sense it was created to fit a wide variety of contrary needs and tastes.

ITS CHIEF feature is a large entrance-level room — more than 400 square feet in area.

This space can be adapted to many purposes according to the needs, temperament and personality of the owner.

The architect, Rudolph A. Matern, says:

"I wanted to design a home doors and other parts of the in which there is a large area —easily accessible to the outhouse—that could be used or arranged according to the personal requirements of the individual owners.

"THE BASIC LIVING requirements can be designed into a home to satisfy the population in general. But all individuals live differently and have their own special needs.

"The select-your-plan area in House of The Week design X-24 gives each owner the opportunity to build his own special needs into a basic, well-designed home."

Here are complete details of this plan in an easy-to-follow, arear-by-area description:

NEARLY SQUARE in shape, this area includes the 14 by 20 foot front living room and the dining room. The living room has banks of glass on two walls, one of which is formed by sliding glass doors leading to an adjacent porch.

A through, two-way fireplace serves as a separation between the living and dining rooms. The outside extension of this fireplace becomes a barbecue grill on the covered porch at the right.

The dining room opens directly onto this porch through sliding glass doors.

There are four bedrooms and two baths in the sleeping wing which is separated from the living level by eight steps. Both baths are of the "Hollywood" type with built-in vanitories and planters.

THE MASTER BEDROOM, 18 feet 8 inches by 11 feet 6 inches, has its own private bath. There is a cathedral-type window at the front of the master bedroom, with a long planter box outside.

The kitchen, at the rear of the house and adjoining the dining room, has the appearance of being a balconied kitchen because of its connection with the lower, adjoining level.

There are no partitions to detract from this feeling of openness. A rear service entrance is near the foot of the four steps at the back of the kitchen. The kitchen, an ample 15 by 12 feet, has space for a four-chair breakfast table.

LAUNDRY facilities and a lavatory are on the lower level and handily near the kitchen. The heating plant and the utilities are in the basement.

The porch at the right is covered by the extending roof, is enclosed on two sides by brick walls and runs the full depth of the house.

There is a rear terrace off the lower level.

IN THE BEDROOM wing alone there are 12 closets and a five-unit bank of linen closets. A full basement lies under the living area. The garage is under the bedroom wing at the left.

There are large storage closets in both the lower and upper foyers.

The select-your-plan area is 15 feet 3 inches wide and extends the full depth of the house, 27 feet 5 inches. There are stairs from this area to the basement. A lavatory is only a step away. Its possible arrangements are numerous.

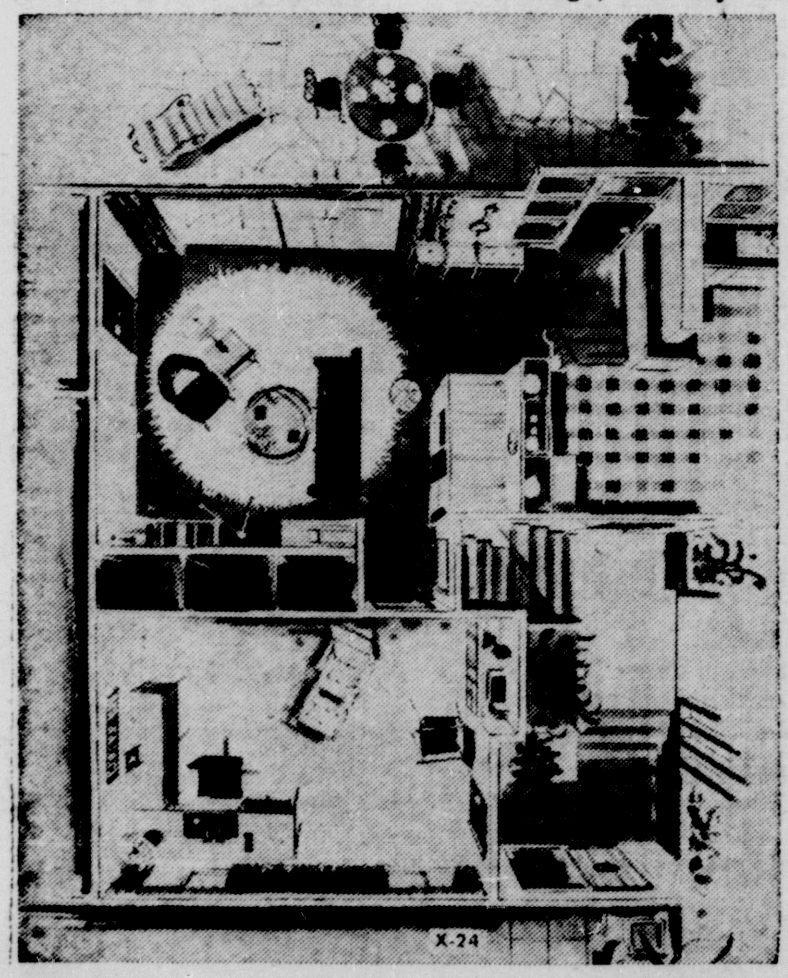

THE FRONT PART could become an office and the rear a family room. Other possibilities include a doctors or professional suite, shop, dark room, maid's room, recreation room, den, hobby room, guest room, a fifth bedroom — or even a rental apartment.

Brick and vertical boards are used in combination on all outside walls. The twin-door front entrance is recessed in masonry and protected overhead by a flat deck.

A pierced masonry wall, planters and an angled trellis add decorative touches. The roof is of ashalt shingles. The chimney is brick with a concrete smoke cap above the flues.

OVERALL dimensions are 65 feet 2 inches by 29 feet 6 inches. A minimum lot of 90 by 100 feet is recommended. There are 1,585 square feet in the living and bedroom levels and 541 square feet in the entrance level.

The garage has 286 square feet. There are eight rooms, including four bedrooms, and 2½ baths.

SKY VIEW — No, the picture is not upside down. You are looking at a cutaway version of the select-your-plan area. At the moment you are, presumably, suspended from a helicopter.

POSSIBILITIES, UNLIMITED — Well, almost unlimited. Be sure to check your local zoning laws before electing to make the area into a rental apartment or office. Otherwise, the bedroom floor's the limit!
